HAPPY 41ST RENEE

WCTU Discusses "Aspiring To Greater Heights"

"Aspiring to Greater Heights," was the theme of the devotional meditation given at the meeting of the Alice Mae Stuart Thief River Falls Women's Christian Temperance union held recently at the home of Mrs. Mons Engelstad. Assisting as hostess was Mrs. Engelstad's daughter, Mrs. Marie Fielty.

Leading the meditation was Mrs. Earle Ripley. She read John 10:17-24 and verses 27-28. She also quoted Charles H. Spurgeon, "We ought not to rest content in the mists of the valley where the summit of Tabor awaits us...Rouse thee, O believer, from thy low condition.. Cast away thy sloth, thy lethargy, thy coldness, or whatever interferes with thy chaste and pure love of Christ. Make Him the source, the center and the circumference of all thy soul's range of delight. Rest no longer satisifed with thy dwarfish attainments. Aspire to a higher, a nobler, a fuller life, upward to heaven, nearer to God."

She also stated, "Our task is urgent, whether we preach a sermon, teach a class, counsel the youth, comfort the brokenhearted or strengthen the weak, the goal must fulfill Christ's great commission. One of the greatest obstacles to overcome is the spirit of lethargy that has fallen across the world." She concluded by saying, "We do not battle in our strength alone God is working with us and with Him, all things are possible."

The article, "Season for Youth Temperance Camp," from the April Union Signal was read by Marie Gustafson, Agnes Longren and Geneva Overum. It was noted that the purpose of the Youth Temperance camp was to unite young people in a program of Christian citizenship and to build for total abstinence for the individual and sobriety for the nation.

Sending local youth from ages 12-20 to the YTC at Paynesville on June 11-17 was discussed. Mrs. Olga Larson reported a balance of $316 in the treasury. This amount, together with proceeds from a bake sale set for the first part of June, will be used to send boys and girls to camp. Mrs. Valborg Hanson, 681-1721, will be in charge of registering those in the area who wish to attend

Also read was a letter from Senator Howard Knutson, regarding the defeat of the bill raising the drinking age to 21, and an article concerning the violent death of a liquor store owner in Greeley, Colo.

The meeting opened with the singing of the hymn, "This is My Father's World." Get-well cards were sent to Mrs. Marie Ystesund and Mrs. Tessie Netteland.

DID YOU KNOW?

America's Liquor Bill

If you had been born at the time of Christ and since your birth had laid down dollar bills one at a time about as fast as you could, 24 hours a day, you would not have laid down as many dollars as Americans spend for alcoholic beverages and because of alcohol in a single year. If you are anything like me, you have a little trouble thinking in billions. This helps me visualize what alcohol is costing the American economy.

Seek Artists And Craftsmen At Itasca Park

Up North Handcrafts is now seeking Minnesota artists and craftspeople who would like to exhibit their works or demonstrate their skills this summer at Brower Inn in Minnesota's Itasca state park.

Browe Inn program of exhibits and demonstrations is now in its fifth year. Begun in 1975 as a joint effort of Up North Handcrafts, an independent, non-profit business working with craftspeople in Minnestoa, and the Minnesota department of natural resources and other sponsoring agencies, the program provides unique exposure for area artists and craftspeople.

The program has three parts. These include the Brower gallery, the craft interpretive program, and a retail shop which sells Minnesota handcrafts.

Brower gallery this year will feature a series of shows of works by regional artists. Painting, handmade furniture, photography, quilts, pottery and other high quality works in all fine art and craft media are being sought. Works will be for sale.

Craft interpretive program will feature craftspeople demonstrating historic, ethnic and traditional crafts. Program is continuing to seek people who have specialized skills that are indigenous to northern Minnesota, but may not be readily recognized as crafts, such as soap making, wagon wheel construction, barrel making, and so forth.

Demonstrations are scheduled from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., Thursday through Sunday from mid-June through Labor Day. Craftspeople receive an honorarium for their appearances. This is an educational program, intended to bring Itasca park visitors into closer touch with the region's craft activities.

Artists and craftspeople who would like to take part in the Brower gallery, interpretive program, or retail shop are invited to apply. Applications are available from Up North Handcrafts, 314 Houston, Crookston, MN 56716. Phone (218) 281-3720. Application deadline is April 20.

Reserve Wheat Release Level Reaches $3.29

Alton Nybladh, chairman Marshall county ASCS committee, announced that the national average market price for wheat in the 3-year reserve program reached the release level of $3.29 per bushel on May 16.

Since the beginning of the reserve program in December 1977, Marshall county farmers have placed about 5½ million bushels of wheat in the reserve.

Grain in the reserve program is under loan to commodity credit corporation. Farmers are paid 25 cents a bushel storage per year in advance for placing their wheat in the reserve. Now that the release level is reach they can repay their loan with interest and refund only the unearned storage.

The release level will be in effect until June 29 when the national average price will be reviewed to determine if the release should be continued or stopped. During the release period producer will continue to earn storage until the day of repayment.

Even though the release level has been reached producers are not required to purchase their grain back. They have the option of waiting for higher markets if they desire.

Nybladh stated that the reserve was designed to hold excess stocks of wheat off the market in a period of over production and to strengthen the price farmers receive for their wheat.

Majority of the wheat in the reserve entered the reserve program when wheat markets averaged about $2.40 per bushel. He concluded by stating that the program has done exactly what it was designed to do.

Prepare yourself for another big jump in the price of energy.

Build with Stran now.

You might as well get ready for it. Energy costs continue to go up. And most forecasters don't see them ever coming back down to earth.

All that stands between you and a small fortune in energy costs is a well-insulated building that holds utility costs to a minimum. A building like Stran builds.

You see, Stran has factory-insulated wall and roof systems, including our famous Stranwall 70 system, that can cut heating and cooling costs in half as compared to other methods.

Which is why some Stran wall and roof building products are specified for constructing refrigerated warehouses with temperatures held at -20 F or more.

So we know how to keep you cool. Or warm, very efficiently.

As long as you're planning a new building, you might as well be prepared for the future. Give us a call. We'll show you why Stran buildings are looking better all the time.

Issue Special Need Permits For Pesticides

Subject to public review and comment, the Minnesota department of agriculture has issued special local need registration permits for the use of specific pesticides to control pests on five agricultural and forestry crops.

Public has until May 30 to file written comments by petition signed by 500 or more citizens of legal voting age and listing the address of each signer. Federal and other state agencies and local government units also are invited to comment.

Pesticides and uses authorized after the regulatory agency determined that the applications are in the best interest of the environment or the health, welfare, and safety of the public, are:

Weedone 170 (EPA 264-222) manufactured by Amchem Products, Inc., Ambler, Penn., for use on forest plantation area as a conifer release;

Vitavax 200 Flowable Fungicide (EPA 400-112) manufactured by Uniroyal Chemical, Division of Uniroyal, Inc., Bethany, Conn., for use on soybean seed to control seed diseases;

Amiben (EPA 264-138) manufactured by Amchem Products, Inc., Ambler, Penn., for use on sunflowers as a tank mix with Treflan for weed control,

Losban 4E (EPA 464-448) manufactured by the Dow Chemical company, agriculture products department, Midland, Mich., for use on sunflowers to control cutworms in sunflowers grown only for planting seed;

Lorsban 15G (EPA 464-523) manufactured by the Dow Chemical company, agriculture products department, Midland, Mich., for use on sugar beets to control cutworms and sugar beet maggots.

Minnesota laws and rules regulating the sale and use of pesticides provide for special local need registrations and the public comment process when a use other than those stipulated on the product label is deemed justified and the potential for unreasonable environmental effect is absent.

Warren Grain Cargill Agent, Jury Believes

With a six-member Marshall county jury finding that Warren Grain & Seed company was an agent for Cargill, Inc., for the purchase and sale of market and seed grain, Judge Robert Peterson ordered a 30-day stay of entry of judgement to allow time for an appeal by the Minneapolis based Cargill grain commission firm.

The suit in Marshall county district court in Warren was brought by a group of 86 area farmers in an attempt to obtain $1.9 million plus interest alledgedly due to them. They had sold grain to Warren Grain & Seed company which later went bankrupt without paying for the grain.

Cargill attorneys at the trial maintained that Cargill's relationship with Warren Grain & Seed was the normal buyer seller relationship. Attorneys for the farmers maintained the defunct seed company was an agent for the larger commission firm. Among those to testify at the trial was Lloyd Hill, former president of the elevator in Warren, who is now living in Arizona.

Still pending are suits by Cargill against the elevator for $3.7 million which Cargill says is owed to that company, and a counter suit by Warren Grain & Seed against Cargill for $22.1 million in claimed actual and punitive damages.

Apply For Disaster Aid By June 4

Persons whose earnings were interrupted because of flooding and severe storms in an 11-county disaster area in northern Minnesota this spring must file disaster unemployment assistance claims by Monday, June 4.

Under federal law, only persons who were unavoidably out of the area and did not hear about the disaster previously will be able to file claims after June 4, Barbara Beerhalter, assistant commissioner, unemployment insurance, Minnesota department of economic security, said.

Claims may be filed at any of the department's job service offices in the 11-county area. The offices are: Moorhead, 810 Fourth avenue S.; Crookston 210 N. Broadway; Thief River Falls, 318 N. Knight avenue; Fergus Falls, 116 E. Lincoln avenue; and Grand Rapids, 310 N.W. Third street.

Payments will be made primarily to self-employed and other workers who are not eligible for regular state unemployment insurance benefits, she said. Self-employed farmers generally are not eligible unless they were unable to work.

Persons applying for aid should bring their Social Security cards and any available evidence of earnings during the past 52 weeks. Income tax records are useful for the self-employed, Beerhalter said.

Those who may be eligible include persons who:

Had been working, or were self-employed, in the disaster area at the time of the disaster and who lost jobs or places to work as a result of the storm damage;

Lived in the disaster area at the time of the disaster and could not get to work;

Could not work because of an injury sustained in the disaster;

Became heads of households and now are in the labor market because the head of the household died in the disaster;

Were to begin work in the disaster area but could not begin work because of the disaster.

Amount of benefits a person will receive will depend upon the wages lost as a result of the disaster. Maximum benefit will be $133 a week for as many as 52 weeks but few will qualify for the maximum, Beerhalter said.

Beerhalter said the special payments come from federal funds and not from the taxes employers pay into the regular state unemployment insurance fund.

Plan MN/DOT Projects On Area Roadways

Among the projects scheduled to be undertaken by the Minnesota department of transportation (MN-DOT) this summer in the Thief River Falls area is the shoulder grading and bituminous surfacing on 20.7 miles of road from Thief River Falls to Goodridge. The project, which was begun last summer, is scheduled to be completed in late fall at an estimated cost of $2,056,000. Traffic is being carried on the road during construction.

On highway 11, new bituminous surfacing and aggregate shoulders will be placed on 20.2 miles of roadway from Indus to Pelland beginning in late August. The $800,000 project will be completed this fall. Also on highway 11 guardrails will be installed at various hazardous locations in Lake of the Woods and Roseau counties. Work on the project will begin this fall with completion expected next summer. Cost of this project is estimated at $100,000. Neither project is expected to affect traffic.

Also planned is the installation of new signals in Thief River Falls on highways 32 and 59 at the intersection of US 59, TH 32 and TH 1; the intersection of 59 and LaBree Ave.; intersection of 59 and Atlantic Ave.; intersection of 32 and 1st St.; and the intersection of 32 and 2nd St. Contracts for the project will be let in October of 1979 with completion expected by the fall of 1980. Cost of the signal installation is estimated at $250,000 and no inconvenience to traffic is expected.

Governor Will Attend UGLRC Bemidji Meet

Upper Great Lakes regional commission (UGLRC) will be considering grants totalling $1,847,057 at its quarterly meeting in Bemidji on June 4. This is the first time that this commission has met outside of Washington.

Governor Al Quie, who serves as a member of the commission, will be welcoming Governors Lee S. Dreyfus of Wisconsin and William G. Milliken of Michigan, and federal co-chairman William R. Bechtel.

"The regional commission is a unique partnership that generates interaction between federal, state, local and private funding," Governor Quie said in announcing the meeting, "and this interaction induces communities and industries to undertake new projects."

Bemidji mayor Doug Peterson will welcome the governors and the federal co-chairman at the Bemidji airport. Lt. Governor Lou Wangberg will accompany Governor Quie as the governor's alternate on the commission. Meeting will take place at the Bemidji Holiday Inn at noon and the three governors will hold a joint press conference immediately after the meeting.

"Oftentimes, local communities are unable to provide the matching funds required to participate in federal economic development projects," Governor Quie said. "The commission was created by Congress to assist the region in returning to the national economic mainstream. To date, the commission has given over $21 million in technical grants and over $42 million in supplemental grants during its ten year existence."

During part of this period, between 1970 and 1976, employment in the Upper Great Lakes region has increased 16.6 per cent, and this rate of job creation surpassed both the three-state area and the U.S. as a whole, Governor Quie added. There were 183,000 more people employed in the region in 1976 than in 1970.

The commission will be considering $883,983 in grant applications from Minnesota; $288,010 in grant applications from Wisconsin; and $675,170 in grant applications from Michigan. The grants will provide funding for 35 projects in northern Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan.

Commission grants will provide funding for project feasibility studies, local water systems, sewer systems and street paving to industrial parks, and to assist communities in promoting and developing tourism, among other projects.

State Climate Program Seeks Public Input

It is an old cliche that, "everybody talks about the weather but nobody does anything about it."

Minnesota is joining a Congressionally mandated national effort to refute that cliche — to do something about the weather — by establishing a state climate program and seeking public input, it was jointly announced by the Minnesota departments of natural resources and agriculture.

Governor Albert H. Quie has taken the initial action required under a federal law enacted last Sept. 17, 1978, for Minnesota to participate in "a comprehensive and coordinated national climate policy and program."

He has named Earl Kuehnast, state climatologist on the staff of the Minnesota department of natural resources, as the state liaison to the national intergovernmental climate program.

Natural resources commissioner Joseph N. Alexander, at the governor's direction, has appointed an eight-member inter-agency technical committee that Kuehnast will chair in order to develop proposals for strengthening Minnesota and national climate services, and to seek federal cost-sharing.

Up to 50 per cent federal cost-sharing with cooperating states is provided in the national intergovernmental climate program.

Public suggestions are invited by the committee, focused on how to improve climate data collection and information services.

Public Law 95-367 pointed out in establishing the national climate policy and program — just before Minnesota entered its "worse winter of the century" — that:

"(1) Weather and climate change affect food production, energy use, land use, water resources and other factors vital to national security and human welfare.

"(2) An ability to anticipate natural and man-induced changes in climate would contribute to the soundness of policy decisions in the public and private sectors.

"(3) Significant improvements in the ability to forecast climate on an intermediate and long-term basis are possible.

"(4) Information regarding climate is not being fully disseminated or used, and federal efforts have given insufficient attention to assessing and applying this information.

"(5) Climate fluctuation and change occur on a global basis, and deficiencies exist in the system for monitoring global climate changes. International cooperation for the purpose of sharing the benefits and costs of a global effort to understand climate is essential.

"(6) The United States lacks a well-defined and coordinated program in climate-related research, monitoring, assessment of effects and information utilization."

Minnesotans may forward suggestions on how climate information services might be expanded and improved in this state for the benefit of its citizens, environment and economy, to any member of the technical committee at their respective agencies. Liaison Kuehnast's office address is: North Hall, University of Minnesota, St. Paul, Minnesota 55108.

Ewertz Attends International Science Fair

Selected by the Northern Minnesota regional science fair committee to attend the international science and engineering fair in San Antonio, Texas this year was Mrs. Lois Ewertz, instructor at Goodridge high school. Ewertz accompanied five students and four other instructors from Northern Minnesota to the event May 7-12.

This year's 30th annual fair was the largest in history with over 1,200 people registered and 458 finalists competing. Participants came from Puerto Rico, Japan, Mexico, Sweden and Canada as well as from the United States. Ewertz's trip was financed by the Blandin Foundation of Grand Rapids.

Highlight of the week's activities, according to the Goodridge teacher, was the General Motors awards banquet for which GM vice president Dr. David Potter served as master of ceremonies. Assisting Potter was Nobel laureat and former head of the atomic energy commission, Dr. Glenn Seaborg, with Baron Stig Ramel, president of the Nobel Foundation, presenting the top awards.

Minnesota science participant, Terrie Carver, a sophomore from Bagley, was named one of 10 recipients of awards presented by the American Veterinary Medical Association. Carver received a $100 savings bond and a plaque for her project entitled "Bactericidal Effect of Bovine Colostral Whey and Antobodies IgG and IgM."

Work Hazardous To Health?

Richard Lesher, president of the chamber of commerce of the United States, wrote a recent column about how the federal bureaucracy has again managed to stifle initiative under the guise of "helping" the individual. Here is part of his column:

Has it ever occurred to you that government seems willing to expose our children to everything—except work? Consider, for example, what recently happened in Fort Worth, Texas, where two teenage businessmen found themselves paralyzed by the protective clutches of Big Brother.

The two young entrepreneurs, Donald Woodward and his younger brother and assistant, Blake, had been busily building their own business selling advertising for the (Ft. Worth) News Tribune. Donald classified himself as an independent advertising account executive. And, like so many of their compatriots, these two Texans were go-getters—talented, ambitious, hard-working, and very successful.

A bit too successful it seemed, for their activities caught the attention of a compliance officer from the Department of Labor stationed in the Fort Worth area. The officer, Joe Noriega, felt that the Woodward brothers' persistent self-initiative meant the News Tribune was acting as an employer in violation of "Child Labor Requirements in Nonagricultural Occupations under the Fair Labor Standards Act."

But after amazing clarity, patience and grace, and with the help of a Webster's Dictionary which somehow triumphed over the Department of Labor booklet, younger Donald seemed to convince older Joe that he really was self-employed. Well, not quite. For apparently Joe believed he was on a mission of mercy, and he was determined to carry out his rescue. Here is a sprinkling of the ensuing conversation as reported by Madeleine Williams, who covered the story for the News Tribune.

JOE: "Now Donald, I am here to protect you . . ."

DON: "Against what?"

JOE: ". . . The government recognizes that certain classifications of employees need protection . . ."

DON: "I'm not an employee. And what do I need protection against?"

JOE: "H.O., what the Department of Labor calls 'hazardous occupation.'"

DON: "There's nothing hazardous about selling advertising unless you make a prospect so mad he throws you out of the office, and I don't."

JOE: "The government protects you as a salesman. It is conceivable you could work all day and not sell an ad and then you wouldn't get any money for your work."

DON: "It is not conceivable, sir."

JOE: "Nevertheless, the government wants to be sure you do not work for nothing . . . as an outside salesman, you are entitled to $4.35 an hour . . ."

DON: "I don't work by the hour."

JOE: "But that's what you are to be paid when you spend your time and don't make any sales."

DON: "Do you think I would accept money for something I didn't do? I wouldn't take it. That's an insult."

JOE: "Now, Donald, that's the law."

But Donald refused to believe that law applied to his own case. And he prevailed . . . sort of. After extensive consultations, Mr. Noriega returned to declare Donald an independent agent. But the government wanted everyone to be aware that both Donald and the citizens on the streets face hazards when the young man drives his car during work hours. And as for brother Blake, he was not to be permitted to work more than three hours a day nor after 7 p.m.

Of course, the attitude of bureaucrats in Fort Worth merely reflects the larger problem nationwide.

Slow Me Down, Lord

Next time you find yourself in such a frenzy of activity that you are sure when going somewhere that you will meet yourself coming back, take a few seconds to offer this prayer suggested by Richard Cardinal Cushing:

Give me, amid the confusion of the day, the calmness of the everlasting hills.

Break the tensions of my nerves and muscles with the soothing music of the singing streams that live in my memory.

Help me to know the magical, restoring power of sleep.

Teach me the art of taking minute vacations—of slowing down to look at a flower, to chat with a friend, to pat a dog, to read a few lines from a good book.

Remind me each day of the fable of the hare and the tortoise, that I may know that the race is not always to the swift—there is more to life than increasing its speed.

Let me look upward into the branches of the towering oak and know that it grew great and strong because it grew slowly and well.

Slow me down, Lord, and inspire me to send my roots deep into the soil of life's enduring values that I may grow towards the stars of my greater destiny.

Friends Who Hide In The Weeds

Manager Bob Shaw of the Minnesota Newspaper association spends a good deal of the first part of each year at the Minnesota legislature, looking after the concerns of Minnesota newspapers and keeping publishers alert to what is taking place in that law-making body. In such a public-oriented role, he is constantly exposed to efforts to restrict individual freedoms and frequently must take a stand against such actions.

As Shaw points out in the following comments published in the "Minnesota Press", official publication of the Minnesota Newspaper association, his work is not self-serving nor restricted merely to newspaper interests. First amendment freedoms are fundamental to the American way of life and deserving of more support than they have been getting. Here is what Shaw writes:

Who speaks up for the First Amendment?

Lots of people do when talk is cheap.

Lawyers talk about it in law school. Teachers talk about it to little kiddies. Unitarian ministers deal with it in Sunday lectures. Editors write about it, often relating it to just about everything connected with the newspaper business.

But when talk is expensive, when speaking up for free speech interferes with other interests, who stands up to be counted?

Not many, if recent legislative history is any guide, in Minnesota.

Two examples can be adduced from the current session of the state Legislature: the well-known "McCutcheon bill," and a bill which would have prevented the showing of obscene movies at outdoor theatres.

The McCutcheon bill was a police-state bill. It would have allowed secret arrest. The obscene movie bill would have made it possible for a county attorney to halt the showing of a movie without seeing it.

When the chips were down, when the arguments were being heard in legislative committees, where were the Friends of the First Amendment? Where were the teachers, the professors, the ministers, the League of Women Voters, Common Cause, the broadcasters, the lawyers, the judges?

Nobody stood up except newspapers. "Of course," skeptics say in this age of skepticism, "you newspapers have a vested interest in the First Amendment. All you want to do is sell more newspapers."

But even if we grant this piece of cynicism, there are some other, deeper questions: Doesn't everybody have a stake in the First Amendment? Does prior restraint on ideas only affect newspapers? Is visible government only important to editors? Is secret arrest only of significance to the press?

Sometimes the place to be is in court. Many newspapers, and certainly the Minnesota Newspaper Association, believe that's an unavoidable part of the job, part of the obligation of being in newspaper journalism.

But they're getting pretty close, too close for comfort. Something is stirring out there, and its name is ignorance getting organized. We have won some of these legislative battles by very narrow margins. If we're going to continue to win on First Amendment questions we're going to have to have some help. We're going to need non-newspaper people to stand up and speak. We don't need friends who are hiding in the weeds, when the chips are down, when the votes are taken.

Interesting Opinions:

"Baseball players and Congressmen have something in common. Both of them fall prey to the old adage, 'What have you done for me lately?' Each spring no matter how many home runs or how many hits you had the previous year, you still have to prove to management that you can do the job."

—Henry Aaron

"Sin has many tools, but a lie is the handle that fits them all."

Glass, Light Used To Send Ph. Messages

Glass and light are being used to transmit telephone conversations and other electronic messages.

In a talk before the Thief River Falls Lion's club, Steve Fohrenkamm, supervisor of installation for Northwestern Bell in Thief River Falls, described field tests now being conducted by Bell telephone laboratories using glass fibers and laser beams to carry telephone messages.

The laser, or light beam, was developed by the laboratories in 1960, but until recently had only limited industrial application. New research and technological breakthroughs have now made message transmission possible. The field tests will determine how to make the laser and glass technology practical for communications.

One of the major breakthroughs which makes the new communications form possible was the development of fine glass threads or fibers, many times smaller than the pair of wires used in today's telecommunications.

Fohrenkamm said the large numbers of messages that can be transmitted at one time on the glass fibers are among the many advantages of the new system. The use of plentiful sand to manufacture glass also means a significant reduction in the amount of other natural resources, principally copper, that are needed for future communications equipment.

Milk Production In April Down

April milk production in Minnesota estimated at over 96.4 million gallons continued to show the impact of sustained herd culling and replacements, reports agriculture commissioner Mark W. Seetin.

Minnesota continues to be the fourth leading milk producing state both for the month and for the first four months of 1979.

The number of dairy cows in production dropped to 833,000 in April. Athough that was 3,000 higher than a year ago, it reflected the reduction by 7,000 milk cows for the month and the cutback by 17,000 milk cows from the 850,000 on the production line last December and January.

Milk production in Minnesota for the first four months of 1979 is estimated at over 375 million gallons, down about 2.3 million gallons from the same period last year.

Adverse weather during April coupled with the higher than normal number of first lactation cows on the Minnesota milk production line held the average output per cow to less than 116 gallons for the month. This was the lowest April average since 1976.

+Nearly $2 million for new and renovated facilities for poultry research on the St. Paul campus.

Bill also includes $5.7 million for conversion of the Minneapolis campus heating plant to coal and to help fund its expansion into the former Northern States Power company plant just upstream from the campus.

Boutiette Is In Directory Of Humanities

Darwin Boutiette, a social science teacher at Lincoln senior high school in Thief River Falls, has been named to the "Directory of Humanities Resource People in Minnesota." He was one of nearly 200 people statewide included in the directory and he is, so far, the only one representing northwestern Minnesota counties north of highway 2.

Purpose of the directory is to provide humanities programming for out-of-school adults through public libraries, other educational institutions and civic and community organizations. Funding for this was provided by the National Endowment for the Humanities, a federal agency.

This directory of humanities resource people in Minnesota represents those teachers, writers, and practitioners who are willing to either assist in planning, participate in programming or assist in grantwriting. Those listed were originally identified and contacted by the Minnesota humanities commission and by participants at the 14 statewide humanities planning meetings.

Boutiette is noted for his work in ancient history, medeival history, political science (international relations), music (pipe organ) and liturgiological interests. His teaching has been on both secondary and university levels and while in Thief River Falls, he has been a part-time faculty member in history at Northland community college.

Cubs Given God And Family Pins

Two Thief River Falls Cub scouts have received the God and Family award for their community, church and family efforts. Special pins from the Boy Scouts of America were presented at recognition programs held during church services.

Jeff Bowen, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Bowen, and Mike Melby, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Melby, are the recipients of the awards. Jeff received his pin at Trinity Lutheran church from Rev. J. M. Hovland while Mike received his award at St. John Lutheran church from Rev. Barrie Henke.

To qualify for the award Cub scouts must complete work in five project areas under the general headings of "God and Me", "God, Me and My Family", "God, Me, My Family and My Friends", "God, Me, My Family and My Community" and "God, Me, My Family and My Future".

The award involves family participation with the youngster in discussing a number of subject areas. The program guide is designed to bring out feelings of the scouts and show them what they can do to better themselves as they grow up with God, family, community and themselves. Cubs of any denomination may participate in the program and are eligible up to 11 years of age.

Among Mike's projects were making an effort to be more forgiving, holding family devotions, helping a friend with homework and doing a good deed for a friend, delivering boxes of food to needy families and discussing the God and Family book with Rev. Henke.

Jeff's projects included eating everything on his plate without complaining for one week, drawing a picture showing feelings toward an animal, planning a family evening when his parents told about their childhoods, collecting pictures showing friendship, finding Bible verses on friendship and writing them in his own words, planning an advent service and speaking to four different families asking them how God and their families affect their lives.

In addition to the pin received by the scouts, their parents receive a charm and lapel pin.

Mental Health Center Given Special Grants

Northwestern mental health center at Crookston received notification from the Minnesota Department of public welfare this week of two one-year grant awards to assist with the development of services for two target populations needing mental health support.

The first grant award will pay the costs of long-distance calls from parents calling the parent information line (218-281-3774) regarding behavioral and-or emotional situations with their children. In addition the grant will expand the program to include telephone coverage one evening a week by mental health professionals expanding the consultation service to those parents who are unable to call during the workday.

This service will be available to the counties served by the Northwestern mental health center and include Kittson, Mahnomen, Marshall, Norman, Pennington, Polk and Red Lake counties.

The second grant award of $8,675 will be directed to the development of the Northwestern apartment living-training program for emotionally handicapped adults. When completed, the project will provide for normal apartment living services as well as a program of training activities for emotionally handicapped adults in their final stages of recovery. This is part of a national demonstration project funded by the department of health, education and welfare and the department of housing and urban development.

This program will assist people to recover their independence in self-care, return to normal employment and prevent unnecessary and costly instutionalization in large programs thereby avoiding isolation from the main stream of family, friends and employment. For more information, contact the Northwestern mental health center at 281-3940.

Will you have peace of mind at thunderstorm time?

Production Credit Association
Farming is everybody's bread & butter

Everyone who's ever planted a crop knows the worry that comes when storm clouds roll in. And everyone who's had good insurance protection knows the peace of mind good coverage can bring.

Farmers who carry crop hail insurance through Production Credit Association have peace of mind plus. They know that when they have a claim their PCA representative will have an interest in seeing that they receive a fair settlement.

PCA members have a choice of policies, standard or deductible. Rates are realistic, based on probability of hail in your area.

Take away risk, worry and tension with crop hail insurance available from PCA. Then you can enjoy summer weather and have peace of mind at thunderstorm time.

Vietnam Vets Honored During Special Week

Congress has passed a resolution, which the President has signed into law, establishing May 28-June 3 of this year as "Vietnam Veterans' Week".

Vietnam era veterans are the nine million vets who represent almost one-third of the over 30 million veterans in the United States today. They are the three million veterans who set foot on Southeast Asian soil. They are the over 500,000 who today receive VA compensation from disabilities incurred during the Vietnam era. And, they are the ones who saw 57,000 of their comrades die, reports the Minnesota department of economic security.

Ability to work with fellow employees was a problem for 21.5 per cent, making plans for the future frustrated 57.9 per cent; coping with alcohol or drug problems, 29.9 per cent; and severe depression had been experienced by 56.5 per cent.

"We need to provide the means to help them release these feelings — to share them. While they comprise 29 per cent of the nation's veteran population, they comprised about 40 per cent of our VA hospital admission for psychological care last year," the department release notes.

The other key problem facing some Vietnam era veterans is employment. For the average Vietnam era veteran, who is about 32 years old now, the picture is good. For veterans age 30-34, the February unemployment rate was 2.9 per cent. However, for our younger veterans of that war, age 25-29, the rate is 8.6 per cent for veterans, compared to 5.1 per cent for nonveterans in the same age range.

The President last year ordered a complete review of federal services for Vietnam era veterans, and initiated the following steps to improve services:

A White House veterans federal coordinating committee has been established to monitor and target federal resources for Vietnam era veterans and to develop special outreach programs in several major cities with large concentrations of unemployed and disadvantaged veterans;

—Improvements to revise use of veterans readjustment appointment authority for disabled veterans;

Continuation of the help through industry retraining and employment programs (HIRE II) with additional funds; and —Special programming for incarcerated veterans.

Further, funding for psychological readjustment — pending legislative authority for the program — has been included in the President's 1980 budget to Congress.

All Minnesotans over 70 are eligible for the program and may be nominated by an interested group or individual.

Entry information and nomination forms are available through the Minnesota Board on Aging, Metro Square Building, St. Paul 55101, phone (612) 296-2770; the Minnesota State Fair, St. Paul 55108, phone (612) 645-2781; or Minnesota county fairs (names and addresses available from the state fair). Seek Honorary Members For Sheriff Ass'n.

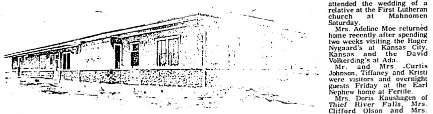
Pennington county sheriff Charles Richards announced today that the Minnesota state sheriffs' association will conduct a membership campaign in counties of the state in the very near future. Broad purpose of this campaign is to increase awareness of citizens of the law enforcement services available to them from the sheriff's department and to build knowledge of the law in young people.

The program is also expected to generate funds for the association which will be used to provide training programs for sheriffs and deputy sheriffs that would not otherwise be available to them; so that they might better protect the lives and property of the people of their county. The funds will also be used to inform students of their rights, duties and responsibilities as members of a free society and to encourage them to think critically and rationally about societal problems and conflicts.

The campaign will take the form of a letter from the sheriff inviting citizens in this county to become honorary members of the state association. Citizens who join the association will receive membership credentials consisting of a membership card, two bumper stickers and a decal. Honorary members will also receive copies of the North Star Sheriff, published four times a year, to keep them informed of activities of the association in its efforts to improve law enforcement services and in the fight against crime.

BUDDY POPPY SALES for the Veterans of Foreign Wars and auxiliary in Thief River Falls were helped considerably by the efforts of the people pictured above. Kathy Aune, president of the auxiliary unit, sold more than 300 poppies to earn a silver pin from the Minnesota department of the VFW. Each of the men sold 500 or more poppies to earn gold pins with Joe Rinowski, second from right in the front row, selling 1,050 poppies to lead all local salesmen for the third consecutive year. Left to right in the photo are, seated, Mrs. Aune, Selmer Dimmen, Rinowski and Frank Blazek; standing, Ken Dunrud, Earl Yonke and Oreal Halland.



CONTRIBUTIONS are still being sought for the Pennington county historical society's "Move the Depot Fund." The society is seeking support to move the old Burlington Northern depot from its present location on site C of the city's HUD plan to the Pioneer Village where it will be used to house large items such as farm machinery. Estimated cost to move the depot is $12,000 and this does not include preparing a foundation at the new site. A contribution of $5,000 was received by the historical society from the city of Thief River Falls and the Pennington county board released the society's regular operating budget of $3,500 plus an additional $1,500 to help cover the moving expense. This means the society must raise $2,000 and replenish its operating budget. Persons wishing to make contributions may send them to Pennington County Historical Soceity at P.O. Box 127, Thief River Falls, MN 56701.

Because of School District 564 budget cuts, Wednesday's 8-3 opening round Region 8AA Sub Region 4 loss to Crookston marked the end of 28-year-old Lincoln high school baseball program. There are some optimists who are hoping the program will be reinstated, but as of right now the Prowlers finished playing baseball with a 333-144-1 overall won-lost record.

This year's 4-10 won-lost mark was the worst in the history of the sport at the school. A 5-7 record in 1970 was the only other losing season the Prowlers experienced since they first fielded a team in 1952.

Thief River Falls won 15 District 31 baseball titles and three Region 8 crowns under one-class Minnesota State High School League compeition. A Class AA school since 1975, Thief River Falls claimed a Region 8AA Sub Region 4 crown in 1977.

Those three state tournament trips were made in 1955, 1959 and 1963.

In 1955 coach Ralph Skay's Prowlers enjoyed a banner 16-2 season that included a consolation championship in the state tournament at Rochester where they rebounded from a 9-4 first round loss to Little Falls to beat Mankato 3-2 and International Falls 11-3.

A 17-3-1 record in 1959 included state tournament losses in Minneapolis to New Ulm 7-2 and Little Falls 3-1.

An unusual forfeit provided Thief River Falls with a Region 8 title in 1963. Bemidji beat Thief River Falls 5-0 in the Region 8 finals that spring, but the Lumberjacks were disqualified from state *tournament play when it was discovered that pit*cher Bill Barthelemy pitched 15 instead of the permissible 14 innings under MSHSL time limit rules. The Prowlers were declared the Region 8 champions and they played in the state tournament at St. Paul's Midway Stadium where they lost to Hibbing 5-4 and Anoka 11-3.

Those state tournament appearances earned all-state recognition for first baseman Glenn Carlson in 1955 and for rightfielder Gene Weckwerth in 1959.

Other top-notch Thief River Falls ball clubs included a 1957 squad whose 18-5 record featured the most wins ever by the Prowlers. However, they lost to Baudette 4-3 in the Region 8 finals that spring.

The 1966 outfit had a 16-2 record to tie the 1955 team for the fewest losses by a Thief River Falls squad but one of the losses was a 4-2 setback at the hands of Roseau in the first round of the Region 8 tournament.

Skay, who coached the Prowlers 22 years, called his 1973 team "one of his best ever," but a 14-4 record included three puzzling losses to a Crookston squad that eliminated the Prowlers 2-1 in the District 31 finals.

TRF, Jury Class AA Challengers

In our estimation, Thief River Falls and Bill Jury can be top contenders in this week's 1979 Minnesota Class AA state high school tennis tournament. That's not a championship prediction. But we expect the Prowlers to do well in the team portion of the event and Jury should be equally effective in the individual singles competition.

Still only a junior, Jury must rank among the top athletes at Lincoln high school in recent memory. An all-conference defensive back in football, an all-section goalie in hockey and a spot among the top five ranked tennis players in Minnesota qualifies him as a premiere athlete, I would think.

But a state title could still be a dream for Jury who must contend with the likes of defending Class AA champion Brian Johnson of Edina East and highly regarded challengers like Kevin Easterly of Wayzata, Chris Combes of Edina West and Dave Schultz of Minneapolis Roosevelt.

Easterly is probably Johnson's top threat. A No. 2-ranked junior player in Michigan, he moved to Rochester before transferring to Wayzata this year. The 17-year-old senior split a pair of matches against Johnson earlier this spring, with a 7-6, 6-4 victory by Johnson in the finals of the Metro invitational tournament spoiling an otherwise perfect record by Easterly who had beaten the number one-seeded Combes in that same tournament. Easterly edged Schultz 9-8 in a tie-breaker in the finals of the Stillwater invitational and he rates Schultz as the best he's faced.

That's where Jury may falter — he hasn't had the opportunity to better himself against top-notch competition like those metropolitan area players.

LHS Tennis Team, Individuals Will Play In State Tournament

Region 8AA champion Thief River Falls will face Region 7AA winner Virginia Tuesday at 3 p.m. at Bemidji State University in a first round match of the 1979 Minnesota Class AA state high school tennis tournament.

The Prowlers won the Region 8AA title last Tuesday with a convincing 4-1 victory over St. Cloud Tech. The Blue Devils edged Hibbing 3-2 in the Region 7AA finals Wednesday. The two teams saw each other twice this year when they shared second place in an eight-team tournament at Hibbing April 21 and again May 5 when Virginia won an eight-team tournament at St. Cloud where the Prowlers were third.

"We think our kids are playing good tennis right now," pointed out Thief River Falls coach Whitey Olson. "It should be a good match Tuesday. It should be a lot of fun to watch — if I can stand to watch it."

In addition to the team play, four Prowlers will be involved in the individual portion of the state tournament. Juniors Bill Jury and Mitch Rustad in singles, along with senior Bill Michalek and junior Tom Bjorkman in doubles, qualified for the Class AA state meet with championship or runner-up finishes in Wednesday's Region 8AA individual tournament.

Jury swept through the singles competition, meeting Rustad in the finals where he prevailed 7-6, 6-1 in what Olson called "a very good match."

Michalek and Bjorkman played two "marvelous" matches, said Olson, in outlasting Fergus Falls' Craig Woolson and Phil Hatchner 6-4, 4-6, 6-4 and Moorhead's John Haukebo and Doug Mithun 6-4, 3-6, 7-6 on a 5-3 tie-breaker to reach the finals in doubles. "Physically and mentally drained," according to Olson, Michalek and Bjorkman did not challenge freshman Casey Merickel and junior Tony Tillemans of St. Cloud Apollo in the championship match as the Eagles top two singles players combined for a 6-1, 6-0 victory.

Junior Bill Holmes at No. 3 singles, along with junior Mark Collins and sophomore Mark Ludin at No. 2 doubles, will round out Thief River Falls' state tournament team.

Semifinals and finals of the Class AA team competition, along with all the singles and doubles matches in the individual portion of the tournament, will be played at the University of Minnesota courts in Minneapolis. The individual matches will be played Thursday and Friday. The teams play Saturday.

Bob Fitzgerald State Meet Qualifier . . .

Detroit Lakes Golfers Claim Region 8AA Title

Detroit Lakes high school golfers extended their perfect 1979 season into tournament play Wednesday when the Lakers won the Region 8AA meet by a six-shot margin over Thief River Falls on the Headwaters golf course in Park Rapids.

It was the eighth win in as many starts this spring for the Lakers who will compete as a team in the 1979 Minnesota Class AA state golf meet Wednesday and Thursday on the Majestic Oaks golf course in Blaine.

Among the individual state meet qualifiers was Thief River Falls' Bob Fitzgerald, a junior, who shot a 77.

Detroit Lakes finished with a three-man 228, followed by Thief River Falls at 234, Brainerd and Fergus Falls 237, St. Cloud Tech 238, Alexandria and Little Falls 240, Melrose 242, Park Rapids 245, Bemidji 246, St. Cloud Apollo 247, Crookston and Park Rapids 251, East Grand Forks 254 and Sauk Rapids 256.

Mark Thorson of Detroit Lakes was meet medalist with a 73, followed by Bob Hyslop of Fergus Falls with a 74, Steve Stoxen of Brainerd and Jay Wenner of St. Cloud Tech with 76 and Fitzgerald. Those five picked off the available Region 8AA individual state tournament positions.

Just missing a state meet trip was Thief River Falls' Dave Geatz with a 78 and teammate Jeff Imgrund with a 79. Other scores for the Prowlers included Wade Hoppe with an 82, Charlie Boyer 84 and Tim Imgrund 86.

Fitzgerald, who struggled earlier this spring, "Came around at the end of the year," according to Thief River Falls coach Jack Boyer. Two days earlier Fitzgerald was meet medalist in the combination Northwest Athletic Conference and Thief River Falls invitational meet when he beat Hoppe and Crookston's Todd Sipe in playoff action after all three shot 76 during the regulation rounds.

Charlie Boyer was the only senior on this year's Thief River Falls squad, making an immediate optimist out of his father, the coach, who said, "It should make us tough next year."

Detroit Lakes' state tournament squad includes Thorson, Lincoln McArthur, Mike Norby, Jeff Anderson, Mark Morberg and Bob Landry.

LINCOLN high school junior Bob Fitzgerald shot a 77 Wednesday in the Region 8AA golf meet at Park Rapids to earn a berth in the 1979 Minnesota Class AA state golf meet, scheduled to be held Wednesday and Thursday at Blaine.

Normandale Golfers Win College Titles

Normandale's consistency earned the Lions the 1979 Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA) state and national junior college athletic association (NJCAA) Region 13 golf titles Tuesday and Wednesday on the Silver Springs course in Monticello.

A first day 308 was complemented by a second day 311 by the winners for a 619 fourman total over the 36-hole course. North Hennepin and Rochester were both at 647 to share second place in the combination MJCAA and Region 13 meets.

Northland community college, lacking Normandale's consistency, was among the leaders with a 328 Tuesday but faltered to a 351 Wednesday for an eighth place 679 in the 17-team event.

"We could have made fourth place with another 328 the second day," reported Northland coach Al Adams. "But it was a tough course."

Trailing Normandale, North Hennepin and Rochester were Inver Hills 659, Fergus Falls and Wisconsin Gateway Tech-Milwaukee 663, Madison-Wisconsin 670, Mesabi and Northland 679, Waseca 683, Lakewood and Rainy River 687, Hibbing 698, Austin 709, Western Wisconsin Tech-LaCrosse 733, Brainerd 743 and Golden Valley Lutheran who withdrew.

Minnesota schools were eligible for the MJCAA title, with both Minnesota and Wisconsin schools competing for the Region 13 crown. Minnesota scores counted for both meets.

Chuck McCurchie of Normandale was meet medalist with a 150 in the par 144 competition as he toured with rounds of 76-74. Teammate Craig Hulbert was two strokes behind with a 152 on rounds of 75-77.

Northland scores included Greg Johnson who had rounds of 79-81 for a 160, Jon Ballingrud 82-84 for a 166, Dave Hanson 79-91 for a 170 and Scott Blankenfeld 88-95 for a 183.

Bemidji Wins Baseball Title

Developed during the regular season, Bemidji's flair for the dramatics shown again Thursday when the Lumberjacks managed to defend their Region 8AA Sub Region 4 high school baseball title with a three-run rally in the bottom of the seventh inning that netted a 4-3 win over Crookston on the Thief River Falls fairgrounds diamond.

The come-from-behind format was hardly new for the Lumberjacks who waited until the seventh inning to claim six of their ten wins this spring. "They know how to come back," noted Bemidji coach Des Sagedahl whose team had a first round bye while Crookston used its own seventh inning magic to pull out an 8-3 victory over host Thief River Falls in Wednesday's tournament opener.

A classic championship game pitching duel pitting hard-throwing Bemidji right-hander John Noga against curve-balling Crookston left-hander Brent Stahlecker never materialized. Neither pitcher was sharp, a fact underlined by 17 walks. But Noga, after struggling at the start, pitched his best ball late in the game while Stahlecker, who worked the final three innings in Wednesday's game, faded in the stretch.

"Stahlecker got tired at the end," mentioned Sagedahl. "As he weakened, they finally got to him."

"We let Noga off the hook early," admitted Crookston coach Jim Simon. "He wasn't pitching well early."

Bemidji, kept off the scoreboard until the fifth, trailed 3-1 going into the bottom of the seventh. But the meat of the Lumberjacks' batting order — Roger Degerman, Noga, Mark Dillon and Bob Orgon — all managed to get on base. Degerman, with a special fondness for Stahlecker, earned his fourth walk of the game and the 12th consecutive free pass off the Crookston ace over the past two years; Noga was awarded first base when third base umpire Brad Westrum ruled a Stahlecker pitch hit him in the foot; and Dillon loaded the bases with a bunt single. Crookston's only error of the game was a costly one as shortstop Dan Royal misplayed Orgon's ball for two runs and a 3-3 game. Pinch-hitter Mike Buckanaga drew an intentional walk to load the bases again and Mark Schmitt plated the winning run with a sacrifice fly to center field.

Crookston grabbed a 2-0 lead in the second on a bases-loaded walk issued to Mark Perreault and a perfect suicide squeeze bunt by Jeff Laniel. But in the process the Pirates also stranded five runners in the first two innings.

Bemidji scored in the fifth on a Degerman walk and back-to-back two-out singles by Dillon and Orgon, the latter dropping a ball in front of centerfielder Brent Weiss that looked catchable.

Crookston looked like a winner in the top of the seventh when the Pirates' Bunt Brigade made it 3-1. Jeff Laniel walked to start it, going to second and then to third on fine sacrifice bunts by Weiss and Royal. He scored when Bemidji committed two errors on a ball hit to shortstop Cal Puttbrese and thrown away by first baseman Jeff Beaulieu.

Crookston ended the year 8-8. Bemidji will take a 10-3-1 record into the 1979 Region 8AA tournaent, scheduled to be played at Little Falls Tuesday and Wednesday.

THIEF RIVER FALLS pitcher Scott Sabo was upended as he tried to cover home plate on a Crookston suicide squeeze bunt in the seventh inning of Wednesday's Region 8AA Sub Region 4 high school baseball game played in Thief River Falls. The Pirates' Brent Weiss managed to slide under Sabo for the run after the bunt by Dan Royal.

Pirates Rally In Seventh To Beat Mistake-Prone Prowlers

It was not a good way to end the Lincoln high school baseball program. In the final inning of the final game of the final season of the budget-cut sport, the Prowlers committed three errors, gave up six runs and lost an 8-3 first round Region 8AA Sub Region 4 tournament game to Crookston Wednesday on the Thief River Falls fairgrounds diamond.

Thief River Falls carried a 3-2 edge into the seventh and appeared headed for a championship game appearance against top-seeded Bemidji when lead-off batter Mark Perreault became Pitcher Scott Sabo's 13th strike-out victim. But a full-count walk issued to Jeff Laniel was the break the Pirates were looking for, and coach Jim Simon made the most of the opportunity by forcing the issue — bunting three times to put pressure on the Thief River Falls defense to make the plays. They didn't.

The first bunt — by Brent Weiss — was catastrophic for the Prowlers when third baseman Dave Odegaard turned the sacrifice into a run-scoring three-base throwing error. A suicide squeeze bunt by Dan Royal scored Weiss with the go-ahead run and put himself on first. He stole second and was joined on the base path by Rick Schmitz who walked on five pitches. Keith Prosser singled to left field to make it 5-3 before the Pirates went back to the bunt; again with great results. Sabo fielded John Panzer's tap to the mound but overthrew third on the fielder's choice play to score Schmitz. Prosser scored on the same play when the return throw from down the left field line went through catcher Scott Langlie, playing in place of Jim Nyland who missed the game because of fluid on the knee. Brent Stahlecker singled home the final run.

"We threw it away," admitted disappointed Thief River Falls coach Charlie Cornell. "We didn't play well in the field, and Crookston made the plays when they had to."

Winning coach Jim Simon didn't hesitate going to the bunt in the seventh. "We had to move the runners along," he explained. "We've got about four or five kids I consider excellent high school bunters."

Crookston scored the game's first run in the top of the fourth inning when Royal wound up at second base on an Odegaard throwing error, went to third on a wild pitch and crossed the plate when Stahlecker slammed a base hit off Odegaard's glove at third.

Thief River Falls, after failing to capitilize on earlier scoring opportunities, came up with three runs in the bottom of the fourth when Sabo and Murray Dicken drew back-to-back walks and moved up on a perfect sacrifice bunt by Odegaard. Paul Drees was given an intentional walk to load the bases, but Mark Huot crossed the strategy by slapping Brian Bachmeier's first pitch into right-center field for a two-run single. A sacrifice fly by Langlie plated Drees.

Crookston pulled within 3-2 in the sixth as Sabo hit Prosser who stole second, went to third when shortstop Jeff Ulrich failed to come up with a ground ball hit by Stahlecker and scored as Bachmeier put a single inside the right field line.

Stahlecker, the Pirates' top pitcher, was the winner, but in relief of Bachmeier, a surprise starter in a move to free Stahlecker for a possible title game bout with Bemidji.

TRYING TO duck underneath the tag of Crookston third baseman Keith Prosser didn't help Thief River Falls base runner Jeff Kosel who was caught in a rundown between third and home when teammate Jeff Ulrich failed to get his bat on the ball on an attempted third inning suicide squeeze bunt during Wednesday's Region 8AA Sub Region 4 high school baseball game played here. The Pirates eliminated the Prowlers 8-3 with a seventh inning rally.

Coke Wins Fast Pitch Opener

A first inning two-run home run by Gordie Peterson sparked Coca-Cola to a 5-1 victory over Schmidts Wednesday in the 1979 Thief River Falls fast pitch softball league season opener.

Coca-Cola opened up a 4-0 cushion in the fourth inning when Tom Goddard reached base on an error, Robbie Almquist came up with an RBI double and scored himself on a ground-out.

It became 5-0 before Schmidts finally scored in the bottom of the fifth as Mark Anderson produced his second base hit of the night and scored on Steve Haats' double to center.

North Star Transport broke open a 5-4 game with a five run sixth inning Thursday to put away Melvies 10-4.

Melvies tied it 3-3 in the third when Tom Shetler doubled and Rick Kofstad was hit by a pitch to set the stage for Del Ray Beito who sent a 2-2 pitch over the left field fence.

North Star Transport went ahead 5-3 in the fourth; Melvies pulled within 5-4 in the fifth; and North Star Transport finally opened it up in the sixth by combining two hits with two Melvies errors.

DNR Forestry Director Hands In Resignation

Commissioner of Natural Resources Joseph N. Alexander has announced the resignation of Rodney Sando, DNR forestry director, effective June 30.

Alexander expressed "deep feelings of regret that Rod was unable to resolve state forest management problems to the satisfaction of a large segment of Minnesota forest users.

"I want to emphasize that I have the highest personal admiration and respect for Rod's knowledge, talents, and contributions to modern forest management. These contributions will serve us well for many years to come."

Alexander said Sando's resignation "followed a long and thorough discussion of the state's forest management problems and the public relations difficulties associated with them. We were mutually agreed that his resignation was the most satisfactory recourse toward resolving these problems.

"A situation had developed which resulted in polarization of wood producers, environmentalists and others concerned with Minnesota's forest resources."

He said one of the worst and most frustrating difficulties confronting Sando was the loss of large acreages of softwood timber resulting from the elimination of logging throughout the boundary waters canoe area.

Alexander said he will take immediate steps to appoint a broadly representative selection panel to survey potential candidates for the forestry director position.

"The objective of this panel will be to identify for me the best qualified professional candidate possible for this critically important position," he said.

A New Brook Trout Record On DNR List

Earlier this year, the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources removed a 9-pound brook trout from its list of record fishes because of a lack of verification. It was replaced by the second fish, listed at 5-pounds, 7-ounces.

Almost immediately two new claimants to the brook trout title came forward to report fish caught in previous years, said fisheries supervisor Jerry Kuehn.

"These were not reported before because they were not even close to the listed record," he said, "but they were officially weighed and photographed when caught.

"Oddly enough, although they were caught ten years apart, both fish were taken in Pine Mountain lake, Cook county; weighed at the Midway Texaco station in Grand Marais; and were reported in the Grand Marais and Duluth newspapers."

One of the fish weighed 6-pounds, 1-ounce and was caught by Yvonne Sabyan of Duluth in June, 1977. She won several prizes for the biggest brook trout of that year.

Wes Smith, Grand Marais, caught a brook trout on May 20, 1967 that weighed 6-pounds, 2-ounces. It was entered in the 1967 Sports Afield contest and appears in the May 1968 issue as the winner for that year. Although the location was listed as Lost lake in Sports Afield, said Kuehn, it has since been verified to be Pine Mountain lake.

Both of these fish are well documented and are now listed with the DNR.

"Future claimants are reminded to get their fish weighed and witnessed on a certified scale," he said, "and to have the fish identified by qualified DNR personnel in fisheries or enforcement, just to be sure.

"Mr. Smith's brook trout now stands as the official state record," said Kuehn.

The U.S. Department of Labor was created by a 1913 act of Congress as a cabinet-level agency "to foster, promote and develop the welfare of the wage earners of the United States, to improve their working conditions, and to advance their opportunities for profitable employment."

STRETCHING FOR the bag, Thief River Falls base runner Kelly Gutterud arrived before the ball did and was safe on this fifth inning pick-off try by Crookston pitcher Brent Stahlecker in Wednesday's Region 8AA Sub Region 4 high school baseball game played in Thief River Falls. Crookston first baseman Keith Prosser waited for the ball and umpire Herb Hasz kept his eye on the play. The Pirates beat the Prowlers 8-3.

Jacks & Jills Take 1979 Sub Region Track Crowns

A fairy tale finish in the 1979 Region 8AA Sub Region 4 track meet Wednesday featured a winning Jack and Jill combination as the Bemidji boys (Lumberjacks) and Bemidji girls (Lumberjills) came away with easy victories on the Cushman Field track in Grand Forks.

Bemidji boys were winners with 87 points, followed by East Grand Forks with 54, Crookston 18 and Thief River Falls 12. Bemidji girls were winners with 58½ points, followed by East Grand Forks with 38, Thief River Falls 37 and Crookston 23½. The Lumberjacks successfully defended their Sub Region 4 crown won in 1978 while the Lumberjills snapped a three-year winning streak by the Thief River Falls girls.

Fifteen Lincoln high school athletes qualified for spots in the 1979 Region 8AA track meet, held at Brainerd Saturday for both boys and girls. Top four individuals in each event, along with the top two relay teams, earned region positions.

Nine Lincoln girls advancing to Region 8AA included Connie Hedlund, Julie Easton, Stacy Ehrenstrom, Karen Kloety, Brenda Lund, Patty Blackstad, Carla Nelson, Lori Swanson and Roz Berg.

Thief River Falls came up with four wins in the girls competition as Easton ran the two-mile in a meet record 12:27.9; Hedlund ran the 100-yard hurdles in 17.6; Ehrenstrom tossed the discus 93-5½; and Lund, Blackstad, Nelson and Hedlund ran the 440-yard relay in 53.7.

"I was surprised we got as many firsts as we did," admitted Thief River Falls girls coach Tom Schafer. "The only thing we were missing out on was depth, and that's where Bemidji ran away with it."

Six Lincoln boys moving on to Region 8AA included Jeff Oseid, Mark Larson, Brian Kjos, Bruce Johnson, Tom Brosseau and Jim Thompson.

Oseid qualified for three Region 8AA events, highlighted by a fine 19-11¾ second place effort in the long jump. He was fourth in both the high jump and 120-yard high hurdles.

Lund and Larson both came up with Lincoln school records. Lund went 15-10½ for a fourth in the girls long jump while Larson ran a 9:54.9 for a close second in the boys two-mile where Bemidji's Brian Kraft edged him by a mere two-tenths of a second.

Top Golfers Compete In State Masters

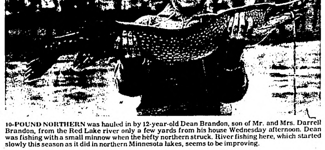
Minnesota's most prestigious and competitive golf tournament, the Minnesota Masters at Minneapolis, will again draw the state's top golfers for three days of stroke play at the Minneapolis Golf Club, June 8-10.

Defending champion and host pro Joel Goldstrand says the course is in fine shape and he expects tough competition from the state's premier professional and amateur golfers.

The 1979 tournament will be the fifth annual event and tournament planners are anticipating another good turn-out of spectators. The public is admitted to the event free of charge. First round action begins at 10:15 a.m., Fri., June 8. Tee times on Saturday start at 1:15 p.m. The final round begins at 10:45 a.m. on Sun., June 10.

Tournament participants are the top finishers from major state professional and amateur golf events during the previous year. The tournament rewards those players who have performed well in state competition.

In the past masters division of the event, golfers who won major state titles 25 years ago or more compete for prize money and merchandise. Defending champion Bill Saryan will be back attempting to capture the 1979 past masters title.



10-POUND NORTHERN was hauled in by 12-year-old Dean Brandon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Darrell Brandon, from the Red Lake river only a few yards from his house Wednesday afternoon. Dean was fishing with a small minnow when the hefty northern struck. River fishing here, which started slowly this season as it did in northern Minnesota lakes, seems to be improving.

Safe Boating Tips Issued By Coast Guard

It's time for boaters to start preparing for the 1979 boating season, Rear Admiral Bernie Thompson, Chief of the U.S. Coast Guard's boating safety office suggests.

Thompson, a 31-year veteran of the Coast Guard and a recreational boater since his youth, gave this advice recently when he was asked, "How can boaters enjoy a safe boating season?"

"Make preparations for the boating season now," Thompson said. "Examine your craft, your boating equipment and yourself. Start getting them all in shape."

Expanding on his answer, the admiral offered these additional safety hints to boaters:

Make needed repairs on your boat now before they become major problems during the boating season. Inspect your boat's fuel and electrical systems and ventilation ducts.

Examine your equipment. Be sure your boat has all of the safety equipment required by the Coast Guard. This includes personal floatation devices, fire extinguishers and flame arrestors on your boat's engine.

Examine youself. Are you totally familiar with all aspects of small boat seamanship? Do you know what to do in an emergency?

Once the boating season begins, Thompson says its a good idea to keep the following tips in mind:

+Know and obey the rules of the road.

+Carry a compass, particularly when boating on a large body of water.

+Be courteous to other boaters.

+Keep a good lookout for other boaters, swimmers, divers and approaching bad weather.

+Fuel vapors are explosive. When fueling, extinguish all galley fires, pilot lights and smokes. Keep the filling nozzle in contact with the tank to prevent sparks. Fill portable tanks out of the boat. Do not use gasoline stoves or heaters on board.

+Keep passengers in the cockpit area of your boat. Riding on the bow or gunwale leads to falls overboard.

+Make sure that children and non-swimmers always wear personal floatation devices.

+If you capsize and your boat continues to float, stay with it. It will support you while you are waiting for rescue, and it will be an easier target for rescuers to spot.

+Before departing on a boat trip, leave a float plan with someone ashore.

Thompson said the Coast Guard has "hundreds more" boating safety tips. He encouraged boaters to get in touch with the Boating Information Branch at (202) 426-9716 to find out about them. Or write to the Commandant (G-BA-2-TP42), U.S. Coast Guard, Washington, D.C. 20590.

FISHIN' TIPS

from . . . Tom Mann

BRER TOM: "Is it true that all fishermen are liars or do only liars fish?" JUST ASKIN'

HELLO JUST ASKIN': Oh, I don't believe fishermen intentionally lie. They just expand the truth a tad or two.

DEAR TOM: "I notice in your literature you tell how to make a lure run a true line. Why can't you make all lures run on center?" CURIOUS CAL

HELLO CURIOUS: It's called "the human element." No one is perfect, not even lure assemblers, but they do come close. Just bend the linetie the way you want the lure to run, thassall.

HEY TOM: "Do you prefer a hone for keeping an edge on a fish knife, or a butcher's steel?" KARL KEENE

HELLO KARL: When you first get that fish knife, hone the edge. After that, a butcher's steel is great for quickly sharpening it while cleaning fish.

DEAR TOM: "I read where keeping worms in an old sock would keep them lively, but I can't stand the sound of their gagging. What's wrong?" BROTHER JOSEPH

HELLO JOE: I don't know whose sock you used but I'd suggest they change socks more often.

BRER TOM'S CLOSING TIP: Your fishing line is the vital link between you and the biggest fish of your lifetime. Keep the terminal end strong by cutting off worn line which is weaker. And whenever a line gets stiff, replace it with new line and fish with confidence. There are two things a fisherman should keep fresh— his line and his fish!

Braemar Hosts U.S. Women's Amateur Golf

Braemar golf course in Edina will be the site of the 1979 United States golf association women's amateur public links tournament June 27 through July 1.

Some 120 amateur public links golfers from throughout the nation will tee up the ball with high hopes of taking home the championship.

Entry into the tournament will be achieved by playing qualifying rounds in early June at various public courses in the United States. Minnesota players will have their opportunity to qualify June 8 at Majestic Oaks in Anoka.

Players who qualify for the main event will be registering at the Edina course June 24 and 25 and will be playing practice rounds June 25 and 26.

Tournament play begins with medal play qualifying rounds June 27 and 28.

At the completion of 36 holes of medal play, the field will be reduced from 120 players to 32. Match play will begin Fri., June 29.

Final matches will be played Sun., July 1.

Kelly Fuiks, Phoenix, Ariz., won the inaugural event at Yahara Hills golf club in Madison, Wis. in 1977 and repeated her win last year at Myrtle Beach, S.C. She plans to defend her title at Braemar.

Last year, six golfers from Minnesota made the title seeking trip to the east coast. They were Randy Glasmann, who plays out of Bunker Hills at Coon Rapids; Susan Davis, Bunker Hills; Ann Person, Wapicada, St. Cloud; Nancy Hultgren, Keller, St. Paul; Barbara Arrell, Bunker Hills; and Cathy Williams, La Crescent.

Williams, a member of the University of Minnesota womens' golf team, survived the cut to 32 players last year, only to lose her first match. At Madison in 1977, she placed second, with Fuiks winning one-up.

In the first tourney, at Madison, Minnesota was represented by nine golfers. The number of entrants allowed each state is based on the number of people playing in the sectional qualifying round. Those playing in 1977 included Glasmann, Davis, Person, Williams, Hultgren and Maureen Jodell, Meadowbrook in Minneapolis; Rosemary Von Ruden, Westfield, Winona; Susan Jaqua, Majestic Oaks, Anoka; and Diane Roberts, Sundance, Anoka.

Admission and parking will be free for all spectators at the tournament at Braemar.

Fishing Opener

Walleye and northern fishing season opened May 12 and anglers met with varied success around the state. The best report we had came from Big Sandy Lake at McGregor where 300 fished with varied success. Very few were skunked. The average stringer had walleyes weighing two and three pounds. The largest weighed six pounds. Best fishing was in six feet of water in the morning and in the evening. Best bait was the shiner minnow.

Opening day fishing was spotty on Lake Minnetonka. Walleyes weighing three and four pounds were being taken on fathead minnows, but most of the walleyes taken weighed from 1½ to 2½ pounds. Best fishing was in five feet of water.

Northerns stole the show at Spring and Prior lakes.

Everyone agrees that fishing will improve as the weather improves.

Fish Reports

In a recent column we reported that crappie fishing was excellent in Lake Marion near Lakeville.

Several readers phoned saying this report is incorrect. We contacted Dwayne Shadeen of the DNR fisheries division to check, and he stated our column report was correct.

Lake Marion was open to promiscuous fishing this winter. The 'winter-kill' had included northerns, walleyes and bass. However, the crappies survived and crappie fishing has been good. And our report had been about crappies.

Dwayne also said there had been two conflicting columns which had appeared in another newspaper, but that facts had been corrected by the DNR and may have been overlooked by readers.

We try to document all of our column information and usually have two or more sources per item. We welcome reports about your area. Call us at 612-894-3095 or write to us at 104 Meadow Circle South, Burnsville, MN.

Bullhead Days

Waterville and Elysian will celebrate bullhead days June 8-10. These two communities have capitalized on the reputation of being "The Bullhead Capital of the World" since the late 1800s. Included in the celebration is a queen contest, carnival, children's parade, street dance, bridge tournament water parade and fireworks.

Over 2½ tons of fried bullheads are consumed by the hungry visitors, with thousands of anglers taking part in the big fishing contest.

Bass Season

Bass fishing in inland waters opens Sat., May 26. "Just why is the opening of the bass season delayed this long?" The bass is a member of the sunfish family as is the bluegill and the crappie. Some fishermen say that you will take the female off the nest this early in the season, but the longest a female has been clocked on a nest is 20 minutes. It's the male who guards the nest.

Record Walleye

LeRoy Chiovitte of Hermantown headlined the opening of the walleye season by breaking a 24-year-old record when he caught a walleye weighing 17-pounds, 8-ounces in the Seagull River near Grand Marais. He used a leech for bait.

Previous record was set in 1955 when a fisherman took a walleye weighing 16-pounds, 11-ounces from Basswood Lake near Ely.

Grand Rapids Report

A walleye weighing 10-pounds, 14-ounces was taken from the Mississippi River at Grand Rapids, with another walleye weighing eight pounds taken from the same place a couple of hours later. MacCavity Bay at the Cut Foot Sioux produced some fair walleye fishing.

Leech Lake Report

Mrs. Jeannie Berg, manager of the Leech Lake Area Chamber of Commerce, sent this report:

"Opening day of fishing season on Leech Lake brought some nice surprises. Two local fishermen brought in their limits of walleyes with a total weight of 60 pounds. That started the excitement and since then we have had several more large walleyes brought in along with a muskie. Very few limits of walleyes have been reported, but they seem to have found some big ones in various parts of the lake. They are fishing shallow water, 10 feet or less, using minnows, leeches and crawlers. The usual opener hot spots are not producing yet, but local guides feel they should be moving to these areas soon."

Top opening weekend catches included an eight-pound, four-ounce walleye caught by George Miller of Minneapolis in Walker Bay of Leech Lake on a minnow; an eight-pound walleye caught by Tom Spooner of Minneapolis, in Walker Bay on a crawler; a seven-pound, eight-ounce walleye caught by Curt Renowski of Walker, near Squaw Point in Leech Lake in eight feet of water on a shiner minnow; and a 28-pound, three-ounce muskie caught by Mark Schaefer of Inver Grove Heights in the Steamboat Bay area of Leech Lake.

Black flies often temper their bite with a bit of anesthesia, according to National Wildlife magazine. That way they're long gone when the pain and itching begin.

Butler Gives You a Choice!
FARMSTED II—Straight Wall
Butler Farmsted Buildings
There was a time when a farmer's choice of pre-fabricated farm buildings didn't include a low-priced, well-engineered, all-metal structure.
Then, in 1970, Butler gave farmers this choice with Farmsted I (pictured below) — a sturdy, durable, functional, attractive all-metal farm building, at prices competitive to pole barns.
And farmers no longer had to pay for more or settle for less than they needed in a farm building.
Now, Butler offers you another choice — Farmsted II (pictured above). Farmsted II brings you most of the engineering advantages of Farmsted I, at just a few more dollars. Plus the benefits of straight wall construction, including large double slide doors in either or both sidewalls.
Options include a variety of color finishes, windows, walk-in doors, floor-to-ceiling Lite Panls for plenty of natural daylight. All Farmsted buildings are available in a broad range of widths, heights and lengths — and all Farmsteds are adaptable to grain storage.
The choice is yours! Farmsted I — the "best seller" all-metal farm building — still offers a whole lot of building for a little less money than Farmsted II. Slope wall Farmsted I or straight wall Farmsted II, you can't go wrong. See us now for details.

Oriental Trade Sales Have Big Minn. Benefit

Initial sales of Minnesota food and agricultural products approximating $1.5 million during the three-week Orient trade mission are expected to be multiplied several times in the follow-up export sales negotiations, agriculture commissioner Mark W. Seetin reported recently.

Biggest sale consumated during Minnesota's largest and most extended prospecting of markets in Japan, Hong Kong, Taiwan, and the People's Republic of China was an initial contract for $1 million in cow hides, a by-product of Minnesota's commercial livestock slaughter.

Minnesota exhibitors also reported sales of $250,000 worth of another livestock by-product, edible offal, plus 40,000 pounds of organically grown soybeans, an appreciable volume of processed beef products, also quantities of honey and this state's unique wild rice.

Future potential export sales of appreciable volume appear strongest in Taiwan, as well as in Japan and Hong Kong, based on interest and continuing negotiations generated by the exhibits and sampling of the products of 35 Minnesota food and agricultural product exporters during the March 9-April 11 Orient tour. Trade with the People's Republic of China, while an encouraging potential, will be slower and is a long range export market.

Taiwan government and food industry officials announced plans to send a trade mission to Minnesota and other selected Midwest states this summer to purchase feed grains and soybeans.

Commissioner Seetin said that negotiations with Japan are continuing for the development of adzuki bean paste as a new Minnesota farm product and food processing industry, to satisfy a demand in the Orient for that established food product. Japan has reached its capacity for providing that product in its consumer market. If a joint venture is consumated it will mean not only a new crop alternative for farmers who will grow adzuki beans, but it will also utilize beet sugar by products in the final bean paste product to be exported.

SDA School Has Open House Here

VISITING SCHOOL during open house of the Seventh-day Adventist school on graduation day Thursday were these two youngsters who are potential future students at the school. Jodi Madden, 5, is using the coloring book under the careful supervision of Holly Nordvick, 2½. They are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Duane Madden and Mr. and Mrs. Darold Nordvick, all of Thief River Falls.

Seventh-day Adventist school held an open house Thursday prior to the graduation ceremonies for three eighth grade graduates held that evening. Graduates Thursday evening were Brad Brusett, Diane Meekma and Aaron Pervis.

Speaker for graduation ceremonies and a special guest during the open house was L. E. McClain, superintendent of Seventh-day Adventist schools for the state of Minnesota. Ceremonies were held in the church just south of the school.

Located on six acres of land on the south edge of Thief River Falls off Tindolph avenue, the school has three classrooms (two presently being used), a large gymnasium with small stage area and a full kitchen for cooking classes and use during special occasions.

Each grade has separate classes for each subject and each student receives individual attention, according to Duane Madden, principal and instructor in the upper grades. The "three R's" are emphasized and a morning worship service starts each day. Sewing and conversational Spanish were added this year for those who wanted to take the classes. Parents also offer special classes or crafts as time permits.

Tuition during the past year was $60 per month per child. Tuition varies slightly according to the number of children enrolled. For each dollar of tuition paid, the church contributes a matching amount to enable all who desire so to have a Christian education, Madden said. He added that students of SDA schools are found to be on the average of 1.5 years ahead of those in the public schools.

Superintendent McClain commented on the advancement of learning by noting that SDA schools can be selective in their students while public schools by law can not. The average for all students in public schools may therefore be lower than in the SDA schools, he said, although he cited individual attention due to smaller enrollment as a major factor in learning.

He also pointed out that the mixed classrooms of several grades in one room somewhat duplicate the rural schools which were once prevalent in the nation. In these schools the students in lower grades would overhear the lessons given to those in higher grades. "By the time they got to the eighth grade they would have heard the material repeated eight times," McClain said.

Madden and McClain called attention to the object of the school, which is "to train young people to be mentally, physically and spiritually whole" and "to provide a Christian atmosphere in which to accomplish this goal".

City Agrees To Sell Bridgeman Additonal Land

Sale of an additional 20x70 foot parcel of city land to Bridgeman's, rezoning of land near Cartway Drive from R-3 to R-2 and approval of an application for MHFA housing rehabilitation funds were the topics of a special meeting of the Thief River Falls city council held Tuesday.

Following discussion, a previous council motion which authorized the sale of an 80 x 140 foot parcel of land in site C to Bridgeman's for $19,000 was amended to include the sale of the additional 20x70 foot parcel at $1.80 per square foot. This brings the cost for the entire exchange to $21,520.

A second motion by council Tuesday made the sale of the additional 20x70 foot parcel contingent upon Lars Wold of Bridgeman's selling the city an option to buy the coal sheds near Bridgeman's on site B for $4,000 and also upon Wold's agreement to assign the lease for the property on which the coal sheds stand to the city if negotiations should begin with Burlington Northern for purchase of the land.

Present to request rezoning for 4.3 acres of land near Cartway Drive from R-3 to R-2 were Ken Berg and Wally Sparby. A hearing was held on the rezoning with no opposition expressed and at the recommendation of the city planning commission the council approved the rezoning.

A resolution was also passed Tuesday authorizing city housing administrator Jan Reid to make application on behalf of the city for $25,035 MHFA housing rehabilitation grant funds.

VERBOSE MAITRE D', played by John Nicholson, describes all the action taking place in an elegant French restaurant which is the setting for a one-act play entitled "Schubert's Last Serenade." Plot of the play, written by Julie Bovassa, centers around a lover's quarrel between a rough construction worker and a Radcliffe sophomore but as personnel from the restaurant where the couple is dining become involved the action turns comic. Cast members pictured include (left to right) John Nicholson, Maitre D'; John Walker, Waiter; Jim Solsten, Franz Schuberg the Violinist; Tony Ricci, Cook; and Jay Gjernes, Alfred. Not pictured is Sue Rosetta who is cast as the Radcliffe student, Bebe.

Retail Expansion Not Recommended

Preliminary retail market analysis presented to city planning commission members in an adjourned regular meeting Tuesday indicated that total retail square footage in Thief River Falls should not be expanded in the immediate future but that use of retail space should be reevaluated and adjusted as consumers' needs change.

The study, which was prompted by a request from Erickson Development company to locate a mall on the west side of Thief River Falls, makes projections through 1985. John Worrall, a representative of Brauer and Associates who have been engaged to undertake the study, was present to present the preliminary report Tuesday.

The draft report contained an inventory of existing retail establishments, an outline of the retail market area of Thief River Falls, present and projected retail sales of Thief River Falls merchants, estimates of the number of square feet of retail space that can be supported in the present and in the future in Thief River Falls and conclusions made by Worrall on the basis of the data. Not included in the draft, but to be included in the final study, are estimates on capital improvement costs that would be involved in mall construction and preliminary recommendations for retail development in Thief River Falls.

The report defines Thief River Falls as the geographic and economic center of a seven-county region whose market area population is estimated at 31,600 persons.

Music instruction will be offered in a group basis for fourth graders and an individual basis for $2 per lesson in addition to the other summer school program.

Deadline for summer school registration is June 8 and enrollment will be on a first come first served basis until sections are filled. Insufficient enrollment will result in class cancellation. There will be no bus service for rural or cross-town students this year. Grade designations given are for the grade the student was in during the 1978-79 school year.

Elementary classes include reading for grades one through five, developmental math for grades one through five and a course for students diagnosed as having special learning disabilities in grades one through five. All elementary classes will be held at Mark Twin elementary school. Reading and math are two-hour courses and the summer SLD program is for four hours a day.

Secondary classes include math and its applications for grades 6-12, concepts in science for grades 6-8, remedial field science for grades 9-12, remedial communications for grades 6-12 and remedial social studies for grades 6-12.

There is no tuition for residents of School District 564. Non-resident tuition is $50 for a two-hour class and $75 for a four-hour class. No school will be held on July 4 but that day's classes will be made up on one afternoon of the summer session. Two-hour classes will run from 8 to 10 a.m. or 10 a.m. to noon.

Enrichment classes for fourth grade music students will be held from June 11 through July 20. There is no fee for this session. Other music program classes will run from June 18 through July 27 and a charge of $2 per lesson will be made. Individual lessons are to be scheduled with instructors.

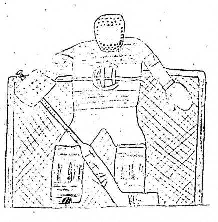
Art Adventure Brings Objects Into Classroom



INTEREST IN ART by students is the purpose of the "Art Adventure" program sponsored jointly by several Thief River Falls organizations and the local schools. Volunteers bring art objects into the schools and discuss them with the students. Jim Hoks, president of the Thief River Falls community arts council, encouraged students to draw pictures during his session with elementary students. This picture by Jimmy Breiland is one of the efforts which came from that encouragement.

Through the cooperation of four community organizations and a number of individual volunteers, a number of Thief River Falls elementary school children received an insight into art which they would not otherwise have obtained.

Mrs. Gretchen Beito headed the activity called "Art Adventure" through which volunteers brought art objects into elementary grades for half-hour sessions. They discussed with the students the particular art works and often the artists. Some of the volunteers with art abilities themselves talked about their work and encouraged youngsters to try their skills as well.

"A key word to have in mind as you prepare your presentation might be awareness," Mrs. Beito wrote in a note to volunteers at the start of the program. "Awareness is a basic element in appreciation. Not only should a child be surrounded by a wide range of beautiful things, but he should also become aware of their quality and worth. We have a wonderful opportunity to develop sensitivity to works of art."

The community service project had as its stated goal "To give elementary school students the opportunity to view fine paintings and sculpture and to assist in helping them find out what is important to them in art."

The program is open to anyone wishing to volunteer time to share enthusiasm and knowledge about art with children. Organizations joining in sponsorship are the Zehlian art group of the Thief River Falls federation of women's clubs; the Thief River Falls community arts council; American association of university women; and the Jaycee Women organization.

Volunteers who worked in the program included Mrs. Ina Thorsgard, Mrs. Kathy Winjum, Mrs. Zonie Easton, Mrs. Judy Dimich, Mrs. Marge Green, Mrs. Kimber Swenson, Mrs. Hank Ness, Mrs. Madeline Robarge, Mrs. Margaret Saetre, Mrs. Melba Penning, Jim Hoks and Mrs. Beito.

Do youngsters appreciate the classroom visits and the efforts of the volunteers? Here are several thank-you letters received by Mrs. Judy Dimich following her visit to a third grade class at which she demonstrated still life painting:

"Dear Mrs. Dimich,

"Thank you for coming to

PAINTING OF MONA LISA by Leonardo da Vinci was shown to members of David Stromland's class at Knox school last week during an Art Adventure visit by Mrs. Gretchen Beito. During a half-hour visit to the classroom, Mrs. Beito told students about the famous Italian artist and showed pictures of some of his work. The Art Adventure program brings volunteers interested in art into the local schools to show art objects and discuss them with the students.

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Johnsrud-LeTexier Vows Exchanged At Goodridge

Sherry Jo Johnsrud and James A. LeTexier exchanged marriage vows on Saturday May 5, at 2 p.m., at the Ekelund Lutheran church in Goodridge.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Johnsrud of Goodridge. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. James W. LeTexier, East Grand Forks.

Officiating at the ecumenical, double-ring ceremony were Rev. Gene Broughton and Rev. Jerry Rogers. Mrs. Grace Hammer, a friend of the bride's family, served as organist. During the ceremony, she sang, "The Wedding Song," and "The Lord's Prayer." White mums graced the altar.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, was attired in an ivory polyester knit floor-length gown with chapel-length train. The empire bodice was styled with long sleeves and a keyhole neckline outlined with beaded lace trim. Matching lace, embroidered with seed pearls fromed the Juliet headpiece that held her fingertip veil of bridal illusion. She carried a modified cascade of white daisies, peach carnations and yellow ball pompons, accented with babies' breath.

Sharon Rosengren of Parkville was the bride's personal attendant.

Matron of honor was Susan Sevareid of Grand Forks, N.D., a sister of the bride. Serving as bridesmaid was Gwen Johnsrud, Goodridge, another sister of the bride. Their identical, floor-length gowns were of peach polyester knit trimmed with ivory lace. Floral trim marked the gathers at the empire waistline. In their hair, they wore a cluster of yellow daisies and babies' breath attached to a comb. They carried bouquets of yellow and white daisies, peach carnations and yellow pompons with babies' breath.

Jerry LeTexier of East Grand Forks attended his brother as best man. Roger Johnsrud, Thief River Falls, a brother of the bride, was groomsman. Serving as ushers were Monty LeTexier, East Grand Forks, brother of the groom, Gary Johnsrud, Goodridge, brother of the bride, and Michael Sevareid, Grand Forks, N.D., brother-in-law of the bride. The men of the wedding party wore conventional business suits with peach carnation boutonnieres. The groom's boutonniere was a white carnation.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Johnsrud selected a yellow polyester floor-length gown. The groom's mother was attired in a three-piece ensemble featuring a floor-length white skirt, and a blue floral print blouse with matching jacket. Their corsages were of white daisies, peach carnations and yellow pompons.

Honor guests were Mrs. Minnie Tollefson, Mr. and Mrs. Enoch Johnsrud, grandparents of the bride, and Mrs. Frances Hughes and Mrs. Lena LeTexier, grandmothers of the groom.

Following the ceremony, the bride's parents hosted a reception in the Ekelund dining hall for approximately 130 guests. Reception host and hostess were Clifford and Shirley Johnsrud, uncle and aunt of the bride. Jenny LeTexier, a sister of the groom, registered the guests as Amy Tollefson and Marcia Coan served the punch.

Centering the serving table was a three-tiered wedding cake baked and decorated by Mrs. Eugene Fiedler. The tiers, supported by tall, ornate pillars, were decorated with peach and yellow floral garlands. A cluster of wedding bells topped the upper tier. The cake was cut and served by Janet LeTexier and Norma Groos. Mildred Hovet and Shirley Gross poured.

Waitresses were Lori Bjorgaard, Candy Lundeen, Kristi Johnsrud, Vicky Johnsrud, Clarice Senum and Betty Mostrom. Lorrie Torkildson presided at the gift table.

Relatives and friends attending the ceremony were from LeRoy, Manvel and Grand Forks, N.D., East Grand Forks, Minneapolis, Parkville and the area surrounding Goodridge.

The couple is now at home at 2714 South 10th, Grand Forks, N.D. The bride is a graduate of Goodridge high school and is employed by the University of North Dakota. The groom, a graduate of Sacred Heart high school, is a member of the North Dakota Army National Guard. Photo—John Elison, Grand Forks, N.D.

Side Effects Of Epilepsy Drug Under Scrutiny

A drug widely used to control epileptic seizures may adversely affect the liver, according to results of a study by researchers at the University of Minnesota.

In a study that will be published soon in the Journal of the American Medical association, the researchers found that valproic acid (VPA) — marketed in this country as Depakene — diminishes the liver's production of two essential blood proteins, fibrinogen and albumin.

Through the effects are apparently reversible, the finding suggests that those taking the drug should be much more closely monitored, according to researchers.

Study was conducted through the University of Minnesota's comprehensive epilepsy program (CEP) by neurologists Neil Sussman, L. William McLain and Ilo Leppick.

"We've found a dose-related toxicity to the liver," said McLain, who directs the CEP clinical program. More research is needed to identify safe doses of VPA and to characterize the liver mechanism it affects, McLain said, adding that "for the time being, all that is necessary are more frequent liver function studies and blood level tests."

Problem was uncovered last summer when tests prior to surgery revealed blood clotting difficulties in a patient treated with VPA. In a consequent study of 42 people taking VPA along with other anti-epileptic drugs, 27 were found to have below-normal levels of fibrinogen, the percursor of the blood's clotting material fibrin. Patients reported no episodes of abnormal bleeding, but because of the problem, surgery had to be deferred in one case.

Researchers also frequently found lowered levels of albumin among the patients. Lack of this protein, which controls fluid pressure in the blood, can result in edema, or tissue swelling.

When doses of VPA were discontinued or lowered in these patients, the protein levels returned to normal. "We're hoping there won't be any long-term consequences, that everything is reversible," McLain said. "To be cautious, however, we have to consider that fibrosis (deterioration) of the liver is possible."

Substitutes for VPA, though less effective, are available. Drug was licensed amidst much controversy by the U.S. food and drug administration (FDA) last spring. Advocates asked that the FDA cut short its usual lengthy testing procedures because the drug had been found in Europe to be very effective in controlling petit mal seizures. Petit mal seizures, temporary blackouts, are the least severe of the three types of seizures associated with epilepsy.

McLain said that although the new findings have been reported to the FDA, he cannot anticipate what action the agency will take. Researchers will continue to follow the patients on a CEP grant from the National Institutes of Health.

'U' Researchers Study First Flying Dinosaur

by Jeanne Hanson
'U' M News Service

It was probably only a small dinosaur, but it could fly. In fact, it was the first known bird on earth, according to a University of Minnesota report published in the March issue of "Science".

Wobbling over bushes and barely gliding between trees about 150 million years ago, this creature, variously known as a dinosaur, reptile and bird, is now seen as important because delicately printed in its fossil are asymmetrical features.

"Archaeopteryx (ar-key-op-ter-ix) may be the direct ancestor of modern birds," said Harrison Tordoff, professor of ornithology and director of the Bell museum of natural history at the University of Minnesota. Only other serious candidate in the search for the "roots" of birds is an ancient ancestor of the crocodile.

To shed light on the origin of birds, Tordoff and other researchers have access to only six fossil prints of archaeopteryx, all preserved in the fine-grained limestone of a Bavarian quarry in West Germany. Original fossils are now in various European museums, and Tordoff used a recently made cast to arrive at this conclusions.

Shape of the feathers revealed in the fossils makes a strong case for archaeopteryx's flying ability, according to Tordoff. The primary wing feathers are designed, like those of modern birds, to create an "airfoil cross-section," the principle behind airplane flight.

The leading edge of the primary wing feathers and of the wing itself create a different air pressure above and below the wing, supporting flight. The kind of feathers which can mold this flight are asymmetrical, their center ribs off center. Archaeopteryx has this kind of feathers, Tordoff said.

Its feathers place it in a class with such modern flying birds as falcons, swifts, shorebirds and hummingbirds, all with even more asymmetrical feathers, Tordoff said. Birds that don't fly, such as ostriches and some rails, have symmetrical flight feathers instead.

Though it could fly, the unassuming magpie-sized archaeopteryx was even better at running and probably used its running ability to capture small animals and large flying insects, scooping them towards its tiny sharp teeth with its broad wings, according to Yale vertebrate paleontologist John Ostrom. It was this skill and archeopteryx's somewhat unbirdlike shoulders and breast that had made scientists doubt its flying ability before.

"If you're the only flying thing around that's larger than an insect, and probably the first to evolve, you don't have to be a terrific flyer. Just flying is enough," Tordoff said.

There may have been other flying dinosaurs or reptiles as yet undiscovered, Tordoff said. Unfortunately not many rocks are fine-grained enough to preserve the delicate asymmetry of a feather.

Without this feather pattern embedded in rock, archaeopteryx might have passed into extinction known only as a running reptile or a very small dinosaur.

S. Enderlein Awarded AAL Scholarship

Steven Eugene Enderlein, son of Rev. and Mrs. Eugene Enderlein of Thief River Falls, was awarded an Aid Association for Lutheran (AAL) all-college scholarship and will attend the University of Minnesota at Duluth in the technical engineering department. He is one of more than 300 graduating high school seniors to be a winner of one of these scholarships.

Steve will graduate fourth in his class of 292 students, with a grade point average of 3.95. He has been active in the student senate, president of German club, National Honor society, co-captain of the varsity basketball team and was chosen "all conference" and "all state" player in basketball. He is a member of Our Saviour's Lutheran church, AFLC, and is president of the Luther League.

Scholarship recipients were chosen from approximately 3,600 applicants. Evaluations were done by qualified persons in the field of education based on involvement in extracurricular and leadership activities, academic records and the students' own statements. This year, 200 of the four year renewable all-college scholarships have again been awarded. Amount of the awards range from $500 to $1,750 annually based on need.

Steve is a member of AAL local branch 1669, Thief River Falls. This scholarship award was presented to him by Myles Koop, a member of the branch, on Sunday at Our Saviour's Lutheran church. Branch officers are Norm Busse, president; Tom Puppe, vice president and Joanne Kohler, secretary-treasurer. Don Lundquist of Bemidji is the district representative.

OUTSTANDING SENIOR in the physics department at Bemidji state university is Martin Dirks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Byron Dirks of Thief River Falls and a 1974 graduate of Lincoln high school. Martin graduated summa cum laude May 20 with a degree in engineering physics and has received an offer for the position of associate scientist from Control Data's advanced technology division in Minneapolis. He has also received several other offers from out-of-state companies in the area of solid state device engineering.

Show Increased Placement By Job Services

Non-agricultural job openings in Minnesota declined during 1978, but the state job service was able to increase the number of non-agricultural placements it made by 16 per cent, Rolf Middleton, commissioner of the Minnesota department of economic security, said recently.

Number of placements in non-agricultural jobs totaled 124,134, up 17,341 from the 107,793 placements in 1977. Agricultural placements more than doubled, from 14,422 in 1977 to 32,082 in 1978, because corn detasseling work was redefined as agricultural after previously being classified as non-agricultural, Middleton said.

"If corn detasseling placements had been counted as in previous years, the increase in non-agricultural placements from 1977 to 1978 would have been even greater," Middleton said.

Number of job openings listed with the job service by employers declined 31,783 from 1977 to 1978 — from 228,180 to 196,397. That was a decline of 15 per cent. However, job service offices had more applicants and made more referrals to the jobs with the result that employers filled a greater proportion of their job openings with job service applicants, Middleton said.

Number of new applicants increased from 189,721 in 1977 to 218,230 in 1978. Number of referrals increased from 264,918 in 1977 to 284,933 in 1978.

Some Herbicide And Fertilizer May Be Mixea

Short supply of field work days and diesel fuel this spring has generated interest in mixing pesticides with fertilizer and applying them at the same time.

"Recent changes in pesticide laws allow fertilizer and pest control chemicals to be tank-mixed and applied together, unless stated otherwise on the pesticide label," says Jeff Coultas, University of Minnesota extension agronomist. "It is legal to mix treatments if the label does not restrict it, but manufacturers will not guarantee their product's effectiveness unless the practice is spelled out on their label."

Unlabeled practices are largely untested. Very little research has been conducted on results of mixing herbicides and insecticides. Dangers of applying untested mixtures include crop injury and reduced effectiveness.

"The user takes full responsibility for unlabeled practices," Coultas adds. "The safest approach is to mix only those chemicals that are labeled for mixing with other specified formulations. Several herbicides are labeled for application with liquid fertilizer."

Some herbicides are also labeled for impregnation on dry bulk fertilizer. Applicators of such fertilizer must be especially careful to calibrate accurately and avoid overlapping in the field. Incorporation is still necessary for herbicides that normally need incorporation to be effective.

Mixtures of fertilizer and herbicide should be applied before the crop emerges. Possibility of crop injury is enhanced once the plants have emerged.

Coultas adds that it is important to run a compatibility test before mixing. The test is outlined on pesticide labels approved for use with liquid fertilizers.

"The compatibility test is quick and easy to run," he says. "It will help prevent problems before it is too late to correct them."

Expansion Of Retail Area Discouraged

Average family income in the region is $12,900. Although a slight increase in the market area population is expected by 1985, significant expansion of the present retail space would be detrimental to existing retailers since Thief River Falls' proximity to Grand Forks limits growth of the market area.

The major part of the Thief River Falls market area, according to the study, actually exists within the Grand Forks market area and it is felt that "Grand Forks is and will continue to be the major retail center of the region."

Thief River Falls' major retail draw is convenience goods or less expensive items such as food, hardware, drugs and miscellaneous retail items. Of 150 retail establishments comprising an estimated 670,000 square feet of retail space in Thief River Falls, approximately 83 retail establishments, comprising 268,568 square feet of space, sell strictly convenience goods. Establishments selling strictly shopper's goods such as furniture, apparel and accessories number 35 in Thief River Falls and have total square footage of 247,118.

It is in the area of shopper's goods where, Morrall states, the proximity of Grand Forks is especially felt. A large portion of the market population living in Thief River Falls and Pennington county will buy their convenience goods in Thief River Falls but travel to Grand Forks for shopper's goods. The majority of the sales of shopper's goods in Thief River Falls are to persons living in the outlying counties of the market area.

Worrall also indicated that both Thief River Falls and Pennington county are experiencing population growth at a faster rate than the market area. As a result the retail penetration rate, or ability of Thief River Falls to capture available retail dollars in the market area, will increase. However, with a greater portion of the market area population living closer to Thief River Falls, the market for convenience goods would likely increase while the market for shopper's goods could decrease as Grand Forks' draw in that area is felt.

An unknown in making any market prediction is the seriousness of the energy shortage and the effect that will have on the market areas of both Thief River Falls and Grand Forks. Worrall felt that high gasoline prices would not significantly affect the marketing operations, but that a serious gas shortage would probably tend to pull in the market area boundaries of all retail centers and to increase demands in Thief River Falls for shopper's goods that are now being bought elsewhere.

Using 1977 figures, gross income of the Thief River Falls market population after taxes was estimated at $149,379,000. After expenditures such as mortgage payments, rent and all service purchases this figure is reduced to $125,480,000 and of this it is estimated approximately $109,859,000 is available to be spent in Thief River Falls on retail goods. Of this approximately 49.6 per cent or roughly half was actually spent in Thief River Falls. This 49.6 per cent is Thief River Falls market penetration rate for 1977.

The penetration rate has risen from a 1974 rate of 48.0 to the 1977 49.6 per cent. In 1978 the rate reached 51.7 per cent and in 1979 is projected at 53.8 per cent as Thief River Falls merchants are able to capture more of the available retail dollars in the market area. This gradual increase in the penetration rate is expected to continue and by 1985 will likely reach 61.8 per cent.

However the high rate of inflation, conservatively calculated at seven per cent in the study, is expected to more than offset any revenue increase resulting from market penetration rate increases. High unemployment or a decline in wages within the market area would also have a detrimental effect on the ability of merchants to increase their revenues and-or on the ability of Thief River Falls to support additional retail space.

Report figures indicate that in 1978 convenience goods stores in Thief River Falls had an average return of $129 per square foot; shopper's goods, $48 per square foot; and gas and auto dealers, $84 per square foot. Comprising approximately 276,750, 247,900 and 142,700 square feet of space respectively, income was spent was in a ratio of roughly 60-20-20 per cent respectively for convenience goods, shopper's goods, and gas and auto goods.

Taking a seven per cent inflation factor into consideration, the amount of square footage that can be supported in Thief River Falls will actually decrease by 1985. For example in 1978 the retail square footage totaled 667,350 supported by approximately 51.7 per cent of the $115,000,000 available retail dollars. By 1985 the retail income expected to be spent in Thief River Falls will increase to 61.8 per cent of the $152,000,000 available retail dollars however, considering inflation this would only be able to support 654,700 square feet of retail space at the same level it was supported in 1978. This can be seen by looking at the 1978 average sale of convenience goods per square foot of $129. In 1985 for a convenience goods retailer to be in the same profit situation as in 1978, he will have to take in $208 per square foot in convenience sales.

If the convenience goods, shopper's goods and gas and auto goods stayed in roughly the same 60-20-20 per cent dollar ratio, the number of square footage supportable at a 1978 level would be reduced by 5,550, 3,700 and 3,400 respectively in each of the categories. According to Worrall these estimates should be correct within two per cent.

In other words, "existing retailers will suffer a loss in sales when new establishments are opened to the extent that the establishments duplicate existing goods offered." It appears that a shopping mall, would, as was feared by Thief River Falls city fathers, have a detrimental effect on the present retailers. What public costs and benefits it would have will be addressed in the second segment of the market study.

It was the general feeling of planning commission members that the study was proceeding in the proper direction. Worrall stated completion was expected within three weeks.

Art Adventure Brings Objects Into Classes

"Dear Mrs. Dimich,

I really liked those art classes you gave us. That was fun doing those still life pictures. Painting pictures was fun too. That was neat telling us about Van Gogh too. A third grader, Tom Anderson."

"Dear Mrs. Dimich,

I really liked art and drawing. Still life was one of the best. I like them all. But still life is the best still. Van Gogh I think he had a mad face. Thank you for all the things you did for us. A third grader, David Kloety."

Some students found not only an appreciation for art but a desire to become artists themselves. Practicality in the practice of still life painting was demonstrated by the following youngster who wrote:

"Dear Mrs. Dimich,

"I really liked the still life picture. At home I tried it only with a wine glass and plastic grapes and some strawbarees and a apple but they didn't fit on the papper. So I took some out and it worked out fine. Your's truly, Erik Bolen."

Initial preparations are being made to repeat the program for the 1979-80 school year. Persons interested in participating are encouraged to contact Mrs. Beito at 681-3705.

KIRSTI CATES, the former Kirsti Shodean of Thief River Falls, has been named Red Cross volunteer of the quarter at Minot, N.D., air force base. She has accumulated over 1,000 volunteer hours during the past year. (USAF Photo by Russ Lante)

Kirsti Cates Cited As Red Cross Volunteer

Kirsti A. Cates, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Shodean of Thief River Falls, was recently selected volunteer of the quarter for the American Red Cross at Minot (N.D.) air force base.

"Kirsti's dedication and ability brought our safety program's standards to meet the federal government's occupational safety and health act of 1970," stated Henry Luman, base Red Cross field director, in nominating Mrs. Cates for the honor.

In her capacity as chairman of safety services, a role she has held since the beginning of 1978, she has instructed base personnel and dependents in various first aid and CPR courses. She is also a registered emergency medical technician.

After being appointed a project volunteer in November of 1978, Kirsti's efforts have led her to the Indian reservation in Eagle Butte, S.D., Grand Forks AFB, Fortuna radar station in North Dakota and Mahnomen to aid officials in arranging their own safety programs.

In addition to these duties, Mrs. Cates provides guidance and leadership to 116 safety instructors at Minot AFB and is a caseworker for service to military families. She has accumulated over 1,000 volunteer hours during the past year and has coordinated an EMT class for the extension college on base.

The Shodean family is extremely military oriented. Not only is Mrs. Cates husband, Sgt. Thomas Cates, and their two children residing at Minot AFB for their second tour, the Shodean's only son, Lance Corporal Paul A. Shodean, is in the second marine division at Camp Lejeune, N.C. Their daughter Pfc. Julie and her husband, Staff Sgt. Charles Sharier, are in the 295th aviation company, U.S. army, based at Mannheim, Germany.

FU President Claims Fuel Prices Unfair

Open market prices being charged to farm fuel suppliers for diesel fuel are exorbitant and unethical, Cy Carpetner, president of the Minnesota Farmers Union, charged recently.

"We can cite specific instances where black market operators are offering supplies of diesel fuel to rural farm supply cooperatives at 16 cents to 50 cents per gallon avove the wholesale price for allocated fuel," Carpetner said.

"Farmers and their co-op suppliers are at the mercy of unscrupulous operators when fuel supplies aren't available through allocation or other conventional means, including so-called emergency supplies. And farmers absolutely must get their crops into the ground immediately, because they have already been subjected to a late spring," he said.

Carpenter pointed out that farmers aren't the only people who will suffer from the hold-up tactics of some fuel distributors. Consumers will also suffer in the end, he said, from increased food prices due to inflated food production costs.

"Congress has been unwilling to put pressure on the oil companies to assure fuel supplies for farmers, to protect the people who produce food and the people who have to pay for it. Petroleum industry is equally guilty for failing to apply discipline against those who take advantage of shortage conditions to rip off co-ops and consumers at black market prices.

"This price gouging activity in the countryside can be stopped by mandatory allocation of adequate supplies to farm distributors through conventional channels with pricing protection. Currently, instead of a reasonable allocation policy, we have situations where black marketeers charge anywhere from 72.9 cents to $1.06 per gallon for diesel fuel that wholesales for 56 cents per gallon underallocation," Carpetner said.

"We are all being victimized by the predatory pricing tactics of a few unethical individuals. The petroleum industry, Congress and administration should cooperate to provide immediate order to the fuel allocation system," Carpenter said.

Census Bureau Farm Reports Still Wanted

Drive to round up reports that have not yet been returned from farm households in the 1978 census of agriculture was launched recently by the bureau of the census.

Bureau officials called the drive a "special effort to provide statistical results to the nation's farmers and other users of census data as early as possible."

Most farm operators first received report forms last January, and most have, by now, completed and returned them. Although the rate at which reports have been returned has exceeded the pace of the last farm census, some farmers and ranchers have not sent in their reports.

"The completeness and accuracy of this important agricultural census depends upon each individual filling out the report form received," said Orvin Wilhite, chief of the bureau's agriculture division.

"I am sure that farmers and agricultural leaders want their county and state totals to be as accurate and useful as possible."

Farm census is the only government or private method for gathering and reporting agriculture information on a county-by-county basis for the entire nation, Wilhite noted.

Important decisions will be made by farmer organizations, marketing associations and co-ops on the basis of information in the farm census, he said. Census figures also are widely used by many other organizations, both public and private, on which farmers depend for services, supplies, and equipment.

Operators who neglect to fill out and return their reports, Wilhite said, are doing themselves and all other operators a disservice. They impair the accuracy of the statistics for their area and may even reduce their county's share of funds allocated for research and other agricultural purposes, Wilhite said.

A few landlords and other persons who did not operate farms in 1978 may have received report forms, and others may have received more than one form, each addressed differently. Wilhite explained this as follows:

"Each report that the bureau mailed was assigned its own census file number (CFN). We need a response for each CFN so that the record can be cleared. Anyone who did not farm in 1978, for whatever reason, and anyone who received extra reports with different file numbers should note these facts on the forms and return them so that additional followups can be avoided."

The bureau realizes that some farmers and ranchers need reassurance that their report is confidential. "By law," Wilhite said, "the report may be seen only by sworn census employees, and used only to tabulate totals for your county, state and the nation."

GRADUATION SPEAKER for exercises of the Seventh-day Adventist school in Thief River Falls Thursday was L.E. McClain, superintendent of SDA schools for Minnesota. He is pictured at left with principal Duane Madden and sixth grader Kari Kiesz. Stated purpose of the school is "to train young people to be mentally, physically and spiritually whole and to provide a Christian atmosphere in which to accomplish this goal".

Spring Home Inspection Can Reduce Hazards

As much a part of spring as raking leaves and throwing open the window for a breath of fresh air is the annual ritual of spring cleaning. The Minnesota safety council suggests you clean up home hazards while you dust away winter's cobwebs.

The major causes of home fatalities -- falls, fires and burns -- could be substantially reduced if homes were routinely inspected, for hazards which can be corrected. A room by room survey will help point out potential dangers to your family and home.

In the kitchen, check for adequate lighting, especially in stove and sink areas. Be sure cooks turn pot handles away from stove front, but not over other burners. See that only nonskid wax is used on the floors, and that spills are wiped up immediately. Store hot pads near the stove, but away from flames or direct heat. Keep a step stool handy for use when reaching into high cabinets. Inspect the range exhaust hood and ducts to be sure they're clean.

On stairways, test handrails to be sure they are sturdy and available for outside steps as well as inside closed stairways. Check for adequate lighting on stairways, too. Avoid using stairways for storage areas; keep treads and stair carpeting securely fastened and in good repair to lessen danger of falls.

In other rooms, check to see that small rugs have non-skid backing. Inspect traffic areas to keep them clear of furniture and obstructions. Use a screen in front of fireplaces. Have plenty of outlets for lamps and appliances to avoid overloading extension cords. Post emergency telephone numbers (doctor, police, fire, hospital, close relative) near all telephones.

Know where main gas and water valves are located and how to use them. Have gas and water lines tagged for quick identification. Have gas dryers vented to the outside if possible. Be sure major appliances are properly grounded.

Check the supply of extra fuses of the correct size; know the maximum load each of the electrical circuits in your home can safely carry, and avoid overloading them. Keep a flashlight handy in case of power failure. Keep cleaning fluids, drain openers and other household poisons locked up and out of the reach of children.

For a free checklist to help you clean up home hazards, write the Minnesota Safety Council, 145 Hamm Building, St Paul 55102, or its northern service office at 318 Missabe Building, Duluth 55802.

Information Is Given On Late Grain Planting

University of Minnesota extension agronomists Dale Hicks and Lee Hardman report that late planting of small grains causes tillering and flowering to occur later in the growing season when temperatures are higher. Higher temperature reduces the number of tillers and may affect seed set and subsequent yield. They give the following suggestions:

Oats: Oats may be planted as late as May 25 in southern Minnesota. Varieties with Noble or earlier maturity are suggested with seeding rates of 80 pounds per acre if grain production is intended.

If the oats are planted primarily as a nurse crop (and for harvest of grain and straw), use a seeding rate of 65 pounds per acre to allow the underseeded crop less competition. For maximum forage production (without concern for an underseeded crop), a tall and-or late maturing variety such as Lyon can be seeded at 80 pounds per acre. The earlier varieties seeded at 65 pounds per acre could also be harvested for forage which would allow more growing season for development of the underseeded crop.

With late oat planting, there is a greater probability of rust development. Therefore, selection of varieties with some degree of rust resistance becomes more important.

Wheat: Era and earlier varieties of hard red spring wheat can be planted as late as May 25 south of Interstate 94. Seeding rates should be increased (especially for Butte variety) to 90 pounds per acre because of reduced tillering. Planting can occur as late as June 15 north of I94. Increase seeding rates for June planting.

Barley: Barley can be planted as late as June 1 in the northern growing area. Normal seeding rates can be used if planting occurs before May 20. Increase the seeding rate by 20 per cent for planting after May 20.

Fargo VA Office Will Move To New Location

Veterans administration regional office activities will move from the VA hospital in northeast Fargo to the old post office building at 655 First av. N., effective June 4.

Irvin D. Noll, VA director, said the move to downtown Fargo "will make it more convenient for veterans and their dependents to obtain quick service and information about their benefits."

He said the veterans' benefits office, known as the Veterans services division, will be located in the new facility, as well as the VA's adjudication division, some support services, and offices of a number of veterans service organizations. These will include the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Veterans, and the North Dakota and Minnesota department of Veterans Affairs.

Noll said the move was also made necessary because of the need for additional space for the expanding medical activities involved in the VA hospital's affiliation with the University of North Dakota medical school. Some 60 VA employees will move to the new location.

Noll emphasized that veterans and dependents living outside the Fargo Metropolitan area can still call the Fargo VA regional office for veterans benefits information without a long-distance charge by dialing 800-342-4790. The number of the regional office to call for residents who live in the local telephone area of Fargo is 293-3656. Persons wishing to call the hospital or nursing home care unit can still call the hospital switch board at 232-3241.

Garden Valley Annual Meeting Set June 5th

Seventy-third annual membership meeting of the Garden Valley telephone company will be held on Tuesday, June 5, in the auditorium of the Erskine public school in Erskine. Meeting is scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m. and members can register any time after 12 noon.

Members from all Garden Valley exchanges are eligible to nominate and vote for three directors from District 3 (Brooks, Mentor, Red Lake Falls, St. Hilaire), District 6 (Clearbrook, Gonvick) and District 9 (Gatzke, Goodridge, Grygla).

Each member is entitled to one vote. If a husband and wife have applied for joint membership under Article I, the vote of either separately or both jointly shall constitute one joint vote. If joint membership has not been requested, only the spouse in whose name the account is listed is eligible to vote. Voting provisions are included under Articles, I, II and III of the Garden Valley By-Laws which are printed on pages 4 through 7 in the 1979 telephone directory.

In addition to reports on the cooperative's operations and financial status, information concerning the apparent need for a telephone rate increase will be presented at the June 5 meeting. The article by director Edgar Olson in Garden Valley's May 1979 "Voice of the Valley" newsletter provides an analysis of the economic conditions which require that Garden Valley re-evaluate its charges for local service. As noted in the "Perspective" article, the cooperative's rates for one-party residential service have been increased only once during the past 27 years.

A special feature of this year's session will provide members with an opportunity, before and after the meeting, to view various displays showing the cooperative's service activities and equipment, including the old type of telephones together with modern phones. These displays will demonstrate some of the technological improvements in the telephone system which have been accomplished by increasing the average investment per member nearly ten times — from $144 in 1951 to over $1,400 today.

Members attending the June 5 meeting will receive a small gift from the cooperative and will be eligible for a number of prizes to be awarded by drawings. Entertainment will again include the "Erskine Old Tymers" orchestra. Lunch will be served following adjournment.

SPEAKER tonight (Wednesday) at graduation exercises for the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical institute will be Luther Bjerke of Grand Forks, a former associate dean of the University of North Dakota, who is billed as North Dakota's first and only professional speaker. Known to many as "The Wild Norwegian from Beaver Creek, Bjerke speaks positively about how to build a rewarding lifestyle. Commencement exercises will start at 8 p.m. in the Lincoln high school auditorium. There are 357 graduates this year.

Lawn Mower Safety Class Set June 2

June 2 is the date scheduled for a lawn mower training course to be conducted by the Pennington county extension service. Howard Person, associate county extension agent, will be the instructor for the part of the course dealing with lawn mower safety, maintenance and lawn care.

Sponsors of the mower training course are Toro company and the Thief River branch of the Minnesota job service. The course is scheduled to begin at 1 p.m. at the Pennington county courthouse and is open to all persons age 12 and older.

Durenberger Asks Audit Of Oil Inventory

Senator Dave Durenberger has urged the department of energy to commission an independent audit of the domestic inventories of crude oil and other petroleum products.

In a letter to department of energy secretary James Schlesinger, Durenberger also asked for a study of "other matters related to the operations of the domestic petroleum indsutry during the time period immediately preceding and following the Iranian revolution."

Durenberger called the audit "essential to determining how severe the immediate energy crisis is and what steps are necessary to resolve the problem."

The senator asked the department of energy to report its findings to Congress. In addition to assessing the inventories, the report should address the "utilization of refinery capacity in the United States both before and after the Iranian revolution and its relationship to the changes in crude oil and petroleum stocks (and) any evidence of hoarding or other mainpulation of the middle distillate markets that could be contributing to the current severe shortages of diesel fuel or other distillate in certain regions of the country."

Durenberger said he is seeking the audit "because of the often conflicting reports Congress and the American public are receiving. No one really knows what our situation is or if the oil companies have been manipulating the market for their advantage. We can't continue to operate in the dark — or else we will truly end up living in the dark.

"It is essential that the American people learn the truth so that we can all make decisions based on numbers and facts we believe. The independent audit is regretably necessary due to an increasing lack of credibility in the often-conflicting numbers and statements used by the administration and the department of energy.

"I then have full confidence that all citizens will unite with their elected representatives and make the necessary but difficult decisions which will lead us back to self-sufficiency."

The letter to Schlesinger was signed by Durenberger and 24 other senators.

Sen. Boschwitz To Object To Appropriation

Perhaps $27,000 may not be a lot of money in federal government terms, acknowledges Senator Rudy Boschwitz. In fact, he concedes, it represents barely five one-millionths of one per cent of the $532 billion federal budget.

Nonetheless, says the Senator, he intends to make an issue of it when appropriation of that $27,000 reaches the Senate floor soon.

The $27,000 in question is the amount requested by ex-Presidents Gerald Ford and Richard Nixon for increased travel and office costs -- "in addition to the $700 some thousand they're already receiving in pensions and salaries for their staffs," according to Boschwitz.

"In my mind and judging from the mail I've received on this issue in the minds of many constituents, this request for the additional $27,000 is a classic example of excessive government spending.

"Certainly, some pension money should be available to ex-Presidents of the United States. Also, it may be all right to furnish them with a staff for a limited period after they leave office and are taking care of odds and ends that arose during their official tenure.

"But I have strong reservations about $601,000 still being spent on their office staffs, years after both left office.

"I believe some serious questions need to be raised in Congress about the level of funding for these functions, and I intend to ask them.

"I'm not optimistic," Boschwitz conceded, "that the fight over $27,000 can be won. Too many people out here regard that amount as too little to worry about. For example just last week the Senate, against my objection, voted to coin five medals in honor of worthy Americans at a cost of $15,000 each." The question isn't the worthiness of the five individuals they're unquestionably deserving. The question is why spend $15,000 when a $200 medal would convey our respect?

"However, despite the tendency of Congress to label as insignificant any amount under a billion or so dollars, I'm going to question this extra expenditure of $27,000. It's a good start to reminding Washington that $27,000 here and $15,000 there do, eventually, add up."

Set Hearing On State Plan For Handicapped

A public hearing will be held on Minnesota's 1980 state plan for meeting the requirements of Public Law 94-142, the education of all handicapped children act. The act requires the publishing of a state plan and an opportunity for the public to comment on it.

Public testimony will be taken on June 20 between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. in the auditorium of the St. Paul public school's administration building, 360 Colborne Street, St. Paul. The hearing wil be conducted by Jo Gascoigne, assistant director of special education for federal programs, Minnesota state department of education.

Written comment may be submitted on or before June 30 to Dr. Will Antell, assistant commissioner of education, division of special and compensatory education, Minnesota state department of education, 802 Capitol Square building, 550 Cedar street, St. Paul, Minnesota 55101. Copies of the state plan will be available on June 1 by written request or telephone through Dr. Antell's office (612) 296-7020, or through the office of a special education regional consultant located in Thief River Falls, Hibbing, Fergus Falls, Cambridge, Marshall, Faribault, Inver Grove Heights or St. Louis Park.

Purpose of the state plan is to verify to the United States office of education that Minnesota is in substantial compliance with Part B of the act and is eligible to receive federal funds. Approximately $16 million in federal funds will be made available to Minnesota in fiscal year 1980 for carrying out the intent of the act.

"HE'S DEAD ALL RIGHT" is the title of one of three plays to be presented by the Chameleon Theatre Company in dinner theatre performance June 1, 2, 8 and 9 at Lon's Restaurant in Thief River Falls. The comic one-act, written by John Gainfort, tells the story of a couple who, bombarded with TV and radio violence, play murder scenes in their own lives. When Julie Dempsey as Barbara finally really kills her husband Joe, played by Tony Ricci, she must explain the murder to a detective acquaintance who arrives to investigate. Cast as Clarence, the detective, is John Nicholson. The play is under the direction of Frank Womack.

Cut Paperwork In Cost-Free Lunch Program

Regulations that will reduce the paperwork involved in getting free and reduced price lunches for children in certain schools have been announced by assistant secretary of agriculture Carol Tucker Foreman.

Under the new rules, schools with at least 80 per cent of the students eligible for free and reduced price lunches may certify their students every two years; schools where all students receive free lunches may certify students every three years. Previously, schools were required to certify their students every year for the federally-reimbursed school lunch program.

"These changes are expected to reduce the paperwork burden on parents, states and schools," Foreman said. Schools approved to certify needy children once every two years must notify parents of children not certified as eligible and parents of newly enrolled students each year. This assures that these families are made aware of possible changes in their eligibility status.

Comments on the interim regulations should be sent to Margaret O'K. Glavin, Director, School Programs Division, Food and Nutrition Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture Washington, D.C. 20250. Comments must be received by January 15, 1980.

The regulations appeared in the May 18 Federal Register.

What started out to be an afternoon trip to Bemidji for an opening round Class AA Minnesota state high school tennis tournament match between Thief River Falls and Virginia turned out to be a tiring 12-hour marathon Tuesday for players, coaches and fans for both teams.

Originally scheduled to play at 3 p.m. on the Bemidji State University courts, the Prowlers and Blue Devils, because of the rain, would up facing each other 3½ hours later some 90 miles away at the Quadna resort near Hill City. We left Thief River Falls at 1 p.m. expecting to get back around 8:30. It was 1 a.m. when we arrived back in town.

After spending a considerable amount of time trying to dry the Bemidji courts, additional rain forced the entourage in the Nymore arena in Bemidji. But after the players had begun to warm up, the hockey arena, used for practice and youth games, was ruled an inadequate facility to host a state tournament match because of its very low ceiling that would eliminate the lobs, a slippery court surface and poor background.

Telephone calls lined up the Quadna indoor court facility; a fine place but nearly two hours away from Bemidji.

It's hard to tell how much the time, travel and indoor courts affected the outcome of Virginia's 3-2 victory.

"At Bemidji, the rain and the facility would have helped nobody," mentioned Virginia coach Dan Sundberg. "And we'd rather play in a facility where we can lob."

It was the Blue Devils' first indoors match of the year after some pre-season practice inside at Hibbing. The Prowlers, on the other hand, were playing indoors for the sixth time this spring.

This is the first year of two-class tennis competition in Minnesota and also the first time that opening round team matches were played outside the metropolitan area. Semifinals and finals will be played Saturday on the University of Minnesota courts in Minnespolis where all the singles and doubles matches of the individual competition will be held Thursday and Friday.

"We played well," pointed out disappointed Thief River Falls coach Whitey Olson who found no fault with the Quadna facility, but said, "It's kind of depressing that the state tournament has to be held in the woods."

First Round Class AA Tennis Match . . .

Virginia Follows Script In 3-2 State Meet Victory Over Prowlers

Submitted by coaches Whitey Olson and Dan Sundberg, there were two scripts written for Tuesday's Thief River Falls-Virginia opening round Class AA Minnesota state high school tennis tournament match. It was Sundberg's Blue Devils who were able to follow copy in a 3-2 victory on the Quadna resort indoor courts near Hill City.

Both coaches expected a close match to be decided at third singles where Virginia senior Jim Johnson was pitted against Thief River Falls junior Bill Holmes. Olson expected two wins in singles and Sunberg anticipated two wins in doubles, putting a heavy burden on Johnson and Holmes.

"We're going to have to win in singles," said Olson just prior to the start of the match that was shifted from Bemidji and delayed nearly 3½ hours because of rain.

"We're going to win both doubles and third singles," confided Sundberg moments later.

Johnson and Holmes treated spectators to some fine tennis, made even more crucial when the other three opening matches on Quadna's four courts were completed true to form before Johnson and Holmes finished their tense two-hour struggle.

Holmes opened with a narrow 7-6 victory that wasn't decided until he took the final point in a 5-4 tie breaker.

Johnson, whose luck could hardly be considered good in the first set that saw two Holmes volleys carom crazily off dead balls on the court and a crucial Holmes tie breaker shot that hit the net and crawled over, turned things around to claim a pair of 6-2 victories that were actually much closer than the scores would indicate.

Johnson said he didn't let the tough-luck first set loss bother him. "I just had to bear down," he said. "I became more aggressive. I was sitting back and getting beat. I had to force the issue and he was making more mistakes."

Olson, disappointed with the setback but not unhappy with the Prowlers' play, pinpointed Holmes' loss to a single point in the secondset. "I thought it was when it was 2-1 in the second set and Opie (Holmes) had two adds but didn't get the point to go ahead 3-1." That when Johnson became the aggressor, and eventually the winner.

In the other matches, correctly programed by both coaches, Thief River Falls picked up singles wins when junior Bill Holmes handled senior Tom Marcella 6-2, 7-5 in the day's final encounter and Mitch Rustad brushed off Ben Deutsch 6-1, 6-3 in a battle of juniors.

Virginia's doubles gave Sundberg the two wins he needed as sophomores Tom Schustarcih and Mark Maroste knocked off senior Bill Michalek and junior Tom Bjorkman 6-4, 7-5 while seniors Paul Edelstein and Greg Flaim outlasted junior Mark Collins and sophomore Mark Lundin 6-2, 7-6. Collins and Lundin, after struggling in the first set, came back to lead 5-3 in the second go-round and at 6-6 held a 3-0 edge in a tie breaker won by the Blue Devils 5-3.

"Strong doubles and satisfactory singles has been the history in Virginia," explained Sundberg who altered his team's line-up just prior to post-season play when Johnson was moved from first doubles into third singles; Schustarcih and Maroste went from second to first doubles; and Flaim was placed with Edelstein, Johnson's old partner, in second doubles. Those moves enabled the Blue Devils to beat Hibbing 3-2 in the Region 7 finals and now sends them into the Class AA state semifinals.

"We knew we had to beat Hibbing someplace in singles and Thief River, too, because we knew they would come out of there (Region 8AA)," mentioned Sundberg.

"We didn't play that badly in doubles," noted Olson.

But the edge still went to the Blue Devils who will face Henry Sibley, a 4-1 winner over Irondale Tuesday, in team semifinal play Saturday at the University of Minnesota courts in Minneapolis. Edina East and Willmar, a pair of 5-0 winners over Minneapolis Southwest and Burnsville, respectively, yesterday, will square off in the other 9 a.m. semifinal. The Class AA championship match will be played at 1 that afternoon.

In first round Class A play Tuesday, another Iron Range-Northwestern Minnesota match-up saw Gilbert of Region 7A edge Roseau of Region 8A 3-2 in a match that beat the rain at Bemidji. Elsewhere, St. Paul Academy stopped Madison 3-2, Blue Earth blanked Rochester Lourdes 5-0 and Blake shut out Staples 5-0. It'll be Gilbert vs. St. Paul Academy and Blue Earth vs. Blake in Saturday's semifinals.

Four Prowlers will continue state tournament play in the Class AA individual competition. Jury and Rustad in singles, along with Michalek and Bjorkman in doubles, will compete on the University of Minnesota courts Thursday at 11:30 a.m. Second round matches start at 3:30 that afternoon. On Friday the semifinals are scheduled for 9 a.m., with the third place and championship matches set for 1:30 p.m.

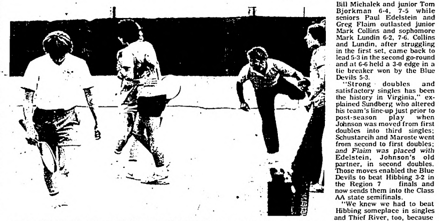
Edina East's Brian Johnson, last year's singles winner, is expected to get a stern test this year in Class AA activity. Wayzata's Kevin Easterly is considered the player to beat by some observers. In Class A, Jeff Carlson of Madison has been rated the favorite. Last year Jeff teamed with brother Greg to win the doubles title.

The Class AA and Class A doubles titles appear up for grabs.

Virginia 3, TRF 2

1. Bill Jury (TRF) def. Tom Marcella 6-2, 7-5.
2. Mitch Rustad (TRF) def. Ben Deutsch 6-1, 6-3.
3. Jim Johnson (Virginia) def. Bill Holmes 6-7, 6-2, 6-2.
1. Tom Schustarcih, Mark Maroste (Virginia) def. Bill Michalek, Tom Bjorkman 6-4, 7-5.
2. Paul Edelstein, Greg Flaim (Virginia) def. Mark Collins, Mark Lundin 6-2, 7-6.

PLAYING THIRD singles for Thief River Falls, Bill Holmes carried a lot of pressure heading into Tuesday's opening round Class AA Minnesota state high school tennis tournament match against Virginia. Holmes lunged and returned this shot against the Blue Devils' Jim Johnson, but it was Johnson who won the key encounter 6-7, 6-2, 6-2 as Virginia eliminated the Prowlers 3-2.



A MEET-CLINCHING victory at third singles by Virginia's Jim Johnson brought teammates and head coach Dan Sundberg over the net for congratulatory embraces while Thief River Falls' Bill Holmes walked off the Quadna resort courts dejectedly after the loss in Tuesday's opening round Class AA Minnesota state high school tennis tournament match. Johnson, wearing the hat, won the crucial encounter 6-7, 6-2 to secure a 3-2 victory for the Blue Devils.

Bob Fitzgerald Entered In 1979 State Golf Meet

Lincoln high school junior Bob Fitzgerald will compete today (Wednesday) and Thursday in the 1979 Class AA Minnesota state high school golf tournament at the Majestic Oaks Golf Club in Blaine.

Eighteen holes will be played each day over the challenging par 72, 6,337-yard course. Today's play starts at 10 a.m. with Thursday's action set to begin at 8 a.m.

A total of 118 participants have earned the right to play in the event. Some 63 players from 37 schools won berths in Class AA through region play. Another 55 golfers from 28 schools gained positions through district and region meets in the Class A division.

The group represents the best from 5,204 golfers who participated in the interscholastic program at 306 high schools throughout Minnesota this spring season.

Class AA

Defending state team champion Edina West, Region 6AA winner again this year, is favored to repeat as team titlist in Class AA. The low three scores each day from the team of four count toward the 36-hole team total. Edina West returns two players from last year's title winning squad. They are Chris Perry, a junior, who finished as medalist (77-71) and Chuck Mooty, who was ninth among last year's field of 64 at Majestic Oaks.

Three other schools which gained team berths in last year's tournament are back in this year's field of eight. They are perennial entry Austin, Henry Sibley of Mendota Heights and Minneapolis Roosevelt. Other teams entered include Cambridge, Litchfield, Mariner of White Bear Lake and Detroit Lakes.

With Edina West's Perry leading the assault on individual honors, he had the low qualifying score, a 70, during region competition. 10 other Class AA performers from last year's field and the remaining players will have their sights set on winning the gold medal. A top challenger to Perry could be Barry Kendall of Henry Sibley, who finished fourth in 1978, two strokes behind the leader.

Class A

Like in Class AA, the defending team champion is back in Class A. Waconia, a nine stroke victor over runner up Roseau in 1978, will once again be the team to beat. Stu Oftelie and Tony Honebrink, members of last year's contingent, are back this year. They finished in a tie for tenth place in the 1978 tourney field of 61 players.

One other team from last year's event has won their way back into the state tourney. Region One champion Austin Pacelli, fourth in the team field last year, is returning with three of their players from that 1978 team. Other team region kingpins this year include Montevideo, Deer River, Blue Earth, St. Paul Academy, Long Prairie and Mahnomen.

Twelve of last year's field of 61 players have earned return trips to the state tourney, including the fourth and sixth place finishers Mike Erickson of Deer River, fourth a year ago is back, as is last year's sixth place finisher, Dave Fenske of Montevideo.

Team and individuals in both classes will be shooting for tournament records. The low team total is 444, chalked up by Austin in 1974 and the low individual 36-hole count is 140, registered by Miles Prestemon of Bagley that same year.

Little Falls 2-0 Winner Over Bemidji In 8AA

Little Falls edged Sub Region 4 representative Bemidji 2-0 Tuesday in the first round of the 1979 Region 8AA high school baseball tournament being played at Little Falls.

Moorhead blanked Alexandria 3-0 in yesterday's other first round contest, setting the stage for today's (Wednesday) championship game.

Rain forced postponement of Tuesday's opening round Region 8A tournament games at Red Lake Falls. Rescheduled for tonight, the first round matches Bagley against Red Lake Falls at 6 p.m. and Fertile-Beltrami against Roseau at 8 o'clock. Championship game will be played Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

Little Falls scored both of its runs in the second inning when three walks loaded the bases, an error at shortstop scored one run and another walk forced in the second run.

Bemidji starting pitcher John Noga experienced control problems, walking six batters in 1 and two-third innings before being replaced by Roger Degerman.

Ten base runners were left stranded by the Lumberjacks

The hits were even at two apiece.

Kosel Named To MJCAA Squad

Northland community college sophomore Brad Kosel of Thief River Falls has been named to the 1979 Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA) all-state baseball team of the year, it was announced today by Northland coach Chet Engelman.

Kosel was named as the centerfielder on the MJCAA honor squad after a 1979 season that included a .294 batting average; 10 stolen bases in 11 attempts; and near-perfect defensive play that saw him handle 28 of 29 chances cleanly, record 19 put-outs and collect nine assists. His lone error came at shortstop.

Members of the MJCAA all-state team include pitchers Mike Mason, Normandale; Gerry Otto, Inver Hills; Scott Rustan, Itasca; and Larry Jampsa, Hibbing; catchers Al Olson, Itasca; and Bill Rosener, North Hennepin; first baseman Steve Sundberg, Brainerd; second baseman Joe Scanlon, Normandale; third baseman Brad Stoneberg, Inver Hills; shortstop Steve Doehne, Lakewood; utility infielder Tim Bosiacki, Vermilion; leftfielder Tony Veith, Brainerd; centerfielder Brad Kosel, Northland; rightfielder Tom Baurle, Normandale; and utility outfielder Mike Leahy, Normandale.

Northland finished its 1979 season last week by splitting a doubleheader against Fergus Falls. A two-run fourth inning double by Mike Carriere and three Northland double plays beat Fergus Falls 2-1 but the Spartans took the second game 3-2.

The Northmen won just two of 12 games this spring, adding a 4-3 victory over Crookston to the win over Fergus Falls. Losses came at the hands of Brainerd 5-1, 12-2, 9-1 and 6-2; Fergus Falls 3-2, 2-0 and 3-2; and Crookston 3-2, 2-0 and 5-2.

Erickson Hurls 4-Hit Shutout

Al Erickson pitched a four-hit shutout Friday as Action Realty beat Melvies 4-0 in Thief River Falls fast pitch softball league action.

It was a scoreless ball game until the top of the fourth inning when Wayne Smith led off with a double to right field and scored on an error. Two more Melvies errors led to the second run of the inning and a 2-0 Action Realty lead.

Single runs in the fifth and seventh padded the final margin to 4-0.

Coca-Cola beat Radio Shack 4-1 in Friday's second game. Tuesday's scheduled Dallmann Athletic, Inc. game against North Star Transport was postponed because of rain.

Radio Shack 1

Coca-Cola became the league's first double winner of the season with a 4-1 victory in Friday's doubleheader nightcap.

Run-scoring singles by Tony Johnson and Kim Johnson supplied Coca-Cola with a 2-0 first inning start.

The Johnsons got together for two more hits and another run in the third. Paul Walker, completed the attack in the fifth with a first-pitch home run deep over the left field fence.

Radio Shack avoided a shutout in the top of the sixth when Don Balmer walked and eventually scored on Bob Lundbohm's base hit.

Track Winners Remain The Same

For the third straight year it was the Moorhead boys and the St. Cloud Apollo girls who won team titles Saturday in the 1979 Region 8AA track meet at Brainerd.

The Spuds finished with 111 points to outlast a strong challenge from Sub Region 4 winner Bemidji with 86 points. St. Cloud Tech was third with 83 points.

It was much easier for the Eagles who won the girls portion of the event with 120 points. Detroit Lakes was a distant second with 58.

Top two individual in each event, plus the winning relay teams, will compete in the combined boys and girls Class AA state track meet Friday and Saturday at Park high school in the metropolitan suburb or Cottage Grove. Friday prelims start at 5 p.m. Saturday finals begin at 12 noon.

Fifteen Lincoln high school athletes participated in the Region 8AA meet, but there were no Prowlers qualifying for state meet spots.

RACING AFTER a shot from Virginia's Tom Marcella, Thief River Falls' Bill Jury managed to return the volley during Tuesday's Class AA Minnesota state high school tennis tournament match at the Quadna resort near Hill City. Jury beat Marcella 6-2, 7-5 at number one singles, but the Blue Devils edged the Prowlers 3-2 to move into the tournament semifinals. Jury will compete in the individual portion of the state meet Thursday and Friday in Minneapolis.

Harris Eyes State Golf Title

Tee times and pairings for the third edition of the Minnesota State High School League's annual state girls golf tournament, which will take place at Forest Hills Golf Club in Forest Lake Thursday and Friday, have been made.

For the first time in the short history of the tournament, competition will be conducted in classes — Class AA and Class A. This year a total of 103 girls representing 51 high schools will compete in the two-day, 36-hole affair. The participants won berths through play in region meets.

Thursday's first round of 18 holes will begin at noon with Friday's final day of play scheduled to start at 8 a.m.

The participants in both tournaments will play over Forest Hills' par 73, 5,347-yard layout.

Class A

Albany, last year's state runner-up, returns two players from that team and is a heavy favorite to capture first place in this year's Class A tournament. Led by returnees Kelly Skalicky and Kaye Stoulil, the Huskies will be joined in the team competition by region victors Caledonia, Redwood Falls, Duluth Cathedral, Elmore, Farmington, Wadena and Fosston.

Skalicky, a sophomore who was a star guard on Albany's 1979 state Class A runner-up basketball team, had the low qualifying round, 73, in last week's region play. She finished in 13th place in last year's tournament. Stoulil, who is the daughter of head coach Gordy Stoulil, was a 16th place finisher among last year's field of 78 players.

Other top individuals entered in this year's Class A field include Kris Hanson of Granite Falls, who is considered the individual favorite, and Nancy Harris of Roseau. Both were top ten finishers in last year's tourney. Hanson finished third and Harris ninth.

Class AA

Winner of the first two state tournaments, Alexandria, is back in this year's field of eight Class AA teams with another fine entry of players. But their chances of winning top honors won't be as great as in the past two years. Strong competition from region winners Burnsville, Elk River and Edina West will give the Cardinals all they want. Other region team champions entered as Hastings, Park Center, Milaca and Chaska.

Best among the Class AA individuals appears to be Elk River's Kelly Varty, second in last year's tournament.

State Track Meets Are Set This Week

Champions will be named today (Wednesday) and Thursday in Class A and Friday and Saturday in Class AA when this year's annual Minnesota State High School League track and field championships are conducted for boys and girls.

It will be the 57th running of boys competition and eighth for girls. For the first time in history boys and girls will gather together at the two separate meets for competition in their respective divisions.

Nearly 1,000 competitors representing more than 250 high schools will compete in the two meets.

Class A championships for boys and girls will be held at Apollo high school's Michie Field in St. Cloud. Today's preliminaries start at 5 p.m. with Thursday's final events scheduled to start at 1 p.m. In Class AA Friday's preliminaries begin at 5 p.m. with Saturday's final action set to start at 1 o'clock at the meet site, which is Park high school in Cottage Grove.

This year Class A events will be measured in yards for the last time. Beginning in 1980 all events will be measured metrically. This year's Class AA events will be measured in meters.

Defending boys' team champions are Burnsville in Class AA and Slayton in Class A. St. Paul Central won the girls' Class AA title last year while Buffalo Lake walked off with top honors in Class A.

Standout boy performers this year include Mounds View (AA) high jumper Van Troup, who has cleared seven feet; Tom Coles of Hutchinson (AA) who won last year's 440-yard dash; John Keohen of Montgomery-Lonsdale (A) who is the defending mile champion; and Jeff Byrd of Minneapolis Central (AA), a dashman.

Among the outstanding girls performers are Dana Watts of St. Paul Central (AA), last year's 440 dash champion; two-mile defending titlist Lani Granowski of Owatonna (AA); milers Joan Hopenspirger of Redwood Falls (A) and Ann Miles of Wadena (A); and high jumper Jeannie Blais of International Falls (AA), who has tied the all-time best of 5-8 this year.

Spring Weeds Get Jump On Planted Crops

Soil temperatures below normal for this time of the year combined with wet weather may delay planting crops, but these conditions don't stop some weeds from germinating. This is especially a problem for the farmer who has followed no-tillage or conservation-tillage practices.

Extension agronomist Oliver Strand at the University of Minnesota (UM) gives three ways of dealing with weeds that are emerging before small grains are planted. Each has its own costs and problems.

The cheapest, most commonly used way to kill cool season weeds would be shallow tillage. Growers who are committed to no-tillage, or who must avoid tillage that could result in soil erosion or crusting, may not be able to use this method.

The herbicide paraquat will kill annual weeds. It will likely cost more than shallow tillage. Applying it with ground equipment will leave wheel tracks in wet soil that could interfere with small grain emergence in the compacted area.

Some of the emerging weeds could be perennials, such as quackgrass and Canada thistle. Glyphosate (Round-up) is approved for use before planting small grains and alfalfa but it is expensive. Glyphosate is not as effective on emerging plants as when they reach 6-8 inches. Spot treatment may be feasible in some situations.

Bill Lueschen, agronomist at the UM southern experiment station in Waseca, gives similar advice for corn and soybean growers.

— If you will be planting corn or soybeans in a no-tillage situation where weeds have emerged, a herbicide combination that includes paraquat should be used.

— If you have a conservation tillage situation, a secondary tillage operation will help take the competitive advantage away from the weeds. Follow a regular weed program for the rest of the summer.

Interest Rate Increased On Savings Bonds

President Carter has announced an increase in the interest rate paid on U.S. savings bonds. Effective June 1 new sales and all outstanding E and H bonds will benefit from an interest rate increase from 6 per cent to 6½ per cent. New sales of Series E bonds will earn the new rate when held to maturity of five years.

New sales of Series H bonds which mature in 10 years will earn at 6½ per cent following their fifth year. On all outstanding savings bonds, the new rate will take effect following the first semi-annual compounding period after May 31. No action need be taken by current bond holders. The new rate will automatically be applied.

According to Cliff Sommer, Minnesota state volunteer chairman, "The new rate is in keeping with market conditions." When coupled with tax advantages, Sommer noted, "savings bonds remain an excellent long term savings program."

Sommer reported Minnesota savings bond purchases for the 1st quarter of 1979 were $33,841,837, down 13 per cent from last year's 1st quarter record of $38,164,641. He pointed out that publicity relating to product changes effective in 1980 had caused concern to current bond holders and buyers and cautioned that individuals seek accurate information from their local financial institutions prior to making changes in their current savings programs.

In this area, overall total sales of savings bonds dropped 17 per cent. Area counties are listed with their respective chairpersons, total sales of the first quarter of 1978 and the total sales for the first quarter of 1979.

Roseau county, J.R. Heneman, Warraod, $43,280 and $47,609.

Kittson county, S.M. Folland, Karlstad, $56,128 and $29,812.

Marshall county, R.C. Johnson, Stephen, $82,055 and $73,315.

Polk county, C.H. Zaffke, Crookston, $179,407 and $159,594.

Pennington county, G.A. Beito, Thief River Falls, $157,930 and $108,753.

Red Lake county, O.P. Gjerdingen, Red Lake Falls, $13,103 and $22,331.

Total sales for the first quarter of 1978: $531,903; Total sales for the first quarter of 1979: $441,414.

DINNER THEATRE PRODUCTION will open at Lon's Restaurant Friday, June 1, with three one-act plays planned for presentation by the Chameleon Theatre Company, a non-profit local theatre group. "Shut Up, Martha!" by Cleve Haubold will be among the plays presented. Plot of the comedy centers around Martha Washington's efforts to convince Benjamin Franklin to print a letter she is certain will "save the country." Cast members pictured in rehearsal for the production include (left to right) Tony Ricci as George Washington, John Walker cast as Timothy; Jay Gjernes playing Benjamin Franklin; and Roxanne Nicholson as Martha Washington. Director of the one-act is Carol Peterson.

SPECIAL AWARD winner at the Northland community college awards program last week at St. Bernard's church in Thief River Falls was sophomore Georgine Troska of Goodridge, most valuable player in the women's basketball team and the school scoring record holder with 732 points. She's headed for North Dakota State University in Fargo next year.

U of M Plans New Building Underground

A $15.8 million underground building — with solar heating and a reflector system designed to bring natural light to the lower floors — was among the items that Gov. Albert Quie recommended recently in his capital budget for the University of Minnesota.

"More than 95 per cent of the building will be underground," Donald P. Brown, university vice president for finance, told Quie last month while explaining the university's request.

Brown said that the structure will be a national demonstration project which will use federal and private money for pay for experiments in solar heating and a unique plan to use natural lighting underground.

"The building includes a light-capture process to take natural light down into the recesses of the building though the use of a series of mirrors and prisms," Brown said.

Documentation which the university provided to support its request said that underground construction is financially feasible.

"Initial costs of earth-sheltered, energy-independent buildings are competitive with standard above-ground construction, but operating and maintenance costs will be drastically reduced," the report said.

Charles Fairhurst, an advocate of earth-sheltered buildings, is chairman of the civil and mineral engineering department which will occupy the new building.

Fairhurst told the house education division recently that the university could save between 50 and 60 per cent of normal heating and cooling costs by building the structure underground.

About $1.3 million in federal money is being sought to pay for the more experimental aspects of the structure. A back-up heat and light system, however, will be constructed.

"They always tell us that you cannot build a structure like this without it leaking. They tell us that you cannot build a structure like this that people would like to be in for any period of time," Fairhurst said.

Fairhurst said he believes that Williamson hall, the university's underground bookstore and admissions office, goes a long way toward refuting some of those criticisms. Williamson was the first building of its kind in the country.

The proposed civil and mineral engineering building would be located about a block east of Williamson on the Minneapolis campus.

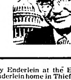
STAYING IN TOUCH!

Congressman
Arlan Stangeland



I recently introduced a concurrent resolution in the House urging the President to call upon the leaders of Mexico and Canada to convene a North American summit meeting on energy. Senator Robert Dole of Kansas is the sponsor of this resolution in the Senate.

The recent gasoline and diesel fuel shortage emphasizes the critical situation that is currently confronting our country due to the growing shortfall between domestic petroleum production and consumption. Our dependence on foreign oil is a major problem and the prevailing attitude in the United States is that we are helpless in our efforts to deal with the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries cartel.

In 1959, the United States received 70 per cent of its oil imports from OPEC countries, and by 1978 this country was receiving 83 per cent of its crude oil imports from these countries. According to the Department of Energy, crude oil and petroleum products imports from the OPEC members have increased, on the average, 20 per cent each year since 1970, and in 1978, petroleum imports supplied 44 per cent of U.S. demand as compared to the 1970 figure of 23 per cent.

A serious national security risk is posed to the United States and the rest of the free world by maintaining such an unhealthy dependence on foreign (OPEC) crude oil. It is imperative that strong steps be undertaken to alter this policy that we are currently pursuing. The U.S. and other oil consuming nations must avoid succumbing to the idea that crude oil does not fall under the principles of supply and demand, and that as oil consumers we are slaves to the unrestrained dictates of OPEC.

The summit called for by the Concurrent Resolution would provide a platform for discussions on mutual and individual energy problems facing the North American continent. We hope that through these discussions the United States, Canada, and Mexico will establish, as equal partners, a coordinated North American energy policy to address the needs of the continent and strengthen each nation. The summit meeting could alleviate growing Canadian and American dependence on unstable Persian Gulf Crude oil. In addition, it would provide transportation and refining advantages to all countries involved, coordinate efforts between the three countries regarding the development of alternative energy sources, improve diplomatic relations, and, most importantly, strengthen the North American continent as a political, economic, and trading partnership.

It is important that we work to bring about a unified effort for addressing energy issues on an international scale, rather than just those of one nation. The OPEC member nations offer an excellent example of the benefits that may accrue to a group of nations that band together in order to increase their bargaining position in the world market. Mexico, Canada, and the United States must create an improved state of trustworthy cooperation if we, as neighbors on the North American continent, are to lessen our dependence on the oil rich nations of the Middle East, and improve our energy technologies.

Show cases are also needed by the historical society. Persons who have show cases to sell or who would be willing to donate them to the society are asked to call the pioneer village during the hours it is open. A small desk or table to hold a typewriter is also needed.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

by Will Bernard

Private Horse?

Jerry was leafing through a magazine in his dentist's office when he noticed something familiar. There in a travel advertisement was a photograph of his own horse.

In high dudgeon, Jerry filed an invasion-of-privacy suit against the travel agency.

"That horse is my private property," he charged in court. "By using his picture without my permission, they have violated my right of privacy."

But the court turned down Jerry's claim, since there was no way for a reader to connect him with the horse. "As a practical matter," said the court, "this anonymous picture did not intrude upon his privacy at all."

Most courts do recognize a right of privacy in a person's own likeness. But, they do not extend that protection to a photograph of the person's property. Consider another example:

In an article on traffic problems, a magazine ran a picture of a car wreck. But the picture showed neither a driver nor a license plate. Here, too, when the car owner claimed an invasion of his privacy, the suit was dismissed. The court said:

"(The picture) in no way relates to or identifies any particular driver."

But suppose the property owner can somehow be identified. In another case, an advertisemant used a man's ancestral coat of arms, including his surname. When he sued for damages, the advertiser argued that it had made no direct reference to any particular individual.

Nonetheless, the court held that the man's privacy had indeed been invaded. The court said the distinctive coat of arms, along with the surname, had made his identity all too clear.

Caution While Cutting Can Reduce Lawnmower Injuries

A Service of Underwriters Laboratories Inc.

Fresh green blades of grass springing up from the lawn are a sure sign that spring has finally arrived. The joy of the moment soon loses its appeal for many people with the realization that their lush green lawn needs to be mowed and trimmed.

No matter whether you anticipate this task with glee, or dread the time spent keeping the yard neat, Underwriters Laboratories Inc. (UL), an independent, not-for-profit organization testing products for public safety, urges you to have a positive attitude toward safety while working in the yard. Safety awareness can help reduce the number of injuries associated with yard work. Human carelessness was a major factor in many of the power lawnmower accidents which injured an estimated 61,000 persons in 1977, according to U. S. Consumer Product Safety Commission figures.

To help you enjoy a safer spring and summer, UL offers these general guidelines for working in the yard:

- Wear proper clothing and shoes. Loose clothing could get caught in moving parts; footwear that doesn't provide good traction and balance could result in falls while mowing.
- Keep other people, especially children, away from the area being mowed.
- Know how to operate your lawnmower and other power tools before you use them. A few minutes reading the operating manual could save days in the hospital.

- Check the lawn for debris that could be thrown by your mower.

If you're using a mower with a gasoline fueled motor, these guidelines should be observed:

- Fill the gas tank outdoors with a funnel and stay away from possible ignition sources. Then replace the gas cap firmly when done.
- Be sure the mower is on level ground, disengage all clutches, and use the correct procedure described in the owner's manual for starting your mower.

Electrical tools present some different hazards because of their need for power cords. Some suggestions from UL when using these tools are:

- Wait for dry days before using electric lawnmowers, trimmers, and other tools.
- Use extension cords designed for outdoor work and rated for the power needs of your tools.
- Start using your electric lawnmower in the area nearest the electrical outlet, and then mow away from the outlet so that you will have the cord behind you, reducing the risk of cutting it.
- Use the handle to carry electrical tools, not the cord; and don't yank the plugs from the sockets by the cord.

Some additional tips for safe mowing from UL are:

- Mow across an incline if you are using a walk-behind mower. With a lawn tractor, mow up and down the incline to prevent the tractor from tipping over and pinning you underneath.
- Make sure all guards are in place while mowing and keep the lawnmower's blades sharp.
- If you do hit a foreign object or have a mower malfunction, always remember to turn off the mower and disconnect the power cord or spark plug wire before inspecting the damage. This will eliminate any chance of accidental starting.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

What If Our Founding Fathers Were With Us?

A crisis, or major national problem seems to follow this young nation every step along its way. Sometimes, I wonder — "What if?" What if those wise people whom we call our Founding Fathers were here to witness the current calamity — what would they say and do about our national energy problem?

I can just imagine their shock upon learning about the decades of government control over such a basic industry. They knew about unjust controls. They despised them almost as much as they disliked and distrusted arbitrary political power. In fact, one of the memorable passages of the Declaration of Independence accuses King George III of erecting ". . .a multitude of New Offices. . ." and of sending ". . .swarms of officers to harrass our People, and eat out their substance."

So if the Founding Fathers were here today, we might well see them look at each other and then announce in amazement: "It's incredible, but in many respects nothing seems to have changed. We Americans are still being treated like colonists.

"Overseas, other nations can vitrually dictate the quantity and price of the energy supplies we purchase. Here at home, we have created a colossal $10 billion dollar bureaucracy — the Department of Energy — at an approximate cost of $200 a year for every family of four. This bureaucracy is busy, busy, busy spending almost as much in a year as the major oil companies earn in profits. But while the industry tries to explore, produce, refine and market a product, the bureaucracy regulates and creates more paperwork, and actually contributes to our energy shortages. You call that common sense?"

And being men of wisdom, courage and action, I believe the Founding Fathers would call the leaders of the energy industry to the Congress and say: "This situation is intolerable. Our great young nation cannot afford to be at the mercy of other nations because of our dependence on energy. We must commit ourselves now to a policy of energy independence, and we must resolve to persevere until that goal has been reached.

"So go out, and find new oil and gas in American soil, and charge a profit fair enough to make Americans want to invest more to finance even more drilling and exploration.

"And use the more expensive techniques for pumping out the less accessible oil in old fields, for we need American Oil and American independence and a fair price above your costs is all that we ask.

"And beginning immediately, find ways to mine and transport more coal in an environmentally responsible manner. We know the tremendous opportunities coal offers us. At present, its 437 billion tons represents 74 per cent of all our energy reserves — an amount greater than all of the oil in the mideast. Yet, coal represents only 19 per cent of the energy we consume.

"If you should have sufficient funds, or if you shall generate new funds, do not neglect the other new sources. Ignore the doomsayers. We have shown that we can handle the entire nuclear technology spectrum. Do not ignore environmental or health constraints. Pay meticulous attention to the proper functioning of safety and back-up systems. Do everything possible to minimize human error.

"And go after other so-called exotic sources as well — sources that experts believe contain unbelievably large supplies of energy. Explore the seas, the winds, the temperatures of the earth and the power of sun. Explore the tar sands, and oil shale, and gasohol, and fusion and methane. Put forth all of your energy so that the energies of the citizens of this nation shall not be harnessed by the powers of government — ours or any other. Do all these things and thou shall be honored in our land. If the profits are great, reinvest them wisely for the benefit of all your shareholders and the American people. That is the American way. We remain strong and unique. Together, we will regain our independence."

Yes, that is what I believe our Forefathers would be telling us if they were here today. And with their kind of leadership, we would succeed. They proved that 200 years ago when they tackled and conquered a much tougher challenge. With the most pathetic of armies — untrained, outgunned and under supplied — they beat back one of the most powerful fighting forces in the world. But they did have each other, a goal, and the will to reach it. Perhaps that is why, shortly before the colonies declared their independence, John Adams said: "I have passed the Rubicon; swin or sink, live or die, survive or perish with my country — that is my unalterable determination."

$850 Remains In Marshall-Beltrami Fund

Marshall-Beltrami soil and water conservation district still has $850 in cost-share funds to be used for conservation practices. These funds must be earmarked for use by July 1, or they will be returned to the state office to be used in other areas of the state.

The new state cost-share program, administered by the district, has been in effect for a little over a year. Purpose of the program is to get lasting conservation and erosion controlling practices on the land.

The program is open to individuals, groups or units of government and the district will pay 75 per cent cost-share on the following practices: erosion control structures, strip cropping, diversions, stormwater control stystems, field windbreaks, animal waste control systems and critical area stabilization.

These practices are considered enduring practices and would remain on the land for a minimum of 10 years. In cases where the district and ASCS both cost-share on the same project, the total cost-share received cannot exceed 75 per cent.

Sign-ups will be handled on a first-come-first-served basis. Signers must be a cooperator of the district to be eligible and must sign up for the practice before work begins.

For further information, contact the district office at P.O. Box 16, Grygla, MN 56727 or call 294-6144.

Targeted Tax Credit Use Open To Employers

Employers can get a substantial "tax break" by qualifying for the targeted jobs tax credit, the Internal Revenue Service said. Unlike the new jobs credit which it replaces, the targeted jobs tax credit is not subject to the $100,000 overall limitation.

Claiming the credit on a Federal income tax return may be worth up to an additional $3,000 per certified employee for the employee's first year of employment and up to $1,500 per certified employee for the employee's second year of employment.

Targeted jobs tax credit is based on the wages of certain workers hired after September 26, 1978 (certain vocational rehabilitation employees may be hired before that date), and is a percentage of wages paid to them between January 1, 1979, and December 31, 1980.

These employees must be certified as members of any of seven economically and socially disadvantaged groups before the credit may be claimed. Generally, these groups include certain handicapped individuals, Vietnam-era veterans, welfare recipeints, ex-convicts, and certain groups of young people.

Local agencies which will certify members of these target groups are the state employment service and qualified schools offering a qualified cooperative education program.

More information about the targeted jobs tax credit is found in Publication 906, "Targeted Jobs Tax Credit and WIN Credit," which is free from the IRS.

Freshmen May Pre-Register June 12 At UND

Pre-registration for incoming freshmen at the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks will take place from June 12 to July 27, Kathy Martin, an admission counselor at the university has announced.

The pre-registration program, headed by Tom Seaworth of UND's university college, allows freshmen a chance to come on campus and determine fall class schedules with the help of an academic adviser. At the time a student pre-registers he or she may also take the optional placement exams in mathematics and language.

"It is not necessary for a student to select a specific major at the time of pre-registration," Miss Martin said. "There are a number of classes available to the students that fulfill the general requirements of every curriculum. The earlier a student pre-registers, the more classes he or she has to choose from."

About 1,500 students are expected to participate in the pre-registration program. Fall classes at the university begin August 28.

Grain Seeding Moves Rapidly In Past Week

Farmers made very good progress in planting their crops last week, according to the Minnesota crop and livestock reporting service. The step-up in field activity during the last two weeks has now brought plantings much closer to normal. With good weather, planting should be finished this week.

Tractor fuel supplies remained mostly adequate but with the rapid fieldwork pace last week, some farmers encountered slow or late fuel deliveries.

Farmers statewide have almost finished small grain seeding. The only substantial acreage left to seed is in extreme northern Minnesota. Spring wheat is 72 per cent seeded, oats 83 per cent, and barley 64 per cent. Most small grains in the southern districts and almost three-fourths in the central districts have emerged.

With small grain seeding in the wrap-up stages, farmers are now accelerating sunflower and potato planting in the northwest and west central districts. About 32 per cent of the sunflowers and 37 per cent of the potatoes are planted.

Sugarbeet planting is 90 per cent completed and flax acreage is 38 per cent seeded.

A man alone in a field . . . making the field ready for spring planting . . . perhaps is closer to God than he realizes.

The field didn't "just happen." The earth didn't "just happen." Those fruit trees, laden with blossoms, didn't choose to bloom just because they wanted to look pretty.

Stop and think about it. In the natural order of life, little is left to chance. There is a precision about the very rotation of the earth itself. There is a miracle embedded in each blade of grass.

All about us is the unmistakable evidence of Creation, by a Master Hand. The man in the field is, in some ways, closer to this creation than many of us, yet he too may very well be unaware of it. We can all capture or recapture this awareness by going to church regularly.

University Biennium Allotment Increased

University of Minnesota emerged from the 1979 legislative session with an appropriation of $443.6 million, an increase of $55.3 million over the 1977-79 biennium.

"The higher education appropriations bill authorizes an additional university expenditure of $158.15 million in estimated income from other sources, including tuition. The $601.7 million total authorization falls short of the $650 million university request.

"The legislation assumes that tuition rate increases will be held to seven per cent each year.

"Final appropriation was decided in conference committee meetings over the weekend and the bill was ready for the signature of the 11 members of the committee at 8 a.m. Monday.

Largest item in the budget was the faculty salary package totaling $30.5 million, added by the conference committee late Saturday. Staff pay raises were handled in other legislation.

Final bill is more than $7 million over the budget recommendations of Gov. Al Quie, but the conferees reduced the amount that Quie had recommended for handicapped student services and minority student retention.

In both cases, the bill reflected the desire of House conferees to emphasize direct student services over the hiring of more administrators.

University received $337,200 of the $477,100 it requested for improvements in services for the handicapped. Both the governor and the Senate finance committee had approved the larger amount.

Program to improve retention of minority and other disadvantaged students was funded at $700,000 for the biennium, a compromise between the $400,000 passed by the House and the $1 million approved by the Senate and the governor.

Some $1.15 million for women's intercollegiate athletics was approved. No funding was provided for men's sports although the university requested a state subsidy for men's athletics on the outstate campuses.

Conferees approved the university's full request for women's athletics in an effort to improve efforts to comply with federal legislation requiring equal opportunities for student athletes of both sexes.

Bill includes a rider proposed by Rep. William Dean, IR-Minneapolis, that asks the university to develop a plan for merging the men's and women's intercollegiate athletics departments.

Dean had originally proposed that the university be required to merge the men's and women's programs into one department with separate divisions for those sports that bring in money and those that do not. Money-making sports would then subsidize the others with the money to be divided equally between men and women.

Currently, only men's football, basketball and hockey programs produce revenue in the Twin Cities, the only campus affected by the dean rider.

Another ride in the legislation provides the university with a commission, which could total more than $500,000 over the biennium, on indirect costs charged to grants obtained from federal and private sources.

University collects a percentage of every research grant to reimburse the state for the costs of space and staff for laboratories and offices.

Under the new legislation, the university will be allowed to keep 2.5 per cent of these indirect costs as incentive to seek additional outside income. Senate had proposed five per cent and Sen. Robert Tennessen, DFL-Minneapolis, had recommended 10 per cent.

A $1.2 million appropriation for the purchase of new instructional equipment — full Senate funding — was a part of the final package. Money will be used to buy laboratory equipment for engineering and the physical sciences and instructional equipment for journalism, speech and communications, studio -arts and music.

Another $500,000 was provided to replace and repair equipment that the university already owns.

Conference committee funded only $900,000 of a requested $11.1 million to cover the projected increased costs of supplies, expenses and equipment. Price-level request, projected at a six per cent inflation rate, was a priority of the university administration in the legislative session.

Special appropriation of $266,000 in additional general research funds and an increase of $939,100 for university libraries were also included; $50,000 for more graduate student fellowships was also approved.

Legislature did not fund the university's request for $851,314 to administer increasing federal and state student aid programs. Instead, the legislation followed the governor's recommendation that the university use current student aid money which, Quie said, would not be needed because of expanding off-campus sources of student aid.

Other large increases in the bill are $1.88 million for replacement of a federal subsidy in the school of dentistry; $1 million to fund deficits in workers' and unemployment compensation; $2.36 million in projected fuel and utility cost increases; and $2.15 million for the operation of space in new buildings to be opened during the next two years.

The conferees also appropriated $744,000 for rapid improvement of student registration as proposed by Dean rather than the "phased" plan that the university requested.

By late Monday, university and legislative analysts had not calculated the number of positions included in the appropriation as approved in conference committee.

Gladiolus Show Set In August

Special 25th anniversary glad show will be held at Turtle River state park August 19, with special awards and a program to be pesented.

To raise high quality gladiolus, the Red River Valley Gladiolus Society advises growers to: Plant in full sun, give plenty of water, plant good quality bulbs, give glads plant food when you plant the bulbs, plant 5 to 6 inches deep for large bulbs so the wind doesn't tip over the plants and spray glads for thrip control.

Anyone wanting information on the special gladiolus show can contact Bob Kloubec, secretary, Red River Valley Gladiolus society, 606 Maple Lane, Moorhead.

Coal Transport Rates Affect Electrical Cost

Railroad rates for transporting western coal are playing an increasingly important role in the price Minnesotans pay for electricity, according to two economists at the University of Minnesota.

Jerry Fruin and Thomas Stinson are studying the costs of mining western coal, reclaiming the mined land, paying taxes and handling charges and transporting the fuel to various midwestern destinations. They find that transportation frequently exceeds all other expenses combined.

Fruin is a transportation specialist for the UM agricultural extension service and Stinson is an economist for the U.S. department of agriculture.

Minnesota's consumption of coal will nearly double from 1976 to 1985. Coal mined in Montana, North Dakota and Wyoming made up 74 per cent of the total coal tonnage consumed in Minnesota during 1976. Most of it was used to generate electricity.

Most western coal is shipped by unit trains — sets of locomotives and cars which remain together in a continuous cycle from mine to destination and back again. While these trains vary in length, they are often made up of about 100 cars, and carry about 10,000 tons of coal. Shipping rates on unit trains are about half the cost of single carload rates.

"One railroad company, the Burlington Northern (BN) dominates coal shipment to Minnesota," Fruin says. Using the 1978 BN rate schedule, Fruin and Stinson found transportation costs between Colstrip, Mont., and the Twin Cities to be only slightly less than the price of coal at the mine.

"In fact, production costs amount to only 32 per cent of the price of coal at Minneapolis, taxes account for 16 per cent, preparation and loading five per cent, while transportation accounts for 47 per cent of the cost," they report.

Recent rate changes will raise the proportion of transportation costs even higher. "Recent BN rate increases have substantially reduced western coal's favorable position in upper midwest markets," Fruin says. "The new rate, from Colstrip to Cohasset has increased 56 per cent over rates used in our study."

Costs of reclaiming mined land are 3-5 cents per ton of coal. This is less than one per cent of total mining costs. Taxes, however, vary from $2.63 per ton in Montana to $1.81 in North Dakota — 20 to 30 per cent of the cost at the mine. Federal taxes account for approximately 90 cents of the total tax bill per ton.

"Western coal is rapidly becoming a very important source of energy for Minnesota residents and industries," Fruin summarizes. "The public policies affecting the transportation and taxation of this fuel are of major importance to Minnesotans."

Details of the study can be found in extension folder 451, "Minnesota and Western Coal: Requirements, Costs and Implications." The publication is available from the University of Minnesota Bulletin Room, 3 Coffey Hall, St. Paul Minn., 55108.

Minn. Iron Found By Timber Cruiser

The timber cruiser of the 1850's knew what he had when he found it.

Legend has it that he kicked over a tree stump in the northern wilds of Minnesota, and there it was... what would become the rich, red iron ore of the mighty Mesabi iron range.

Lewis J. Merritt hurried back to Duluth and convinced his sons of the vast iron resource potential he had discovered. "I tell you, there is iron up there that's worth more than all the gold in California!"

The Merritt brothers did find rich iron ore. They mined the ore and shipped it on a large scale, but somehow the fortune that was to be made slipped through their hands.

The Mesabi iron range, about 70 miles north of Duluth, along with the Vermilion range in the Tower-Soudan area and the Cuyuna range in the Crosby Ironton area, have for all of the 20th century been the major source of America's iron ore. Because of this nation's demand for steel, huge companies began digging open pits, deep underground mines and building plants and railroads. People of all ethnic backgrounds rushed to the mining region to meet the needs of a booming new industry.

In the 1880's, a century ago, it was all just beginning.

By 1890, the Merritt brothers had found their "Mountain of Iron," and formed the Mountain Iron Company to harvest a deposite of soft hematite so rich and so accessible that traditional underground mining was unnecessary. This iron ore could simply be shoveled into rail cars and hauled to Lake Superior docks for vessel transport to the steel mills in the east.

Their discovery touched off a land boom on the Mesabi. Hundreds of companies organized, some to mine iron, but mostly to speculate in mining land.

The Merritts brought the first steam shovel to the Mesabi to strip away topsoil and scoop out the iron ore. With the backing of New York banks, they built miles of railroad. By the end of 1892 they were moving ore over their own rail lines for shipment from Superior, Wisconsin, docks.

The national panic of 1893 stalled the Merritts' expansion when eastern banks and railroads folded. Short of cash and already in the midst of railroad and dock construction, the Merritts entered into lease and loan agreements with two enterprises controlled by financier John D. Rockefeller — Oliver Iron Mining Company and American Steel Barge Company.

The panic of 1893 became the disaster of 1894. The Merritt's money ran out, their laborers rioted over the pay, and their creditors demanded satisfaction. Rockefeller advanced additional money, but the dream of fortune was over. The Merritts had to sell all their holdings to Rockefeller to meet their debts. Eventually, it was the Henry Oliver Company that mined the rich hematite the Merritts had uncovered.

Fortunes were made in mining the Mesabi iron, but by those who owned the land or used the ore, not by the pioneering Merritt borthers.

The Merritt brothers' story is one of many fascinating exhibits in the Iron Range Interpretative Center, which presents a panorama of unusual exhibits detailing the history and heritage of the people and industry of Northern Minnesota — yesterday, today and tomorrow. Unlike a museum, the exhibits involve the individual in the essence of the past through a series of sensory adventures. You see, feel, hear and experience a myriad of fascinating displays.

The Center, a division of the Iron Range Resources and Rehabilitation Board, is open every day of the year (10 - 6 from Oct. 16 to May 14; summer hours are 9-9), located just off U.S. Highway 169 between Hibbing and Chisholm. A free brochure is available from the Iron Range Interpretative Center, Box 392, Chisholm, MN 55719.

Berries, Sap Can Intoxicate Many Animals

Humans have long been known for their fondness of the fruit of the vine. But inebriation is not just a human foible, according to the current issue of International Wildlife magazine. Some animals also overindulge.

Take the case of hundreds of waxwings which, explains the National Wildlife Federation's bimonthly publication, fell victim to the intoxicating effects of fermented rowanberries in Sweden. While motorists were trying to cope with a stretch of icy roadway one winter day, some of the drunken birds began to weave back and forth along the shoulder, while others divebombed right into windshields. Many of the birds, rendered totally helpless, just sat in the middle of the road.

Ripe pyracantha berries have also been responsible for many a bird's drunkenness. "Robins in Florida sometimes get so tipsy on ripe pyracantha berries that they bump into each other or fly into telephone wires and windows," reports International Wildlife. And in southern Nevada, hordes of migrating robins were seen staggering around after lingering too long at the pyracantha bush. A few days later, sobered up, they continued on their way south.

"Drunk" may not be the correct term for birds in this condition. Ornithologist Stanley Temple of the University of Wisconsin explains in International Wildlife that when a bird or mammal gets intoxicated, the cause is usually not alcohol but some other toxic substance. That poison, Temple speculates, may be a particular plant's way of discouraging wildlife from eating it.

Other naturalists point out that wild fruits can indeed ferment, producing in animals the kinds of reactions normally associated with human intoxication. The big difference between inebriated people and animals is that humans may set out deliberately to addle their senses, while animals are usually taken unawares.

Insects are also susceptible, says International Wildlife. This weakness is recognized by butterfly hunters who use a devilish concoction of squashed bananas and sugar to tranquilize their quarry. Some insects are attracted by the sweetness of tree sap. When the sap ferments, wasps and butterflies are suddenly unable to fly. Bees, too, have been observed veering wildly after partaking of overripe nectar.

In addition to man, the elephant is a mammal with a long tradition of inebriation. This is due to the elephant's habit of feeding on various fermented fruits and then engaging in noisy drunken brawls. In Kruger national park in South Africa's Transvaal, they eat the pale yellow, plum-sized fruits of the marula tree. These delicacies have a sweetish acid taste which seem to have a special appeal and are said to ferment in the elephants' stomachs.

Probably the only animal ever grateful for having one too many is the pink pigeon of the island of Mauritius in the Indian Ocean. This rare bird eats a plant that stupefies him but also produces cyanide when exposed to water in the pigeon's system. The same plant contains another chemical which accumulates in the bird's body, making its flesh poisonous to people.

While other tastier pigeons were consumed to extinction, the tipsy pink variety was identified as a species to be left alone. "Thus", says International Wildlife, "the pink pigeon's renown as a drunk may be responsible for its survival as a species."

Insects Cause Losses For Grain Farmers

"Insects may be eating a big hole in your pocketbook," agriculture commissioner Mark W. Seetin advised Minnesota farmers recently recommending that they check a record spring carryover of grain in on-farm storage for insects as well as for moisture and mould damage.

He said that accumulating data indicates the potential losses from insect infestation of farm stored grains could amount to "millions if not tens of millions of dollars."

Special entomology research project established by the University of Minnesota agricultural experiment station in 1977 to evaluate stored grain insect problems has indicated in a limited survey the significant potential for losses.

Seventy-one per cent of the farm storage facilities filled with corn and 69 per cent of the farm storage facilities filled with wheat, that were surveyed in two areas of southern Minnesota were found to be insect infested.

"Admittedly the number of storage facilities examined was limited, but the areas chosen were representative and do suggest the potential scope of the problem, when added to the findings at selected country elevators of insect-infested samples from arm-delivered corn and wheat," commissioner Seetin stated.

He explained that just the mere presence of insects in farm grain delivered into marketing channels usually reduces the value by five to ten cents per bushel below the prevailing market price on corn and wheat. Docking farmers for insects and damage in grain is a standard marketing practice. Depending upon the type and number of insects in the lot delivered, the farmer may not be able to sell the grain at all.

On April 1 Minnesota farmers held an estimated 57 million bushels of corn and nearly 73 million bushels of wheat in on-farm storage with a combined market value of over $1 billion.

Commissioner Seetin said that the damage potential exists in all stored grain, including that under federal price support loan and in the national grain reserve, as well as that held for marketing or for feeding to livestock and poultry.

"Grain under federal price support has to be maintained at the quality and quantity at which it was placed under loan. Farmers who lose quality may find their nonrecourse loan option of delivering the grain to the government foreclosed, and instead will have to dig up the cash to pay off the loan plus interest," he pointed out.

Positive identification of the types of insects found in stored grain is important for farmers to determine the proper and most economic action to prevent further damage and marketing discounts. Not all of the 15 or more common grain insects found in this area will require fumigation or other chemical control.

Correcting moisture and mould problems in stored grain is of equal and companion importance. Research indicates that moist, heating, and moulding grain attracts insect pests like a magnet and accelerates their rates of reproduction and damage to the commodity. Regular bin and granary inspections with immediate appropriate corrective action can minimize the potential losses.

Aeration of stored grain is one of the simplest methods for avoiding or controlling moisture and insect problems in grain by farmers whose storage facilities have provision for forced air ventilation. Larger capacity bins may require physical grain movement, screening, and depending upon the number and types of insects, fumigation.

Stored grain insects of economic significance found in Minnesota farm storage and in shelled corn and wheat delivered to country elevators include: flat grain beetles (Cryptolestes), foreign grain beetles (Ahasverus), red flour beetles (Tribolium), larger black flour beetles (Cynaeus), hair fungus beetle (typhaea), Indian meal moth (Plodia), granary beetle (Trogoderma), saw-toothed grain beetle (Oryzaephilus), and the weevil (Sitophilus).

Stored grain insects which cannot be positively indentified locally may be sent in small plastic containers to the University of Minnesota Insect Information Clinic, Hodson hall, 1980 Folwell avenue, St. Paul, Minnesota 55108 for identification and recommendations. This service is free.

Movement Of Coal To Affect Midwest

As western coal comes to the rescue of energy-hungry midwesterners during the next decade, Minnesotans may notice some changes caused by the millions of tons of coal being shipped into and through their state each year.

For instance, farmers may pay more to move their grain to distant markets, motorists may think they are waiting longer at railroad crossings, and highway traffic and maintenance could increase.

Two economists at the University of Minnesota (UM) studied the effects of western coal transport as this energy source replaces dwindling oil and other fuel supplies. Jerry Fruin is a transportation specialist for the UM agricultural extension service and Thomas Stinson is an economist for the U.S. department of agriculture.

Minnesota's consumption of coal will nearly double from 1976 to 1985. Most of it will be used to generate electricity. About 25 million tons of fuel must enter the state to meet this need. An additional 16 million tons of western coal will pass through Minnesota on its way to Wisconsin, Illinois and Michigan by 1985.

Most western coal is shipped by unit trains — sets of locomotives and cars which remain together in a continuous cycle from mine to destination and back again. While these trains vary in length, they are often made up of about 100 cars, and carry about 10,000 tons of coal. Shipping rates for unit trains are about half the cost of single carload rates.

"Unit trains are the most efficient method of overland coal transportation," Fruin says. Currently, about 5½ unit trains carry coal into Minnesota each day on the average. "It appears there will be about 11 unit train round trips, or 22 one-way trips per day in 1985," he predicts.

"This growth adds to the traffic on a few already heavily traveled routes," Fruin observes. "A survey of communities along these major routes showed that their main concerns are for grade crossing safety, potential blocking of emergency vehicles and delays to motorists, as well as noise."

Blame for these problems must not be placed entirely on coal trains, however. "General freight traffic is also increasing," Fruin points out. "Unit trains move through towns faster than general freight, and cause very little switching delay and noise."

After the coal rolls over the Minnesota countryside, some of it will be transferred to Mississippi barges bound for points downstream. Currently, coal shipments travel upstream from eastern mines, providing a barge "backhaul" for Minnesota grain shipments.

"As grain exports have increased in recent years, a larger proportion of barges have had to be shipped to the Twin Cities empty," the economists say. "If western coal river shipments increase, more empty barges will be needed, and the coal will compete with grain for empty barges.

"The result could be an increase in the barge rates for downbound grain, which in turn, could make Minnesota grain less competitive in the U.S. and world markets," they conclude.

Much of the coal consumed within the state will go to smaller users who previously relied on natural gas or oil. Some of these users will not be situated along railroads.

"There will be an increase in the number of heavily loaded coal trucks on specific highways, with possible impacts in terms of traffic congestion and increased road maintenance," Fruin and Stinson predict. "An important consideration for Minnesota energy and transportation specialists is how the transportation and distribution of coal to small users should be organized to minimize economic and social costs."

Details of their study are contained in Extension Folder 451, "Minnesota and Western Coal: Requirements, Costs and Implications". The publication also reviews the mining process and the costs of extraction, reclamation, taxes and transportation of coal. It is available from the University of Minnesota Bulletin Room, 3 Coffey Hall, St. Paul, Minn. 55108.

Speak Against Incumbents' Protection Act

Taxpayers were being polled against, in a sense, on whether they want their tax dollars used to help pay campaign expenses of political candidates. Your 1978 federal income tax return asks whether you wish $1 of you tax payment used to subsidize Presidential election campaigns.

Congress provided for the voluntary check-off following the 1972 election. In 1976, this system provided $74 million.

But only 27 per cent of the taxpayers chose to check off $1 for that purpose; 73 per cent refused or didn't bother with the check-off at all.

Despite this poor showing of public support, a powerful bloc of leaders in the House of Representatives, supported by President Carter and organized labor, wants similar legislation enacted to benefit candidates for the House of Representatives and costing taxpayers an estimated $52 million plus $2 to $6 million in administrative expense.

H.R. 1, the House bill, sometimes is known as "the speaker's bill" because of its strong backing by house speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill (D-Mass.). One of the bill's sharpest critics, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, has dubbed it: "The Incumbents' Protection Act."

Under the proposal, a limit of $150,000 would be placed on the amount that could be spent on a single House campaign, and the government would match individual contributions of $100 or less, up to $60,000.

For years proponents have claimed that corporations, organized labor and other interest groups exert excessive influence on legislators because of large contributions. They propose taxpayer financing, coupled with a limit on spending, as the answer.

Calling this a "false argument," the chamber — in its legislative newsletter, "Congressional Action" — cites an interim report from the federal election commission (FEC) to show that these groups are not the main source of campaign funds.

FEC information not only reveals that individual contributions comprise about two-thirds of the funds raised but that corporate-backed political action committees (PACs) contributed only four per cent of the total.

According to the FEC, the 1,921 candidates for House and Senate seats in 1978 raised $198.5 million for their campaigns. But only $8.8 million, or about four per cent came from corporate-backed PACs, the real target of the legislation. Organized labor kicked in $9.4 million, and PACs of all kinds game $31.2 million, or only 16 per cent of the total.

You must look deeper for the true reason behind this special interest legislation. While it slaps a lid on campaign spending, it places no restriction on the Congressional perquisites, or "perks," that give incumbent members of Congress about $1 million worth of possible campaign aid during their two-year terms in the form of free mailings, travel expense, paid office staffs and use of government facilities. These, in effect, give them a $1 million head start over challengers, even though incumbents and challengers alike are held to the $150,000 limit. It also helps explain why 95 per cent of the House members seeking re-election were successful in 1978.

Challengers, of course, receive no "perks." Why should taxpayers' funds be used to hamstring their right to seek public office?

Learning The Language

Americans can take a certain amount of pride in the educational system which provides necessary learning for virtually all of the population. With the growth of the number of things which can be learned, however, it seems that some basics are being sacrificed. Among these is the English language and particularly spelling of even the most common words in our language.

Martin McGowan, former Minnesota newspaper publisher and now news service director at the College of St. Benedict in St. Joseph, laments about the situation in an article in the Minnesota Press.

McGowan had just returned from a conference of college news editors in Texas, where one of the speakers deplored the low state of writing ability among college students today and those who had recently graduated. The only hope the professor offered, however, was for teachers in the elementary and secondary schools to provide the colleges with students better prepared in their own language.

One flaw in that program, of course, is that graduates of education departments who are unable to spell correctly and who have not had emphasis on spelling are ill equipped to provide the necessary instruction.

McGowan notes a number of errors he had seen in recently-published papers. A St. Cloud newspaper story used the word "passafy" instead of "pacify" and "assanine" instead of "asinine". A Blue Earth story discussed "Dispersements" being made instead of "disbursements". A Minneapolis Tribune writer described something as "viscious" instead of "vicious" and a St. Cloud Diocesan paper carried an article mentioning a "principle problem" instead of "principal problem".

No publication is without errors; we make plenty of our own here at the Times. What we want to emphasize, however, is that there is a right way and a wrong way to spell every word and that emphasis should be placed on learning the right way: Spelling is an integral part of learning the language; in fact, it IS the language.

Literacy: Not For The Ghetto

Following editorial was written by Mary Kyle in the Twin Cities Courier, a newspaper published for the primary interests of the Twin Cities black community:

At long last, business and industry is waking up to one dismal fact of life. Despite all the hue and cry to the contrary, the U.S.A. threatens momentarily to become a nation of functional illiterates.

According to a recent article in the New York Times, this situation might not hurt the broadcast industry, where nothing more strenuous than looking and listening is required; but it sure plays havoc in the publishing field. When it comes to the printed word, that method of communication can be totally incomprehensible to persons who can scarcely read a stop sign. And their number, unfortunately, continues to increase...

This accounts for the growing concern of a certain paper company which supplies the raw materials for bringing the printed word into the public domain. The latest thrust to correct the problem would be admirable if certain underlying implications were not so despicable. At any rate, International Paper Company plans to launch an advertising campaign, the likes of which have seldom been seen. And Ogilvy and Mather ad agency has the job of putting the show on the road.

If all goes according to plan, the campaign gets off to a running start this summer with two-page ad spreads, specifically designed for high school and college kids. Hopefully the nation's youth will learn how to read faster, improve vocabulary, use English well, write with clarity, and a few dozen other aspects of good communication via the printed word.

Six national magazines are slated to receive these ads. Not one of these fall in the Black Press category for good reason. "We don't think we can take on the ghetto," says an agency executive. A representative of the client agreed. "No," he says, "This is for the kid who wants to learn to read and write better."

In their book, the kids from the country's ghettos lack what it takes to become better educated. How insulting can the corporate structure and its advertising geniuses get? Since the summer start-up was chosen because the company wants to reach teachers, the implication is almost too much to stomach. Perhaps some teachers could care less about the minority kids in their charge; but without doubt many ghetto teachers know, beyond question, that kids from all walks of life have a yen to learn when given a fighting chance.

If the company really wants to achieve something of value on national scale, as its marketing director claims, International Paper will reach out and touch every young person in the U.S.A., regardless of race, color, economic condition or place of residency. The time has long since passed when keeping minorities barefoot and ignorant was the name of the national game.

Recall Drivers, Too?

Following editorial is from the Herald-Journal published in Syracuse, N.Y.:

Did you ever wonder why unsafe automobiles are taken off the road, but unsafe drivers continue to drive?

Ken Nathanson, head of a group that calls itself "Citizens for Better Driving Records" says, "There's nothing dangerous about a parking lot full of cars until you put somebody behind the wheel of each one. Then you find a surprisingly large number of drivers have lost their licenses because of repeated traffic violations."

He cites an estimate by an organization called the National Highway Users federation that there are about 10 million unlicensed drivers on the nation's highways right now.

And nobody can even estimate how many drivers have "jumped states" — lost a driving license in one state and simply gone to another to get a new one.

The department of transportation does maintain a national driving register of nearly 6 million drivers whose licenses have been revoked or suspended. The register, however, is neither complete nor accurate, since many states do not use it and others who do use it do not always keep their input up-to-date.

Also, the government has no way of making the data from its register instantly available to police around the country. States and municipalities have to request the data and then wait two to three weeks for the information to be located and mailed back to them. The wait is discouraging, at best, counter productive at worst.

The national highway traffic safety administration has announced a pilot program to provide instant driver record information in three states. The starting date of the program — 1989 — is too far off and the scope is too limited.

What is needed is a national quick-response electronic communications (system) that will be accessible to every law enforcement agency in the country, so that every officer on patrol will have the capability to check a driver's license in a matter of minutes or seconds, through a national computer.

As Nathanson says, the states themselves also should improve their licensing procedures. Some states never call in drivers for retesting and others simply ignore previous driving records when issuing new licenses.

Also at fault are some judges, who deal out wrist-slapping fines and sentences on drivers convicted of reckless and drunk driving and driving without a license.

A study conducted in Oregon in 1974 revealed drivers convicted of driving without licenses were fined, on the average, $12.

We spent billions making our highways safe to drive on. The government keeps a hawk-like eye on manufacturers of automobiles, forcing recalls of millions of vehicles if flaws are detected.

We do far too little about what is potentially more hazardous than roads and cars together — the driver.

Let us recall drivers, too.

Interesting Opinions:

With regard to changing one's outlook, I don't know of any set of rules or exercises other than to quit worrying about one's age and turn this effort into thinking and acting young. — Charles Hughes.

"If the government can legislate two yearly tax tributes, it can doubtless legislate as a couple of summers each year and a double harvest time. How else are we going to meet these ever increasing taxes?
—Hybres, Roman citizen, 42 B.C.

Cancer Answers

"Cancer Answers" is a weekly column sponsored by the Red River Valley Medical society, the Red River Valley unit of the American Cancer society, and the Thief River Falls Times. Questions may be mailed to the editor, Thief River Falls Times. All questions will be answered, and those of a general interest will be published in "Cancer Answers."

Dear Cancer Answers:

Can warts turn into cancer? Should they be removed to avoid this possibility?

Mrs. J.S.

Dear Mrs. J.S.:

Warts are a simple infectious disease of the skin, completely unrelated to cancer. They are caused by a virus that infects the epidermis, which is the outer layer of skin. Ocassionally, warts appear on the moist membranes of the mouth or genital area — but these, too, are an infectious disease. There is no record of warts ever becoming cancerous.

About half of all warts disappear by themselves if left alone. Usually they need to be removed only when they are causing pain or other problems because of their size, number or location. Warts on the soles of the feet, for example, can cause considerable discomfort and are therefore generally removed. Often, individuals with warts seek treatment simply because they consider warts unattractive and embarrassing.

A sudden change in the appearance of a wart may be a sign of cancer. Some kinds of skin cancer can also look like warts. If you have a growth on your skin and you are not sure that it is a wart, or if the appearance of a wart begins to change, have it checked by your doctor. Remember, skin cancer, when treated early, is almost always curable.

Dear Cancer Answers:

What are the seven warning signals of cancer?

Miss M.W.

Dear Miss M.W.:

The seven warning signals of cancer can be easily remembered by the word CAUTION: each letter stands for one of the possible signals of cancer.

1. Change in bowel or bladder habits.
2. A sore that does not heal normally.
3. Unusual bleeding or discharge.
4. Thickening or lump in the breast or elsewhere.
5. Indigestion or difficulty in swallowing.
6. Obvious change in a wart or mole.
7. Nagging cough or hoarseness.

There seven signs, listed by the American Cancer Society, are based on the experiences of many physicians. They do not always mean cancer is present, but they should never be ignored. Remember, the first warning signs of cancer are usually painless.

If you develop any of these symptoms and it lasts for more than two weeks, see your doctor. Should you discover blood in your urine, for example or vaginal bleeding between periods, consult him or her immediately. Your doctor will then determine what diagnostic tests should be done.

Even in the absence of symptoms, it is extremely important to have complete physical examinations at regular intervals. Many times a doctor can discover cancer in its earliest stages, before any warning signs are apparent. For example, a rectal examination, especially important for men and women over 40, enables the diagnosis of many bowel tumors while they are still curable.

Prompt diagnosis is also the key to the cure of breast cancer. Many women are learning to practice breast self-examination at home. Physicians estimate that over 85 per cent of women who develop breast cancer could be cured if the disease were caught in its earliest stages.

IRS Help Available To Answer Questions

Hiring help for your business or home will probably increase your work and, for some people, that's bad news, notes the internal revenue service (IRS). But the IRS provides free information and assistance to answer employment tax questions.

For example, employers can attend an IRS-sponsored small business tax workshop to learn about their federal employment tax responsibilities. In addition, written instructions appear in Circular E, "Employer's Tax Guide" and in Publication 539, "Withholding Taxes and Reporting Requirements." These free booklets may be ordered and specific information about the next workshop to be held in this area may be obtained by calling the IRS tax assistance number listed in the telephone directory.

Generally, employer tax responsibilities follow along these lines:

Businesses or exempt organizations which pay taxable wages or have employees who report tip income must withhold federal income tax. Completed Form W-4, "Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificate," should be secured from each employee. Supplies of these and other forms are available through local IRS offices. The amount to be withheld from each wage payment depends upon the number of withholding allowances claimed on Form W-4, the employee's marital status and the frequency of wage payments.

Bear in mind that income tax should not be withheld from the wages of household help and agricultural labor unless both employer and employee agree to that arrangement.

Most employers must withhold half of the social security tax to be paid on earnings from wages or other employee funds set aside for that purpose. Social security withholding is matched by employers before paying the total tax to the IRS. Employers are liable for sicla security tax for household employees who earn $50 or more in cash wages during a calendar quarter.

Now how are social security tax and federal income tax withholding reported? Report them quarterly to the IRS on Form 941, "Employer's Quarterly Federal Tax Return." A sole proprietor filing Form 941 for business employees can include household employees on it. Otherwise, report taxes for domestic help on Form 942, "Employer's Quarterly Tax Return for Household Employees."

Those who have less than $200 of Form 941 tax liability per quarter may wait to pay the tax until they file the return. An employer with greater employment tax liability must pay at varying intervals during the quarter using FTD Form 501, "Federal Tax Deposit of Withheld Income and FICA Tax."

Since most of the tax due on Form 941 has been withheld from employees' wages, it belongs to them rather than to their employer. That's why employers should take special care to timely file and pay employment taxes to avoid penalties and possible criminal prosecution for misusing these funds, the IRS states.

A business employer who during this year or last year paid wages of at least $1,500 in any calendar quarter or who had at least one employee at any time in each of any 20 calendar weeks during the year is also liable for federal unemployment tax. Household employers who paid cash wages of $1,000 or more during any calendar quarter in the current or preceding year must also pay unemployment tax. This tax is paid by the employer and must not be deducted from employee's wages.

Federal unemployment tax is reported to the IRS by January 31 of next year on Fomr 940, "Employer's Annual Federal Unemployment Tax Return." If you owe less than $100 federal unemployment tax for the year, you may wait to pay the tax until you file the return. An employer with greater unemployment tax liability must pay quarterly using FTD Form 508, "Federal Tax Deposit of Unemployment Taxes."

Give a completed Form W-2, "Wage and Tax Statement," to each business and household employee you pay for services during the year by January 31 of the following year. If an employee leaves your employ during the year, you should furinsh the W-2 within 30 days after the last wage payment.

An employer does have tax responsibilities, but IRS help is as close as the nearest telephone.

'U'M Women's Athletics Said 'Underfunded'

University of Minnesota vice president said recently that women's inter-collegiate athletics are "seriously underfunded" when compared to men's programs.

But, he said, paying for women's programs out of revenues from the Gopher sports program could create more serious money problems for men's intercollegiate athletics.

Robert Stein testified Wednesday before the House education division in favor of the university's $1.4 million requested increase for women's intercollegiate athletics in the Twin Cities and for both men's and women's programs on the coordinate campuses.

University was an early leader in the funding of women's sports, he said, but competing schools are "coming up fast" in their spending because of increased pressure from the federal department of health, education and welfare (HEW).

Stein said HEW guidelines that enforce Title IX of the 1972 higher education amendments consider three areas in comparing men's and women's funding — scholarships and financial aid, recruiting, and other financial benefits for athletes.

"The university spends half as much on meals for women athletes as it spends on men and the men's spending is not out of line," Stein said. "In fact, it's less than at many other institutions."

Female athletes drive or take the bus to some athletic contests while the men fly, he said. Accommodations are also better for the men, who sleep two to a room on trips while the women must often stay four to a room.

Stein said the University's request is part of a "phased compliance approach" to provide similar opportunities to athletes of both sexes.

Rep. William Dean, IR-Minneapolis, said he would hate to see the University develop a large women's program only to have it slip into financial difficulty in 10 to 15 years when professional women's sports move into this area.

Floriculture $12.1 Million State Business

Floriculture — commercial production of flowers, foliage and bedding plants — generated upward of $12.1 million in gross income for this state's professional "green thumbers" last year, reports the Minnesota department of agriculture.

Minnesota ranked among the top ten producing states in half of the ten floriculture crops estimated, with the highest ranking sixth in pompom chrysanthemum cut flowers valued at $713,000 on the wholesale market.

Bedding plants accounted for the biggest block of gross income, $2.6 million from flowering bedding plants and $675,000 from vegetable plants. Decorative foliage plants added another $1.9 million gross value to this group of floriculture production in Minnesota.

Roses continue to be the most valuable single flower grown commercially in Minnesota, with a gross commercial value last year of just short of $2 million. Hybrid tea roses grossed $1.5 million and Sweetheart roses grossed over $500,000, wholesaled as cut flowers.

Production of flowering potted plants provided over $4.1 million of Minnesota's 1978 floriculture income. This included $1.2 million in poinsettias, $1.15 million in geraniums, $1.1 million in chrysanthemums, and $701,000 in lilies.

Despite the lower prices on the wholesale markets for most of these floriculture crops last year, the overall gross income was down only about 6.5 per cent from the 1977 level of over $12.9 million.

By midyear 1978, one out of every two U.S. women 16 years old and over was working or looking for work, according to the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Special Care Necessary For Older Horses

by Robert L. Stear, D.V.M.

As horses grow older, certain organs and body systems age faster than others. The wise horse owner will make adjustments in the older animal's diet and daily care to compensate for these physical changes. Generally the horse's teeth, digestive system and joints are the first areas to show signs of advancing age.

The adult horse has 24 broad, relatively flat molars which crack and grind its food. With age, these teeth can wear unevenly, so that grain and hay are not chewed properly. The appearance of whole grains or corn or oats in the manure and excessive salivation are generally signs of dental troubles.

When feed is not cracked and digested, the horse does not receive the nutrients contained in the feed. The solution is to have the horse's teeth floated (sharp points removed) so that feed is properly chewed. Your veterinarian can easily float a horse's teeth, using a special file. There are also commericial horse feeds available containing cracked corn and crimped oats. Grain prepared in this fashion is easier to digest.

Many older horses have internal parasites. Stomach and intestinal worms may absorb so much nutrient material that the horse may lose weight even when fed good quality hay and grain. This is why aging horses need regular dosing with a product effective against internal parasites. Your veterinarian can adivse on the appropriate worming schedule and product for your horse.

If you choose to retire your faithful mount to pasture, don't forget to check the horse at least once a day. When pastured with younger animals, an older horse can't always compete for feed and may gradually weaken. You may want to feed the older horse his grain separately. Any horse that spends a lot of time out of doors should be regularly groomed and examined in a dry stall.

There are numerous hoof infections that begin when a horse spends a long time in a muddy field. A slight irritation that passes unnoticed under some caked mud can cause a serious infection later. Treat leg cuts and sores promptly and use bandages if your veterinanrian recommends them.

Arthritis is probably the most common ailment seen in older horses. Joints become inflamed and the horse is noticeably stiff. Although your veterinarian can prescribe various drugs to control the inflammation, there is no permanent cure for arthritis. A dry stall, well-drained pasture — and regular moderate exercise all aid in keeping the horse's joints flexible.

If you decide to sell an aging horse, be selective about prospective buyers. You have a responsbility to place the animal with an owner who will not abuse it. An older animal may be the perfect match for the beginner who needs a quiet mount, but unsuitable for the child who wishes to practice jumping every day. If you realize your aging horse's condition is deteriorating, talk to your veterinarian about a humane method of euthanasia.

Quie Budget For University Is $69 Million

Gov. Albert H. Quie's capital budget for the next two years includes $69 million for the University of Minnesota out of a total $262.6 in capital improvements planned for the state.

University officials had requested $103 million for capital improvement projects. The governor's capital budget was released recently at a news conference in his office.

Quie responded to charges that his budget rewards the university for failing to follow the guidelines set by Quie and former governor Rudy Perpich. Both governors had asked the state post-secondary education systems to hold the line on their budget proposals.

Quie said that he did not apply a fixed percentage to all post-secondary systems but that he based his judgments on the merits of individual projects among the systems.

He said he asked the systems to state their priorities and found that the university's requests for agronomy and business buildings, for example, were high on his list as well as the university's.

"I think that both of those have important training programs, important to the economy of Minnesota. The training that will take place in the agronomy building will enhance the economy of the state of Minnesota. It's a wise expenditure of money to do that now," Quie said.

Quie also fielded a question about the wisdom of funding new construction for higher education while further enrollment declines are predicted for the future.

The declines, he said, will not come during the next four years. "That bubble is going to be there a while. We're going to have serious trouble in 1985 but we have some time until then."

The Quie budget for the university includes, among other things, $48.3 million for new buildings, $3.5 million for renovating and remodeling existing buildings, $13.2 million for energy-related projects, $1 million to improve access for handicapped people, and $968,000 for planning future buildings.

The governor recommended that $43.2 million of the capital projects be considered during the 1979 legislative session and $25.9 million in 1980.

Among the projects he listed for 1979 action are: $15.8 million for a new underground civil and mineral engineering building in Minneapolis; $12.5 million for a new veterinary medicine building in St. Paul; $5.7 million for conversion of the Minneapolis campus heating plant to coal; $3.3 million for a new business and economics building in Duluth; $3.4 million for a new physical education building in Crookston; and $2 million for a poultry research facility in St. Paul.

For 1980 considerations, Quie listed an additional $4 million for the Minneapolis campus heating plant; $7 million for a new agronomy and soil science building; $3.8 million for an addition to the business administration building on the West Bank; and $2 million for renovation of Smith and Folwell Halls, two of the oldest buildings on the Minneapolis campus;

Also $1 million for a transportation program; $1 million for renovating buildings for the school of public health; $1 million to improve access to existing buildings for handicapped people; $1 million for additional energy conservation and conversion projects; $2.1 million for heating plant improvements in Crookston; $500,000 for meeting requirements of the occupational safety and health act; and $430,000 for various improvements on the Waseca campus.

STEINER . . .

Mrs. Ethel Moe, Mrs. Bernice Vatsaas and Mrs. Ida Omlid attended the program in the Asphult Lutheran church in the Pioneer Village Sunday afternoon. Guest speaker was Lenore Johnson of Ada, secretary of the Red River Valley historical society and who organized the Norman county historical society 20 years ago.

Health Hazard Of Asbestos To Be Explored

Midwest office of the U.S. environmental protection agency (EPA) has launched a comprehensive assistance program to help Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio and Wisconsin deal with possible health hazards caused by deteriorating or damaged sprayed-asbestos surfaces in schools.

"To help identify, eliminate or contain asbestos hazards in schools and other buildings, EPA is mailing asbestos information to state and school officials. This information explains how to identify damaged material containing asbestos, evaluate the risk, and correct or contain the problem," said John McGuire, EPA midwest regional administrator.

"We'll also be working closely with state toxic coordinators, providing them with training, technical and general assistance," McGuire said.

A Regionwide EPA technical meeting on asbestos will be held in Chicago, IL on April 23, 1979. In addition, EPA's Midwest office has scheduled public meetings on asbestos hazards in other cities, including one in Minneapolis on May 3 at the Curtis hotel.

"Prior to 1973, the interiors of many public, commercial and other buildings were routinely sprayed with materials containing asbestos for fireproofing, insulation or decoration," McGuire said. "Our major concern is schools, where damaged or deteriorating ceilings and other asbestos-coated surfaces may expose a large number of children to airborne asbestos fibers."

The occupational hazard of asbestos (asbestosis) has been known for some 40 years, McGuire said, but the link between the low levels of asbestos exposure and various forms of cancer was only recently established.

"Since school children are young and since asbestos-related cancer takes 20 years or more to develop there is a good chance that exposed children may succumb to cancer within their lifetimes. That's why we must take precautionary measures now," said McGuire.

Asbestos hazard in schools is real but not widespread. Dr. Lyman Dondie, a pharmacologist-toxicologist with EPA's Midwest (Region V) office, said: "Although more than 20 per cent of Midwest schools probably contain asbestos-sprayed material, the percentage of children that may actually be exposed to an asbestos hazard is relatively low — one to five per cent." He emphasized that asbestos is dangerous only when asbestos-sprayed material is damaged and asbestos fibers are released into the air. "Once the fibers get into the lungs through the nose and mouth, they stay there for life," Condie said. "Asbestos fibers are very hard to detect inside the boyd, and they're virtually indestructable."

EPA banned the use of asbestos sprays for fireproofing and insulation in 1973, and in 1978 it outlawed asbestos sprays used for decorative purposes.

EPA toll-free number to call for more asbestos information in Minnesota is (800) 621-3191. Toll-free calls may also be made to EPA in Washington, DC, (800) 424-9065.

. . . Salad To Dessert In 20 Minutes (Or Less)

Few people relish the thought of working all day and then coming home and cooking a big dinner . . . especially if it's dinner for one. "Why bother?" is a familiar comment.

Why, indeed? And yet, a tasty nutritious meal, easily and quickly prepared at day's end can do wonders for your morale.

You can put such a meal on the table, complete with salad and dessert in as little as 20 minutes — and in one third that time if you have a microwave oven.

The delicious menu includes lasagna with meat sauce, a tossed salad, garlic bread, ice cream, a hot beverage or your favorite chilled glass of wine.

This Italian meal centers around the zesty flavored entree — lasagna. A new, economical (less than a dollar) single serving frozen boil 'n bag lasagna, recently introduced nationally by the Jolly Green Giant is ready to serve in just 20 minutes. . . 6 to 7 minutes if microwaved. While the entree is heating you have just enough time to toss a crisp garden salad of lettuce, tomatoes and cucumbers, garnished with cheese andcroutons;and drizzled with an Italian dressing.

Slices of French or Italian bread, toasted to golden brown and spread with garlic seasoned butter for speedy garlic toast are a great accompaniment.

Spumoni ice cream makes a refreshing, on-hand dessert to enjoy with freshly brewed coffee or chilled wine. The soft glow of candelight, a checkered tablecloth and soothing background music set the Italian mood. And there you have it! Dinner for one in just 20 minutes. It's so easy you might like to add another serving of lasagna and make it dinner for two!

Speedy single serving boil 'n bag entrees are a boon not only to the 51% of the U.S. households who are one or two persons, but are also ideal for fragmented meal situations and individual eating tastes of larger families.

Morals Are Issue In Genetics Field

by Maureen Smith
University News

No area of research arouses more hope and fear and curiosity than human genetics, and it isn't surprising.

Think about tampering with human reproduction — think about wombs for rent and human eggs for sale, or a hundred little Hiters created by cloning — and genetic research seems to be putting the most deeply held human values in peril.

Then think about offering new hope to people who have been unable to have children or who hesitate to have children for fear they will be afflicted with genetic disorders, and genetic research seems to be one of the most worthy and compassionate of endeavors.

V. Elving Anderson, professor of genetics and cell biology and acting director of the Dight institute for human genetics at the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, understands the hopes and fears that are aroused by genetic research, but he thinks people may look to the research with greater expectations and greater alarm than is justified.

Some people take the view that "nothing should be done for the first time" because it may lead to something harmful, Anderson said. This attitude has been characterized as the "slippery slope" view of science. "I think the problem is that one step could lead to another step, but it does not inevitably do so," he said. "We are always in the difficult position of having to evaluate each step as it comes."

Research at the Dight institute has focused on the genetic factors in such problems as mental retardation, psychotic disorders, and epilepsy. "We deal with relatively common conditions and look for genetic factors. Any time we deal with something that's common, we know that it will be a mixed bag and there will be many causes," Anderson said.

Jaroslav Cervenka is a professor of human and oral genetics whose primary research interest is chromosome disorders. Like Anderson, Cervenka is interested both in seeking new knowledge and in making what is already known available to those who need it. Both men offer genetic counseling in addition to their teaching and research.

Genetic counseling in essence is "providing information to individuals and families so that they can make their own reproductive plans," Anderson said. "It's not prescriptive — it's counseling in the sense of helping people make their own choices."

"POPSICLES" vocal group from Northland community college entertained at the awards programs for NCC Wednesday evening at St. Bernard's Catholic church basement. Members of the group include, left to right, Diane Mosbeck, Sandy Gordon, Jeri Lundin, Dave Kraemer, Cheri Schindler, Chris Kays, Kathy Shetler and Randy Hendrickson. The group is under the direction of Les Torgerson.

Usually people who come for genetic counseling have a genetic disorder themselves, or they have a child with a problem and want to know how high the risk is that another child would have the same problem. Counseling is also being sought increasingly by women over 35 who want to have a baby but are concerned about the risks of chromosome disorders.

Several pieces of information go into the estimate of risk. The counselor will take a family history, review the latest information on the disorder, and perhaps order chromosomal and biochemical tests.

But a decision cannot be based on facts alone, and the counselor will always explore the couple's own feelings about the problem. "Sometimes feelings of guilt are expressed that are not appropriate," Anderson said. "Sometimes the husband and wife have different views that they may not even have expressed to each other."

Sometimes the woman comes for counseling alone, Cervenka said. "Then you know something is wrong, because they both should come." It is preferable for both parents to be present at each stage of the counseling, he said.

In the case of some conditions — notably Tay-Sachs disease and sickle cell anemia — it is now possible to test for carrier status and to state the risks for couples before they have any children at all.

Genetic conditions that are chromosomal and biochemical can be diagnosed in the womb with almost total accuracy. If prental diagnosis reveals a serious disorder, the couple can prepare themselves psychologically for the care of the child or decide on an abortion. The most common technique for prental diagnosis is amniocentesis, in which a small amount of amniotic fluid is withdrawn from the uterus and analyzed.

It is especially when abortion is an option that a counselor's own values might be reflected. "It is possible to describe amniocentesis in such a way as to say, 'You wouldn't want to do that, would you?' " Anderson said. "In the way you present information you may knowingly or unknowingly reflect your own value choices."

Both Anderson and Cervenka said it is important that counselors not impose their views for or against abortion, or for or against pregnancy in a high-risk situation — on their clients. "It's a matter of principle that you do not ever tell the parents what they should do," Cervenka said.

Anderson said he believes most counselors respect the values and religious beliefs of their clients. "I do not introduce religious considerations, but personally, as a Christian, I would be sensitive to a couple's religious concerns. I don't mean to say that I'm unique. I think that counselors are generally very thoughtful."

In deciding whether to have a child, a couple will want to weigh both the burden and the risk of having a child with a genetic defect. The burden will be determined by the seriousness of the disorder and the emotional and financial resources of the family.

If one parent has a condition that is transmitted as a dominant trait, the risk of each child is 50 per cent. Huntington's chorea, for example, is a progressive disease that typically strikes at around age 35 and is characterized by mental deterioration terminating in dementia. Often people don't even know they have the disease until after they have had children. If they do know, they know that they are facing a high-risk, high-burden situation.

In the case of a sex-linked recessive trait such as hemophilia, the risk is 50 per cent for each boy (or 25 per cent overall). Another example is Duchenne's muscular dystrophy, which is "a terrible disorder," Cervenka said. "All of the affected will die. They will be born beautiful kids, and most of them will die before they are 10." Again, the risk is high and the burden enormous.

Disorders that are polygenic, or multifactoral, in origin have lower risks. "When we say multifactoral, it means that we're dummies," Cervenka said. "We don't know what the cause is, so we say there are many factors."

If healthy parents have a child with a cleft lip or cleft palate (a polygenic disorder), the risk is between 2 and 4 per cent that their second child will be similarly afflicted. If two children are affected, the risk for the next child is between 5 and 9 per cent. "That means there is a 95 per cent chance that the child will be healthy," Cervenka said. Risk figures for polygenic disorders are arrived at empirically, "calculated from thousands of pedigrees," he said.

The sex of a fetus can be determined by prental diagnosis, and such a determination "might be useful if we're dealing with a sex-linked trait like hemophilia," Anderson said. The parents might choose an abortion if the child is to be a boy.

"Short of that, most genetic counselors that I know whould not even carry out the study if there was any indication that the reason was to terminate the pregnancy if the fetus was the 'wrong' sex," Anderson said. "This contradicts what I said before about always giving the family the information and letting them decide. It is judged that this reason does not justify the test."

Cervenka agreed. "We would not do the amniocentesis for that reason, because we are medical people and amniocentesis is used to detect medical problems."

Sheep Prices Fall In All Market Areas

Farmers have learned to live with it, but consumers might find it quite a shock to learn the farm value of wool in garments, rugs, and bedding made of that renewable livestock byproduct instead of from short and expensive oil, suggests agriculture commissioner Mark W. Seetin.

Would you believe 67 cents a pound?

That is what the average Minnesota sheep rancher received for wool sheared from his flock and sold last year to the textile and carpet industries.

Minnesota's farm wool crop for 1978 is estimated by the state-federal crop and livestock reporting service at nearly 1.86-million pounds, with a farm value of $1,244,000 at the market price average of 67 cents.

Wool has long been one of the most severely depressed among all farm produced commodities, and now commissioner Seetin observed "a pound of wool won't even buy a gallon of tractor fuel."

That, coupled with the fact that the sheep that produce the wool also are the lowest priced farm red meat animals, helps explain why sheep and wool production continue to decline.

Minnesota ranked 14th in wool production and 15th in sheep and lambs marketed for meat production in 1978. Wool production was the lowest on record, and while down only 2.5 per cent from 1977, the 1978 wool crop was less than 46 per cent of the nearly 4.1-million pounds sheared from Minnesota sheep in 1968.

Slaughter marketings of 182,000 sheep and lambs last year was 19 per cent below 1977 and slightly over one third the volume Minnesota ranchers marketed in 1968 for red meats production. Ranchers averaged less than 21 cents a pound for sheep and 64 cents a pound for lambs marketed last year.

Spotting pigeongrass no longer spells disaster for your wheat crop.

Now Stampede 3E, the *post*emergence herbicide, stamps out weeds after you spot them.

With Spring coming so late this year, pigeongrass is really on the rampage. If it's not controlled it can reduce your wheat yield by as much as 60%.

To help handle this major weed problem, the EPA has granted a number of North Central States an emergency exemption for STAMPEDE, the *post*emergence herbicide from ROHM and HAAS.

Last year, STAMPEDE was used in your area with excellent results. Mark Andrews, Jr., a wheat grower in Mapleton, North Dakota, reports: "My extension Agronomist told me about a new chemical on the market called STAMPEDE. The results were tremendous! We had pigeongrass population in the field that, if it hadn't been taken care of by the STAMPEDE, I'm afraid that we would have been forced to plough the thing down and not raise the crop that year."

Don't let pigeongrass rob you this year. Act now. Get your supply of STAMPEDE at your AGSCO, CENEX, or GRAND FORKS SEED Dealer, today!

Call Early To Book Your Acreage.

AT LAST, YOU CAN POLISH OFF WILD OATS, AND MAKE SOME REAL MONEY ON FLAX.

AND HERE'S WHAT IT MEANS WHEN YOU DO.

Herbicide	Yield*	Increase over check
Check	12.5 bu.	—
Leading wild oat herbicide	16.1 bu.	29%
Asulox	23.9 bu.	91%

*Yield increase will vary with severity of wild oats infestation.

This year, consider setting some of your best acres aside for this profitable cash crop. Because now you can be sure wild oats won't take over.

Here's why. The EPA has granted a Section 18 specific exemption for the use of Asulox for post-emergent weed control in flax in Kittson, Lake of the Woods, Marshall, Pennington and Roseau Counties.

Asulox controls wild oats plus wild buckwheat and foxtail in the same application. Just spray it on by ground or air when wild oats are in the three- to four-leaf stage, and you'll set yourself up for yield increases on the order of those shown above. These were the results of 8 separate tests run right here in this area by Rhône-Poulenc, makers of Asulox, as well as Bronate and Buctril.

Now, just a few cautions. Under EPA regulations, Asulox must be applied on flax by a certified private or commercial applicator. Great care should be taken to avoid spray drift onto adjacent crops. And don't apply when the crop is under stress, or before flax is at least two inches tall.

Control of wild oats is usually achieved within 2-3 weeks after Asulox application.

The exemption granted by the EPA limits the amount of Asulox that can be sold. The quantity purchased in your name will be noted for EPA records. So don't miss out on this opportunity for outstanding weed control. Order your supply from your dealer today, before he has a chance to run out. Because, at last, you can polish off wild oats, and make some real money on flax.

Sandburg Works Featured In NCC Production

Northland community college theatre department will present its spring quarter production, "The World of Carl Sandburg", on Wednesday, June 6, at 8 p.m. in the college theatre.

The production is staged presentation of a compilation of Sandburg's work, put together by Normin Corwin, and drawn from "Chicago Poems", "Cornhuskers", "The American Songbag", "The People, Yes", "Remembrance Rock", "Abraham Lincoln: The Prairie Years" and other well-known works by Sandburg.

The original production of "The World of Carl Sandburg" was presented on Broadway with Bette Davis, Gary Merrill and Clarke Allen performing the feature roles. Featured in the Northland community college production will be Karl Dalager, Jon Gibson, Dave Erickson, Greg Strand, Mike Thompson, Janet Davidson, Diane Mosbeck, Diane Holen, Arlyne Forsberg, Candy Joppru and Kathy Shetler. The production also incorporates the use of music and singing performed by Karl Dalager on guitar and vocals by Karl, Diane Mosbeck and Kathy Shetler.

"Seeing the performance of Sandburg's work reinforces a recognition of the beauty of the poet's work, the dynamics of his personality and his wonderful sense of humor," said Roger Vaughan, Northland's theatre director. "The production showcases Sandbeurg's view of Americana."

The public is invited to attend at no charge.

THREE PEOPLE DIED in this accident which happened Friday at about 1:40 p.m. at the intersection of highways 59 and 92 east of Brooks. The car at left was driven west on highway 92 by Florence Opheim, 67, of Motley. She was killed, along with passengers Emil Opheim, 75 and Elizabeth Opheim, 37, all of Motley. Driver of the pickup truck, which was southbound on highway 59, was Terry Cook, 32, of Erskine. He received bruises in the accident. The Opheim car reportedly entered the intersection without stopping for the stop sign protecting highway 59. The Opheims were said to be enroute to Strandquist to visit Emil and Florence's son who operates the Rainbow Club there. Investigation of the accident was conducted by the Minnesota state patrol.

Parking Project Formula Viewed

Preliminary project hearings on the parking project being undertaken by the downtown development committee (DDC) of Thief River Falls were held Wednesday at 3 and 7 p.m. Approximately 65 out of 100 affected businessman attended one of the two hearings and Jon Larson, spokesman for the DDC, indicated that generally the response to the parking assessment district proposal was favorable. "At least the majority of those in attendance recognized that there was a need for such a project," he stated.

The project being planned would add up to 200 additional parking stalls to the downtown district at a cost of $500,000. In-kind services worth approximately $150,000 would be provided by the city with the remaining $350,000 cost to be assessed back to property owners within a district of benefit. The assessment district, as determined by the DDC with the aid of city legal staff, would include approximately 800,000 square feet.

Assessments to property owners will be made on the basis of a formula which takes into consideration square footage, use and benefit of a business. General obligation bonds will be sold by the city for the project with property owners within the district being assessed for their share over a period of 10 to 15 years.

The original seven categories of benefit defined by the DDC have been reduced to four: 1) retail and financial, 2) food and beverage, 3) professional, office and service, and public, (4) wholesale-processing-manufacturing. Residential and church properties are exempt from assessment since benefit to them will be nominal.

Percentages have been assigned to the four categories with a 100 per cent assessment placed against the retail and financial category, 90 per cent against the food and beverage category, 70 per cent for professional, office and service, and public and 50 per cent for wholesale-processing-manufacturing. Cost per square foot for business in the respective categories, based on the percentages of assessment, would be 81 cents, 73 cents, 57 cents and 41 cents.

The total square footage of business space of a facility multiplies times the cost per square foot (depending on the business category) would give a property owner his assessment. From this a parking credit can be subtracted. The DDC formula allows a parking credit of 40 cents per square foot for private parking.

With the parking credit, certain businesses who provide adequate on-site parking and would not therefore benefit from additional downtown parking will actually end up paying no assessment. For example, Piggly Wiggly grocery falls into the retail category and would be assessed on a 100 per cent basis at 81 cents per square foot. Piggly Wiggly has 9,000 square feet of building space which would result in a $7,290 assessment. However the business also has 19,000 square feet of parking space worth a $7,600 credit which cancels the assessment.

Among the other businesses who will pay no assessment under the formula are Kentucky Fried Chicken, Bruce Pharmacy, Hardees, Big T Family Restaurant, Sjoberg's, Holcomb, Knudson & Co., and Northwest Power Systems.

Given below are examples of how the assessment works in each of the four benefit categories. One example shows a business without parking and the second a similar sized business with a parking credit.

In the 100 per cent retail and financial category Thorp Loan & Thrift with 1,500 square feet of property would pay an assessment of $1,215. However Ekeren Drug, which is also in the 100 per cent category and has 1,500 square feet of retail-financial space, will pay no assessment. It has 3,500 square feet of parking space which, at the 40 cents credit, more than cancels the assessment.

Big T Family restaurant, which is in the 90 per cent food and beverage category, will also pay no assessment. Its retail square footage is 1,750 which at 73 cents per square foot, would have an

Mattison Receives His Purple Heart

SIXTY-ONE YEARS after being wounded in the Meuse Argonne fighting near the end of World War I, Ollie Mattison has received his military purple heart medal. The award was presented during Memorial day services at the Plummer school by Russell Pahlen, veterans service officer for the Plummer VFW post.

It was shortly after he and a buddy crept around a hill to knock out a German machine gun emplacement that Ollie Mattison was wounded by a bullet from another enemy weapon. The date was Oct. 17, 1918, and the place was a hill at Meuse Argonne near the border between France and Germany.

Last Monday, more than 60 years later, Mattison received the military purple heart award for his battle wound. The decoration was presented by Russell (Stub) Pahlen, veterans service officer for the Plummer VFW post, at Memorial day ceremonies held at the Plummer high school auditorium.

To allow Mattison to receive the award, inquiries and necessary paperwork were completed by Mr. and Mrs. Pahlen (Mrs. Pahlen is Mattison's step-daughter) during a period of several months. They conducted their efforts through the bureau of military records without Mattison's knowledge of their attempts. The presentation on Memorial day came as a surprise to him.

Ollie remembers that he got a letter from the army following his discharge that told him he was entitled to a medal if he would write and apply for it. "I never figured you should get a medal for killing," he said in retrospect, "so I didn't pay any attention to it. They never said what kind of a medal it was, just that I was entitled to a medal."

Mattison was among many Americans who went into World War I battle action with painfully little training. He was drafted on Feb. 22, 1918, spent two weeks at Camp

Essential Air Serivce Survey Completed Here

Population of Thief River Falls regional airport service area was estimated at 50,000 to 60,000 persons when the city airport committee met with commissioner of aeronautics Lawrence McCabe and assistant commissioner Ken Hoeper Wednesday to complete an essential air service survey circulated by the civil aeronautics board (CAB).

Under the airline deregulation act of 1978, CAB is charged with making essential air service determinations for all certificated points presently being served by only one carrier. CAB definitions of what constitutes essential service for each point must be completed by Oct. 24, 1979.

In January of this year CAB held a regional meeting in Minneapolis at which testimony was heard from Minnesota state and community representatives regarding essential service definitions and how they should be determined. On May 3 the CAB adopted policy guidelines to be followed in making its determinations, and on May 24 the city received a request from the board to complete a survey which would provide information about Thief River Falls' economic base, travel patterns, degree of isolation and airport facilities.

The deregulation act guarantees a minimum service level to all certificated points of two daily round trips five days a week or the level of service provided in 1977, whichever is less. CAB policy guidelines set the maximum available capacity to be guaranteed by the board at 120 seats each day in a market or 60 seats between the eligible point and its hub destination.

The guidelines also indicate that, generally, service will only be guaranteed to one hub and no more than two-stop operations will be allowed unless accepted by the community. The guidelines also specify that all aircraft must meet FAA safety standards and that communities may appeal service determinations within 30 days after a service ruling.

The survey completed by the airport committee Wednesday will be used by CAB in making an essential service determination for Thief River Falls. In addition to estimating the population of the Thief River Falls airport service area, the committee named Pennington, Marshall, Polk, Roseau and Lake of the Woods as counties being in or partially within the service area.

Minneapolis was named as the primary destination of persons using Thief River Fall's North Central flights and it was estimated that travel to Minneapolis is approximately 70 per cent for business and 30 per cent for pleasure or to connect to other flights.

On the survey airport committee members also indicated that Thief River Fall's hub city, Minneapolis, is 350 miles or seven hours driving time away and that the only other means of public transportation to the hub is by

SPAN OF SIXTY YEARS separates the graduation dates of Sue Spengler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Verne Spengler of Thief River Falls, and her grandmother, Mrs. Elizabeth (Sanfacon) Spengler of Grand Forks. They are pictured in the corner of the Old Lincoln building which was the assembly room in a new building when Mrs. Spengler attended school there. In the background is the old Washington building which is now abandoned for school use but was used for elementary classes when Mrs. Spengler attended high school. She came to Thief River Falls from the family home at Plummer to attend high school, living with her sister Ida who was employed as a linotype operator in a local print shop. After graduating from Lincoln in 1919, she went to Minneapolis to work for 10 years. She and her husband farmed 35 years at Inkster, N.D., and when he died she moved to Grand Forks where she has lived for the past 13 years. Watching her granddaughter graduate Thursday evening brought back many memories from her own school days. She said she would be interested in hearing from classmates or other school acquaintances from that time. Her address is 1639 24th Avenue South, Grand Forks, N.D. 58201.

Arctic Records Sales Growth

Arctic Enterprises, Inc., has reported record sales for fiscal 1979 and for the fourth quarter ended March 31. Adoption of "last in — first out" (LIFO) inventory accounting for substantially all inventories of its U.S. operations reduced earnings for the year and for the fourth quarter.

Consolidated net sales for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1979, were $175,180,000, an increase of 61 per cent over $108,892,000 for the previous year. The record 1979 sales represented an increase of 40 per cent over the previous record of $125,044,000 for fiscal 1972.

Net income for fiscal 1979 was $1,907,000, or 61 cents per share, after giving effect to the company's decision to adopt the LIFO method of accounting for inventory, as of Apirl 1, 1978, for substantially all of its U.S. operations. This change had the effect of reducing net income for the year by $2,357,000 or 76 cents per share. Net income per share for the year ended March 31, 1978, on a first in — first out (FIFO) basis basis was $2,574,000, or 84 cents per share.

John C. Penn, president, said, "We made the accounting change because we believe that this inventory accounting method more accurately reflects the inflationary effects of the current economic trends on our business operations."

Consolidated net sales for the fourth quarter ended March 31, 1979, were $30,000,000, an increase of 55 per cent over sales of $19,387,000 for the same period last year.

A net loss of $1,807,000, or 34 cents per share (after giving effect to the adoption of LIFO of $680,000 or 21 cents per share) was reported for the quarter compared with the net profit of $59,000 or two cents per share, on a FIFO basis, for the same quarter last year.

"The fourth quarter was affected by anticipated increased interest costs, which resulted from the early start-up of 1980 model snowmobile production and the deliberate build-up of inventories in anticipation of continued snowmobile sales growth in 1980," Penn stated.

The quarter was also charged with approximately $250,000, after tax, of abnormal warranty costs in 1979 model year snowmobles, he added.

Penn added, "We are pleased with the results of operations for the year. The record 1979 sales resulted from increased volume in all areas of Arctic's business."

Annual Memorial Services Held At Setesdal Church

"To See Hope," was the theme of the sermon given at the annual Memorial service held Sunday, May 27, at the Setesdal Lutheran church located 14 miles northeast of Thief River Falls.

The sermon was given by Rev. Roger Ose, who was baptized and confirmed at Setesdal. A missionary to Madagascar, Rev. Ose is currently in Minneapolis where he is receiving chemotherapy for cancer. He based his sermon on thoughts that occurred to him while hospitalized at the University of Minnesota cancer unit. While there, he made a study of hope, dividing it into three categories, all substantiated in the book of Psalms. They are Hope admits lonliness and death, Psalms 22:1-15; 102:23 and 49:10; Hope in spite of cancer, Psalm 13:1,2; 24:1 and 118:17, 24; and Hope based on God's Promises, Psalm 27:1; 37:5; 55:22 and 103:1, 2.

He stated that after coping with the fact that "One day I must die, because no matter how good we get at this business of living, none of us gets out of it alive," his hospitalization gave him the oppoutunity to recall the many kindnesses people have shown him. He also learned the importance of memory work as he remembered Bible verses, parts of Shakespeare and other literature memorized several years ago.

Lowell Dyrud was in charge of the service, which began with the singing of the hymn, "Faith of Our Fathers," and "Wonderful Words of Life." Reuben Wold read II Cor. 5:1-8 for devotions.

Also participating in the program were: Carmen and Larry Gustafson, who sang, "My Father is Rich in Houses and Lands," Carla Anderson, who played the trumpet solo, "An American Trilogy," with her mother Mrs. John Anderson as accompanist; Clark Dyrud, violinist, who played the old Norwegian hymn, "Oh Lord, That the Desert Will Bloom Again," and Randy Moe, who sang, Fairest Lord Jesus."

A potluck lunch followed a brief business meeting.

To correspond with the bride's floral theme, the altar bouquet featured orange tinted carnations, white daisies and babies' breath.

The bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father. She was attired in a candlelight chiffon over matching allegro floor length gown fashioned by her aunt Leila Naucler. The bodice enhanced with tucking, featured a U-neckline, outlined with lace, and long, full sleeves and buttoned cuffs, also graced with tucking. A lace-edged flounce encircled the skirt at the hemline. Her headpiece was a crown of fresh stephanotis and babies' breath. She carried a bouquet of orange roses, stephanotis and babies' breath, accented with trailing ivy.

Bryce E. Anderson of Minneapolis, a friend of the groom, was best man.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Naucler wore a gown of brown floral polyester print and a corsage of yellow roses and white carnations. The groom's mother wore a pale blue polyester gown complemented by a corsage of pink roses and white carnations.

A buffet dinner at the Holiday Inn banquet room followed the ceremony. Centering the head table was a floral arrangment of tinted carnations and daisies. Michele and Marla Einarson presided at the punch table and Beverly Alexander cut and served the wedding cake.

U of M Awarded Kellogg Health Study Grant

W. K. Kellogg Foundation of Battle Creek, Mich., has awarded a three-year $371,400 grant to the University of Minnesota for an independent study program for directors of education and training coordinators in health care institutions.

The program is meant to upgrade the quality of patient care by improving the operational competence of educators from hospitals, clinics, nursing homes, mental health facilities and health care organizations. The program will include training in principles and methods of patient education.

"This project represents a significant contribution to the fields of non-traditional education and hospital education and training," said John M. Lowe, a foundation program director in health.

The first university-based graduate level continuing education effort for health educators, the program will be similar to five independent study programs for health administrators and trustees established at the University of Minnesota with the help of the Kellogg Foundation over the past ten years.

Composed of three year-long courses, the program will focus on managing the educational function in health care, the process and practice of adult education, and the changing role of educators in health. Courses will combine intensive on-campus residential sessions, monthly dialogues between students and preceptors, individual unit lessons and regional seminars.

Up to 40 educators based in health institutions will be accepted the first year for the residential session scheduled for mid-September, 1979.

The program will be administered through the graduate program in health education of the school of public health and directed by William W. Metcalfe, Ph.D., a faculty member in the program of health education. Inquiries should be directed to Dr. Metcalfe, Project Director, ISP-DE Suite 340, University Park Plaza, 2829 University Ave. S.E., Minneapolis, MN 55414.

IRS Discusses Gain And Loss Law Changes

There have been some significant changes in the laws relating to capital gains and losses and these could affect your 1978 return. Here are some common questions and answers about the change prepared by the Internal Revenue Service.

Q: I've heard that the capital gains deduction has changed from the previous 50 per cent rate? Is this true?

A: Yes. The capital gains deduction has been increased from 50 per cent to 60 per cent on certain sales or exchanges. This means you now pay taxes on only 40 per cent of your net profit.

Q: Does this apply to sales that I have made at any time during 1978?

A: No. The new law is effective November 1, 1978. Any sale made before this date must be treated under the 50 per cent deduction rule. The only exception to this is for installment payments received on or after November 1. No matter when the actual sale was made, the payments received after this date will qualify for the new 60 per cent rate.

Q: Are there any other limitations on the capital gains which qualify for this rate?

A: Yes. The property must be held for more than twelve months. If property is sold before that period, the capital gains deduction will not apply.

Q: Should net capital gains from before November 1, 1978 be netted with those after November 1, 1978 and then the 60 per cent deduction taken?

A: No. Each group of gains and losses must be computed separately. All gains and losses from before November 1 should be combined and then the 50 per cent deduction taken of net gain. All gains or losses from November 1, and after, should be netted and the 60 per cent deduction taken from the gains. After this, the taxable amounts would then be combined.

Task Force To Sponsor Crime Demo Project

Commissioner Mark W. Seetin has announced that the Minnesota department of agriculture will sponsor a program to cope with the rising crime rate in rural Minnesota.

"Our department is taking the initiative on the findings and recommendations of the rural crime prevention task force that was activated last September in cooperation with the Minnesota crime prevention center.

"We are establishing a rural crime prevention demonstration project to be implemented on a regional basis. Citizen involvement will be the key factor in making the demonstration effective in reducing the crime rate in rural Minnesota," commissioner Seetin stated.

He said that the problem of rural crime is an issue of growing state and national concern that must be confronted and counter-attacked at the individual, family and community levels.

The state-level rural crime prevention demonstration project will utilize regional community demonstration projects, drawing upon local human resources for expertise and personal involvement by individuals was well as by organizations. Local demonstration projects will be selected from recommendations by regional development agencies.

Minnesota bureau of criminal apprehension records show that between 1973 and 1977 the rate or residential burglaries in rural communities increased by 38 per cent, compared to only a 4 per cent increase in that type of criminal activity in urban areas of the state.

Commissioner Seetin said that the increase in rural crime activity is not limited to property theft, although that was one of the most significant comparisons with the crime rates in the cities, using available records in reported crimes.

"The key word is 'prevention'. We have been reacting to crime after the fact, treating the effect, not the cause," commissioner Seetin declared.

"By and large we in the rural community are trusting souls. We take for granted that our property will be there when we get back home. Perhaps we ask a neighbor to keep an eye on the place. But how often do we realize the replacement cost and the personal loss of these items, individually or in aggregate?", commissioner Seetin asked, suggesting that rural Minnesotans need to increase security measures as "the first ounce of prevention."

The rural crime prevention demonstration project will be implemented and directed by the Minnesota crime prevention center, a private non-profit corporation with a national reputation in crime prevention planning and crime analysis.

Commissioner Seetin said that initial funding for the project is being provided by grants from the Minnesota rural development council and the Minnesota crime control planning board. Additional funds to meet an estimated $118,000 budget for the rural crime prevention demonstration project are being sought from private foundations.

Thirteen agencies and organizations representing agricultural, rural community, law enforcement and crime prevention interests and concerns are continuing participants in the rural crime prevention task force that has brought the state demonstration program into action.

Lamb And Wool Show Slated At Pipestone

The 15th annual national lamb and wool show will have a new home in 1979. This year's show will be held in Pipestone June 6 and 7 at the Pipestone county fairgrounds. Many new activities and events have been added to the show including a sheep to shawl contest, bus tours, sheep equipment displays, selling of the top four-five lambs and wool fleeces, and an evening dinner and dance.

Lamb show will include classes for individual lambs, junior derby pairs, progeny pens of five, trucklots of 10 lambs and the central test division. Junior derby division lambs must be nominated, weighed and officially ear tagged within 45 days of birth. Central test division lambs will be fed at the LaVerne Martin farm at Albert Lea, Minnesota as in past years. Lambs will be tested for rate of gain, carcass quality and soundness. Test lambs must be delivered to the test site on March 30 and 31 and entrys must be made by March 27.

This year's wool show division will have classes for fine wool, ½, ⅜, ¼, and low ¼ blood fleeces. There will also be purebred classes for each breed with four or more fleeces. Colored fleece class has also been added to this year's show. Top ten fleeces from the wool show will be sold at auction. So save out a fleece or two when you sheer and enter them in this division.

An outstanding purebred breeding stock show and sale is also planned with entries open to anyone interested. Last year's sale was highly successful with sheep selling to eight states.

Top quality judging contest is also planned with divisions for 4-H, FFA, and college judging teams along with adult men's and women's divisions.

For more information on the national lamb and wool show or to enter the central test and junior derby divisions, write to Mike Caskey, Show Manager, Pipestone Vocational School, Pipestone, Minnesota 56164 or call (507) 825-5471 or 347-3229.

Minnesota's unemployment rate in April was 3.9 per cent, down .3 of one percent from March but the same as in April a year ago, Rolf Middleton, commissioner of the Minnesota department of economic security, announced recently. The comparable national unemployment rate for April was 5.5 per cent.

Civilian labor force in April was 2,047,200; employment was 1,966,800; the number of unemployed was 80,400. In March, the civilian labor force was 2,002,700; employment was 1,918,500; and unemployment was 84,200. In April a year ago, the civilian labor force was 1,984,000; employment was 1,872,600; and the number of unemployed was 75,400.

Production workers in manufacturing were paid average weekly earnings of $269.96 in April for working an average of 39.7 hours at $6.80 per hour. In April last year, production workers averaged 40.2 hours at $6.33 per hour for average weekly earnings of $254.47.

Use Corrugated Waste to Reduce Cost, Pollution

Supermarkets, assembly plants, mailing companies, liquor stores and other Minnesota companies may be able to profit by selling some of their wastes rather than paying to have the wastes hauled to a santiary landfill.

Minnesota Pollution Control agency (MPCA) is working with a number of paper companies to increase recycling of corrugated (cardboard) wastes. Hoerner Waldorf, the state's largest producer and recycler of paper, is currently doubling its use of waste corrugated because of economic and environmental constraints.

Paper and corrugated recylcing removes about 5.5 per cent of the state's total waste. With Hoerner Waldorf's new program, the amount of waste removed will jump to eight per cent.

"This means there will be excellent markets for corrugated wastes in Minnesota for years to come," said Curt Sparks, deputy director of the MPCA's solid waste division. "Recycling corrugated saves energy, minimizes landfilling of waste and cuts down on pollution. In addition, recycling corrugated is economical in nearly any part of the state," he said. "That's why we're encourageing businesses and communities to use this alternatives for their wastes."

In the past, Hoerner Waldorf made its corrugated products — corrugated "medium" and folding carton board — from one-third waste and two-thirds wood. Last year, it was converted to using one-half corrugated waste, one-half wood. Now, the company is increasing its inventory of waste materials to prepare for mid-June, when it plans to begin using 100 per cent corrugated waste.

"This is not only because of the increasing difficulty of obtaining wood products, but also because of the problems in handling the sewage effluent from processing wood," said John Walton, raw materials manager of Hoerner Waldorf. "Using 100 per cent waste products, we'll both save money and cut down on pollution.

Walton said that using recycled paper consumer 51 per cent less energy than making the same paper from new materials. "Each ton of recycled paper saves an amount of energy equivalent to 131 gallons of crude oil. In addition, each ton of recycled saves about 17 trees. The amounts saved by recycling corrugated," he said, "are similar."

The waste corrugated will be recycled to make corrugated "medium," which is the wavy or crinkly material seen in cardboard boxes. It will also be mixed with newspaper and office paper wastes to make folding carton board, which is used to make many of the cereal, cake mix and soap boxes that appear on supermarket shelves.

To properly collect and store the wastes for pickup, a business or community may need to purchase a baler. However, the investment needed is generally minimal and will pay itself back easily.

"Recycling is profitable even for someone who generates only one ton of corrugated per week," he said. "It's certainly profitable for a community with 25 or 30 tons per week."

For more information about paper or corrugated recycling programs. Call John Madole, Division of Solid Waste, MPCA, at (612) 296-7723.

Erosion May Be Problem This Spring

Wind erosion is most likely to be a problem this spring unless conservation tillage or field shelterbelts are used to keep soil on the ground in susceptible areas.

"Fall-plowed sandy fields are the most susceptible," says Clif Halsey, University of Minnesota extension conservationist. "This is especially true if they are in wide open spaces."

Limy clay loams and silty clay loams are also quite subject to wind erosion.

Conservation tillage which leaves at least 20 to 30 per cent of the ground covered by crop residues will adequately control wind erosion in most cases. In order to be effective the residues should be on the surface until a new crop is high enough to provide its own protection from the wind.

Moldboard plowing leaves very little residue on the surface. Repeated disking or chiselings also cover most of the residue.

Crop just harvested makes a difference in residue level. One or two double diskings of cornstalks or small grain straw probably would leave enough residue on the surface. One disking or chiseling of soybean, potato or sunflower fields, however, may not leave enough residue.

Field shelterbelts, if close enough together and tall enough, also will control wind erosion. Good shelterbelts will protect areas for a distance downwind equal to between 10 and 20 times their height. Thirty-foot-high shelterbelts should be no further apart than between 300 and 600 feet to give sufficient protection to large fields.

Farmers have been tearing out their field shelterbelts or cutting the tops off to accommodate center pivot irrigation systems. Researchers are working on new lower shrub species and other shelterbelt designs to fit irrigation systems.

U.S. soil conservation service recently issued a map, "Soil Erosion Potential in Minnesota." It shows the Red River Valley, parts of Swift and Chippewa counties, and the very sandy soils of central Minnesota to be quite subject to wind erosion.

Wind erosion areas include land where there is the potential for at least an average of one ton per acre per year of soil erosion by wind. Such a layer evenly spread over an acre would be as thick as two sheets of paper. Although this rate seems small, if it is removed from a square section of land and dropped in a drainage or roadside ditch there will be about 240 pounds of soil per running foot of ditch.

Wind erosion is twice as likely to occur in western Minnesota as in the eastern part of the state because of dry, windy conditions. Strong soil-eroding winds are 10 times more likely to occur in southwestern Kansas than in western Minnesota. Fortunately, not all the soil that moves on a field during one period of wind erosion leaves the field then. Much of it stops in a low spot or in vegetation where the conditions are less favorable for erosion.

Crime Index Offenses Up During 1978

Number of crime index offenses reported to law enforcement agencies across the country in 1978 increased one per cent over 1977, according to Attorney General Griffin B. Bell.

The increase was disclosed in uniform crime reports' preliminary statistics released by William H. Webster, director of the federal bureau of investigation (FBI).

"This rise in reported crime during 1978 is even more significant when it is considered that annual figures for 1977 compared with 1976 showed a three per cent decrease," Bell said. "Such a reversal in the crime trend is distressing, especially after the encouraging report of a year ago."

As a group, the index's violent crimes showed a five per cent increase in volume. Aggravated assault rose seven per cent, forcible rape was up six per cent, robbery increased three per cent and murder remained virtually unchanged. The property crimes showed a one per cent rise collectively. Burglary and motor vehicle theft were each up one per cent, while larceny-theft showed no change.

Webster stressed the necessity for cooperation between the public and law enforcement to counter the upward trend.

"Halting this rise in the level of crime should be the concern of all facets of our society," he said.

In cities with populations over 50,000, the volume of reported crime index offenses remained nearly constant. However, rises of one per cent were recorded in both the suburban and rural areas, and cities outside metropolitan areas reported an increase of four per cent.

Geographically, the Southern states reported a four per cent rise and the Western states a three per cent increase in the total number of index crimes. The Northeastern and North Central states recorded decreases of three and one per cent, respectively.

Bibliography On Bald Eagle Is Published

A comprehensive guide to the scientific literature pertaining to bald eagles has been published by the National Wildlife Federation's raptor information center.

"A Working Bibliography of the Bald Eagle," by Jeffrey L. Lincer, William S. Clark and Maurice N. LeFranc, contains more than 2,000 references to eagle literature in its 268-page, 8½ by 11-inch format. It is categorized by computer "keywords" that will help its users find the information they are seeking through computerized search services and data banks.

Major categories are bald eagles' taxonomy (nomenclature), distribution (where they live) and history, including information on their nesting, migratory and hunting habits.

The authors hope that the book will be used by scholars, wildlife managers, research scientists and general eagle enthusiasts to help study the nation's symbol and make both the public and decision-makers more aware of its plight.

"Without this awareness," the introduction reads, "few protective laws will be passed and fewer yet funds will be made available to protect habitat or support the needed research" to help save the eagle.

The book also includes a section on the current status of the "king of birds." While the U.S. government still lists it as "endangered" in 43 states, the future of the bald eagle looks a bit brighter now than it did 10 years ago," the section says.

"The Working Bibliography of the Bald Eagle" is the second volume in a projected scientific technical series by NWF. The first in the series was a similar bibliography on the owl.

NWF established the Raptor information center in 1976 to serve as a clearinghouse for information about bald eagles and other raptors, or birds of prey.

The book is available for $9 plus an 85 cent handling charge, from the National Wildlife Federation, 1412 16th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

Regulation Of Railroads Adds To Total Costs

Regulating railroad grain rates adds $42 to $62 million to the yearly bill for transporting upper midwest wheat and barley, a University of Minnesota (UM) study shows.

Because the rail rate structure is not based on actual costs, inefficiencies result that raise transportation costs for society, says Reynold Dahl, UM agricultural economist. "This excess transportation expense results in lowered prices paid to farmers for their grain. Consumer prices may be increased as well."

Dahl and research assistant Michael Martin released a report that analyzes the social costs of regulating rail grain rates in the upper midwest.

Current rate structure shifts grain traffic away from trains and to trucks on intermediate-length hauls, the study reports. Rail rates also exceed costs on long-haul traffic, which results in an income transfer from shippers and farmers to the railroad.

The report indicates that an efficient grain transportation system can be achieved if rate structures of all carriers are based on service costs. Such rates would result in each carrier — trucks, trains and barges — providing service over distances where each has the lowest costs.

The report recommends that railroads be given more flexibility in rate making. This would enable them to meet the competition of unregulated trucks and barges. "Competition is probably the best regulator of rates in areas where different types of carriers are available," Dahl says.

The case for deregulation of rail rates is not as strong in areas such as the western Great Plains (western Dakotas and Montana) which are far removed from river coortdors, Dahl says. Here, railroads do not have substantial truck-barge competition.

"In areas where railroads have a monopoly, rates should continue to be monitored by the interstate commerce commission," he says. "Even in these areas, however, railroads should offer lower rates based on the lower costs associated with multiple-car shipments."

The report, "Social Costs of Regulating Railroad Grain Rates in the Upper Midwest" (technical bulletin 319), is available from the bulletin room, University of Minnesota, St. Paul.

Essential Air Service Survey Is Completed

bus. The bus service is available through Doyle Transit but then the traveling time is 12 hours and impractical for a business trip. Listed as the second most important destination for Thief River Falls airport users was Chicago, 15 hours driving time away.

Grand Forks airport was named as the next nearest airport receiving scheduled service and it was estimated that five to fifteen per cent of the air travelers from this area use the Grand Forks facilities because they like the larger aircraft, for the incentive fares or because they can't get seats at Thief River Falls. Traveling time to the Grand Forks airport was listed at one hour and 15 minutes.

In addition to providing information about the isolation of Thief River Falls and the city's travel patterns, airport committee members also provided information about the airport facilities and the needs of Thief River Falls in regards to air service.

Essential service in the eyes of the committee would be the three round trips presently being offered at the Thief River Falls airport to the hub city of Minneapolis, on a schedule similar to that presently in effect.

To support its contention that three round trips are needed to meet the community's air service needs, information will be submitted by the committee regarding Thief River Falls' economic base and business activity and business travel to the hub city.

The CAB survey must be completed and returned to the board by July 15 with an essential air service determination forthcoming by October 24.

Arctic Records Sales Growth For Past Year

The company's snowmobile sales, including sales of Scorpion Inudstires acquired in 1979, increased 50 per cent over last year.

Arctic's sales of marine products, including sales of Lund American Inc. acquired in late 1978 and sales of its newly introduced water recreation vehicle, more than doubled during the year. Marine product sales accounted for 23 per cent of total sales for the year, up from 17 per cent of total sales last year.

He added that early season orders of 1980 model snowmobiles from dealers indicate an increased sales volume in 1980.

Penn want on to say that increased gasoline prices are not expected to significantly impact sales. Gasoline availability could affect anticipated sales increases, he said, but the total amount of gasoline consumed by both power boats and snowmobiles is not significant in relation to total consumption.

Ollie Mattison Receives His Purple Heart

Dodge, Ia., then moved on to Fort Gordon, Ga. Later he was transferred to New York and after two weeks on a freighter with 800 other soldiers arrived in Liverpool, England on May 1 of the same year.

The units drilled on the beaches with rifles borrowed from the British before going inland to fight in the trenches. Ollie was with the American expeditionary forces at Tove in France from June 26 to August 6, at Marbache from August 15 to September 12, St. Mihiel from September 13 to September 20 and Meuse Argonne from September 26 until being wounded October 17.

"We were pinned down by machine guns up the hill," Mattison recalls. "We had lost eight men already and the captain said we had to knock out that machine gun above us to move further on up the hill. Another guy and I volunteered and we crawled around the hill and came up from the side. There wasn't any cover, just bare ground."

The two men crawled to within an estimated 150 yards from the gun emplacement to a point where they could see the gunner. "Then we nailed him," he said.

It was only about an hour later, while advancing up that same hill, that Ollie caught a bullet from another machine gun dug in on the slope. The bullet cut through the calf of his leg from side to side, just behind the bone below the knee.

"It felt like a bee sting at first," Mattison said, but he soon knew the wound was disabling. He walked with assistance to an emergency hospital behind the lines and by the time he was healed the war was over.

World War I warfare was often conducted on an almost personal basis. Trenches of the competing armies were often so close together they could hear one another talking. Ollie remembers crawling into the front line trenches with an attachment that fit on his rifle to launch rolls of propaganda leaflets into the enemy positions.

"We'd shoot and then run like hell down the communications trenches to positions further back," he said.

Mattison won't forget his first day at the Meuse Argonne front. They moved up as replacements to a secondary position at night under the cover of darkness. Their commander told them to "fall out and make the best of it," and he and a buddy put down their field packs for pillows to try and get some sleep.

"I felt something under my shoulder, like a rock or something," Ollie said. "But I went to sleep and the next morning I found out it was the boot of a dead American soldier who was lying there."

Mattison said of his military training that he knew more about guns than most of his officers did. "I had lived with guns all my life around the Plummer area," he said.

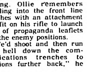
"I almost made sharpshooter. I was hitting the bullseye during target practice pretty good. Then I got to wondering what sharpshooter was all about. I found out that it was the sharpshooters who had to go ahead and clean out the machine gun nests so the rest of the troops could move up. After that my shots wandered a little bit."

As a private first class Ollie earned $21 a month while in the United States and $31 a month overseas. But he purchased a $10,000 insurance policy and that cost him $7 a month out of his pay. The army didn't want its soldiers going home broke, however, so he also got $60 mustering out pay when he was discharged.

In May of 1919 he returned to the United States, then went to Canada to stay with his brother Pete at Edmonton. From there he went to the Minnesota iron range for 11 years. For 40 years after that he farmed about five miles south of Plummer. He moved to Plummer after his wife died and he later married Hattie Hofius. For the past five years they have been living at the senior citizen housing units in Plummer.

"I could tell you a lot of stories about things that went on over there," Mattison said.

After sampling some of them, we know they would make interesting listening.



These United States are still physically beautiful, and we should be glad of the opportunity to travel through them on vacation trips. Let us plan to travel moderate distances per day at a moderate pace to protect life and limb, and to truly savor this beautiful country of ours.

Sincerely,

Belmont Funeral Home

Parking Project Plans Studied At Meetings

assessment of $1,277.50. But with 12,750 square feet of parking, the Big T assessment is cancelled. Hanging Gardens, which at 2,000 square feet is comparable to Big T, has no private parking and its assessment under the DDC formula would be $1,458.

Falling in the 70 per cent professional, office and service, and public category are the Thief River Falls Credit Bureau and the Brite Spot laundromat with business square footages of 1,900 and 1,800, respectively. With no parking credit, the assessment against the Credit Bureau would be $1,077.30. Assessment against Brite Spot, which has 3,450 square feet of parking, would be cancelled.

Gary's Bakery, which falls in the 50 per cent wholesale-processing - manufacturing category, has 2,625 square feet of business space and would carry an assessment of $1,063.13. Falls Supply, also in the 50 per cent category, has 2,500 square feet of retail space and an additional 1,824 square feet of storage. Yet with a parking credit for 2,100 square feet of parking space, its assessment would only be $531.36.

Other proposed assessments which may be of particular interest include the assessment to school district No. 564 for the school's 159,530 square feet of building space. Falling into the 70 per cent professional, office and service, and public category, the school would be assessed at 57 cents per square foot. With a parking credit on its 10,000 square feet of parking space, school district assessment would come to $86,403.51 under the proposed formula.

Assessments to Northwestern Hospital Services, also assessed on the 70 per cent basis and given parking credits, would be $12,501.86 for the medical office building, $15,562.29 for the CNC Unit, and $19,556.96 for the 1930, 1954, 1964 and 1969 additions.

Next step the DDC will take in regard to the parking assessment district is to appear before the Thief River Falls city council and request a formal hearing on the parking project. It is expected this hearing will be scheduled for late June or early July.

State Ninth In Public Transit Allocations

Minnesota ranks ninth nationwide in state funds allocated for public transit services, according to commissioner Richard P. Braun, Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT).

For fiscal years 1978-79, Minnesota's $41.5 million allocation compares with a high of $195.1 million for Illinois. Those ranked second through eighth were California, New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Washington Maryland and Michigan. During the same period, 13 states appropriated no funds for public transit.

In Minnesota, the state allocation works out to $5.45 per person annually for transit services. This compares with a high of $18.14 for Massachusetts.

Public transit in Minnesota includes 31 fixed-route bus systems, 31 para-transit demonstrations, 5 intercity bus demonstrations and 4 shared-ride taxi services. In some states, public transit also includes commuter rail and ferry boat operations.

Soil Conservation May Be Mandatory

by William Hoffman
University News

Minnesota farmers soon will have more to worry about than heavy weather, if Clifton Halsey's guess is right. He sees compulsory soil conservation looming on the horizon.

Wind and water continue to eat away the state's most precious resource, despite more than 40 years of federal aid for soil conservation. Soil erosion reduces crop yields and eroded sediment damages the quality of water in lakes and streams.

"Excessive erosion is still occurring on about half the land, and it is increasing," Halsey said. "The present voluntary system isn't working." He perceives a nations wide drive toward mandatory controls.

Associate professor of soil science at the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, Halsey has a professional interest in land — its chemistry, behavior, and migrating patterns. As a conservationist with the agricultural extension service, he understands both the desire of farmers to maintain high production and the public concern for clean water.

Halsey concedes that mandatory conservation "is a very touchy subject," but unless farmers respond to financially supported voluntary programs, "efforts to limit erosion by regulation can be expected to continue and intensify."

Several developments in the last decade have caused attention to be focused on the problem of soil erosion.

Chief among these developments is the impact of the environmental movement. Federal legislation requires that state and local agencies regulate "nonpoint" sources of water pollution as well as specific points of waste and sewage discharge. Agricultural runoff is the main nonpoint source of pollution, carrying pesticides and fertilizers from fields and depositing them in rivers, lakes, and streams.

Such runoff pollutes drinking water supplies and causes toxic reactions in fish and wildlife. It may lead to the "biological death" of some water bodies by fostering excessive growth of plant life.

The problem with nonpoint sources of pollution, Halsey said, is that it is so difficult to trace them and to determine who is responsible for them. And as for the nutrients in fertilizers promoting plant growth in water, naturally occurring nutrients present in the soil may do the same thing, he said.

"Farmers are like other people," Halsey said. "They are concerned about the environment, but they also are concerned about feeding their families and paying their debts and having a little money for recreation."

More and more marginal land is going under the plow as farmers aim at high production of such cash crops as corn and soybeans. Not only are pastures, groves and grasslands lost as buffers to erosion, but the subsequent planting of these lands with row crops compounds the problem. Topsoil washes down from hilly slopes and "ends up in a ditch or a flood plain or a trout stream or a reservoir," Halsey said.

"Farmers won't be able to afford high loss of topsoil and still maintain high productivity." He noted that from three to five tons of topsoil per acre is a "tolerable loss" each year, for about that much soil is generated annually through natural processes. But in some areas of Minnesota more than twice that much is lost each year.

"For more than 40 years we've had a soil conservation plan," Halsey said. "The government has offered technical assistance and cost-sharing programs in an effort to encourage voluntary system, but I'm afraid they've got a tiger by the tail. It could happen that the government will ram a mandatory program down our throats."

Fear of just that event has prompted state representative Elton Redalen of Fountain to offer erosion control legislation in the current legislative session.

Redalen's bill is based on an Iowa soil conservation law passed in 1971. That law established a state committee of farmer representatives that handles complaints against landowners, defines tolerable soil loss and adequate sediment control, disburses cost-sharing funds for erosion control practices such as terracing and contouring, and takes legal action against landowners as a last resort.

Redalen, a dairy farmer, is uncertain how the proposed law will be received. But if it provokes discussion, he said, then it's worth the effort.

"If we farmers don't take the initiative in this matter, then someone else will," he said.

Benton county, in western Minnesota, has a wind erosion control ordinance that makes it illegal to remove or destroy a field windbreak without a permit. Elsewhere, two local ordinances address the topic of soil erosion, but specifically exempt agricultural practices. Redalen's bill is the first to deal with soil erosion statewide since 1973, when a proposed bill failed in the legislature.

Part of the reason for the poor record of the voluntary system is that "in many cases not enough money is provided for specific conservation practices. In the short run, farmers don't have enough incentive to employ such practices," Halsey said. "We've been looking for a state with a successful voluntary conservation program, but we haven't found one."

If indeed the problem is money — subsidy — then the complaints of some farmrers during the Washington tractorcade seem to have merit. As one farmer put it, "How does the nation combat enormous erosion of prime crop land when the administration continues to reduce federal funds to the soil conservation service?"

Then, of course, there is the bureaucratic tangle. "I see a whole series of bureaucracies addressing the problem. And there are great rivalries for federal monies and leadership positions in all this," Halsey said. "It's a problem in itself to find out what's going on."

He admonished the agricultural extension service for not being as active as it might be in soil conservation by focusing too narrowly on what farmers think is most important.

"But overall the extension service must be pretty good. It has been copied in one form or another throughout the world," he said.

TO KEEP ABREAST of new developments in dairy cow nutrition and management, Midland ration advisers, including Kermit Schroeder (right) of the Consumers Cooperative association, Thief River Falls, traveled to Fabius, N.Y., in mid-May, and toured the cooperative research farms dairy facility located there. The ration advisers, who help develop balanced herd rations for farmers in the Upper Midwest, had the opportunity to inspect the research facilities and talk with the researchers whose work supports the advisers' recommendations.

Tips For Safer Use Of Power Mowers Given

Perhaps as many as 80 million Americans cut their lawn every year with power lawn mowers. Of these, more than 60,000 will be injured seriously enough to require hospital emergency room treatment each year as a result of a power mower accident. Many of these accidents are preventable ... if you know what to do and what not to do.

Here are some "Do's and Don'ts" that may keep you from being the next power mower victims. First, the "Do's":

(1) Read the operating instructions until you know them by heart; follow these instructions during use.

(2) Clear the yard, every time. You never know when a rock, stick, wire, can or piece of glass may get into your mower and be thrown with great force.

(3) Always watch your footing, particularly on slopes. Golf shoes or shoes with cleats can help keep you from slipping. Steer a hand power mower across slopes, never up and down.

Now, here are some important "Don'ts":

(1) Don't allow young children to operate power mowers.

(2) Don't mow a wet lawn; you can slip and hit the blade.

(3) Don't unclog grass from your mower while the balde is still moving.

(4) Don't change the cutting height while the blade is moving.

These are only a few of the rules for safe mowing habits. For further free information, ask your mower dealer, safety council, health department, library, or write to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, Washington, D.C. 20207.

"There Ought To Be A Law" Contest Slated

Junior high school students in Minnesota will have a chance to say what they think ought to be Minnesota law. Winners of the Minnesota House of Representatives junior high school essay contest will be "legislators for a day" on Saturday, August 25 at a special mock session in the State Capitol. Members of the House will be there to help the junior lawmakers as they debate and vote on the winning entries.

Speaker of the House Rod Searle will preside and present awards to the winners. The name of the statewide winner is secret until the speaker announces it August 25.

All seventh, eighth and ninth graders in Minnesota are eligible. Entries must be in by August 3. To enter, students just complete this sentence in 100 words or less: "There ought to be a law. . ."; They may write about juvenile justice, protection for the elderly, child care, solid and hazardous waste, natural resources or human rights.

This is the fourth year the House has sponsored the contest with the Minnesota council for the social studies. Teachers from the council do the judging. The House will notify winners the second week in August.

The original deadline for entries was May 25. Because of the special election in June to settle an election dispute that unseated a House member, the council and the Minnesota house have extended the deadline to August 3. The awards ceremony on August 25 will coincide with the opening of the Minnesota state fair. Winning essays will be on display in the state departments building during the fair.

Six top winners receive handsome engraved walnut and brass wall plaques. All 134 winners get inscribed certificates. For more information and complete rules, contact: The Minnesota House of Representatives Public Information Office, Room 8, State Capitol, St. Paul, Minnesota 55155, (612) 296-2146.

LO'L Purchases American Beef Packers Plant

Land O'Lakes, Inc., Minneapolis-based farm supply and food marketing cooperative, and American Beef Packers, Inc. (ABP), Omaha, announced recently the sale of ABP's Oakland, Iowa, plant to Spencer Foods, Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Land O'Lakes. Sale is contingent upon approval of shareholders of ABP. Land O'Lakes board of directors authorized the purchase May 24. Sale price was not disclosed.

ABP shareholder approval will be sought within 90 days. In the interim, ABP will purchase and market cattle as an agent of Land O'Lakes. ABP will also operate the plant for Land O'Lakes under a custom slaughter contract. These arrangements can be extended for up to 18 months if shareholder approval is delayed.

Land O'Lakes entered the red meat business in October of 1978 with the purchase of Spencer Foods, Inc., a beef slaughtering and fabricating firm headquartered in Spencer, Iowa. Acquisition of the ABP Oakland plant "will add greater flexibility and potential to our beef group," according to Land O'Lakes president Ralph Hofstad.

"Beyond that," he says, "as more and more of the beef producer's traditional markets close down and others operate only from day to day, it becomes apparent that the producer himself is going to have its own and control more packing plants than he does at present if he's going to remain in the live-stock business. He can do this through his cooperatives."

Hofstad said that the ABP acquisition meets the three essential considerations established by the cooperative's board of directors: (1) There is a genuine need by the members for the livestock marketing service; (2) the need can be financed while maintaining the cooperative's strong financial position, and; (3) the capital employed can generate savings to repay the investment and provide adequate returns to the members using the service.

U of M Honors Retiring Staff And Faculty

One hundred and seventy-two retiring University of Minnesota faculty and staff members were honored at a reception May 22 at 2 p.m. in Coffman union great hall on the Twin Cities campus.

The 120 staff members and 52 faculty members have worked at the university a combined total of 3,845 years.

Among the more well-known members of the faculty to retire are Alfred O. C. Nier, regents' professor of physics and astronomy; William G. Shepherd, director of the space science center; and Paul Cartwright, assistant dean of the institute of technology.

Nier is perhaps best known for his work with the Viking Mars project. Nier was head of the national aeronautics and space administration's entry science team for the flights of Vikings I and II, and was the inventor of the mass spectrometer.

As a participant in the Manhattan project in the early 1940s, Nier used the mass spectrometer to isolate a sample of Uranium 235, an isotope that held the key to atomic fission. Nier has been a member of the faculty for 41 years.

Shepherd, a faculty member for 32 years is an electrical engineering professor who was vice president for academic administration from 1963 to 1973. He founded the University's physical electronics research laboratories and served as director. From 1954 to 1956, he was associate dean of the institute of technology, and was head of the electrical engineering department from 1956 to 1963.

Electrical engineering professor Paul Cartwright, has been assistant dean of the institute of technology since 1964. A faculty member for 37 years, Cartwright won the Horace T. Morse-Amoco Foundation award for his contributions to undergraduate education in 1968, and was the primary force behind many programs in the institute of technology now used as models by other U.S. universities.

Monica Molander, assistant to the University treasurer, is the staff member retiring after the most years at the University. Molander has been on the University staff since 1947.

BSU Schedules Three Summer Canoe Trips

Canoe paddles flashing, the voyageurs forced their laden craft up hundreds of miles of rivers and lakes to make their rendezvous with the trappers of the Northwest Company. The water was their highway, their constant companion. They new it intimately.

Now you can know it, too; maybe not as well as the voyageurs, but well enough to enjoy the solitude, the physical exhaustion, the companionship of the trail.

Bemidji State University Bald Eagle outdoor learning center will sponsor three trips into the Canadian waterways this June and July for expert and amateur canoeists alike.

The first two trips both take in the isolated variety of the White Otter Wilderness, north of Atikokan, Ontario. The first trip leaves the Bald Eagle Center, near Cass Lake, Minnesota, June 10 for 20 days traveling in the land of eagles and moose.

On this journey students will experience living and working as a unit and the joy of successfully completing a solo jaunt away from the main group. Backcountry navigation, portaging, rock climbing and wilderness safety are all part of the daily curriculum.

Second White Otter trip is shorter, leaving June 11 and returning on June 25. Like the longer voyage this journey will incorporate all facets of wilderness travel, the solo adventure and rock climbing.

Third trip will take the new voyageurs away from the rocky waterways of Ontario to the mighty Churchill River system in northern Saskatchewan. The Churchill River trip will leave the Bald Eagle Center July 7 and will span 30 days and 240 miles of this famous fur route of the north.

The route is a blend of long stretches of meandering river and island-studded lakes. Sigurd Olson wrote a book about his journey down this part of the Churchill. He called it the lonely land.

Two hundred years after the exploration of the Churchill by Alexander McKenzie and Thomas Forbisher the Churchill land has changed very little. The Hudson Bay Company maintains outposts along the river for trappers and commercial fishermen.

All of these wilderness canoe journeys are offered for university credit through Bemidji State University and have limited enrollment. If you would like to join a voyage, contact the Bald Eagle Outdoor Learning Center, Cass Lake, Minnesota, 218-665-2241.

Minn. Ranks 2nd In Dairy Production

Dairy processing plants in Minnesota manufactured 21 per cent of the nation's American process cheese and over 16 per cent of the butter during the first quarter of 1979, agriculture commissioner Mark W. Seetin reported recently.

Minnesota continues to rank second behind only neighboring Wisconsin in total manufactured dairy products.

"For the dairy month of June and for the foreseeable future, Minnesota consumers are assured abundant supplies of high quality Minnesota produced milk, butter, cheese and other dairy products," commissioner Seetin states.

Minnesota production of American process cheeses this January-March is estimated at over 110-million pounds. That is higher by over 13.6 million pounds or 14 per cent above first quarter 1978 output by this state's processing plants.

Butter production in Minnesota the first three months of 1979 is estimated at 44 million pounds. That was lower by almost three million pounds compared to a year earlier.

Bemidji Center Offers Scotland Trip In August

Following on the heels of a successful backpacking trip to Norway in 1978 the Bemidji state university Bald Eagle outdoor learning center will direct and lead a similar trip to the moors and highlands of Scotland this August.

Students will fly from Minneapolis to Glasgow, Scotland on August 25. Air transportation, backpacking gear (except for personal clothing), most meals, lodging and tuition are included in the trip cost of $760.

The backpacking itinerary includes trips to the Loch Ossian hotel, a hike to Glen Nevis along the highest mountain in Scotland, a 75-mile hike along the Westcoast Highlands and five days on the Isle of Skye rock climbing and kayaking along the coast.

This course is offered for credit through Bemidji state and Mankato state universities, or it may be taken for no credit.

For more information or to register for the Scotland trip please contact the Bald Eagle Outdoor Learning Center, Cass Lake, MN. You may phone 218-665-2241.

Inflation price you out of a new building? Take a look at Stran.

And reconsider.

As your Authorized Stran Builder, we're very much aware of how inflation has affected the cost of building new facilities.

Costs have risen dramatically for both materials and construction labor. That's why it makes good building sense to take a look at Stran's building systems approach. Why?

- Most of the building is fabricated in a modern manufacturing plant to take advantage of automation and more productive man-hour utilization.
- The system is designed and produced to go together fast at your job site. Saving valuable man-hours in on-site construction costs.

So before calling off your plans for a new building, call us and let's see how we can help you deflate inflation. We may have you breaking ground after all.

Diplomacy Of Expediency

United States position in foreign fields is often confusing and the pronouncements of arrangements and deals made by the administrative branch of government is somewhat frightening. An editorial in the Indianapolis News around the time of the Taiwan sell-out by our administration is interesting as our nation faces other major accords with foreign powers. The editorial follows:

The date is June 16, 1976. The speaker is Jimmy Carter, candidate.

"We have learned that every time we have made a serious mistake in recent years in our dealings with other nations. . . the American people have been excluded from the process of evolving and consummating our foreign policy."

Turn the clock forward to Dec. 19, 1978. The speaker is Jimmy Carter, president.

"My experience in negotiating sensitive and complicated agreements with foreign leaders. . . is that to negotiate through the news media, through public pronouncements, and with wide divergencies of views expressed by different leaders of a country, is not conductive to success.

"Had we caused a public debate in our country," the President continued, "about all the ramifications of the negotiations at the very time we were trying to conclude these discussions with the Chinese, it would have resulted in failure."

Resulted in failure? There is no basis for such an assumption. But our topic is the President's about-face as to whether the people can be trusted and if the President has lost faith in the people's ability to debate intelligently in a representative democracy.

What we have observed in the President, however, goes beyond his newly-found cynicism; we are alarmed at his "diplomacy of expediency."

Shortly after his announcement of the recognition of Red China, the President proclaimed that the Soveit Union had reacted in a "very positive" tone. Pressed for specifics, he said that Soviet leader Leonid I. Brehnev had expressed "his understanding that our commitment is to peace in the entire world acknowledging the fact that the American position is that our new relationship with the People's Republic of China will contribute to world peace."

Americans viewing the headlines deduced that the Soviet Union, instead of being deadlocked with the U.S. on an arms limitation treaty, was standing on the sidelines cheering the Red Chinese recognition.

It was a misleading, inaccurate interpretation; the President was guilty of mainpulating facts to suit his public relations needs. His statement was so misleading, in fact, that the Soviet Union broke its own rules and released the full test of Brezhnev's statement.

The President, however, has refused to release the text. It is a sad commentary on "open government" that Americans should have to learn what was said by reading the Russian announcements in Tass, a Russian newspaper.

Among the points raised by Brezhnev was a sharp reference to the Chinese-American agreements which, he said, contained expressions whose direction is beyond misinterpretation when one bears in mind the "usual vocabulary" of the Chinese leaders.

The "vocabulary" he referred to was specifically the word "hegemony." Hegemony has a distinctive connotation in Sino-Soviety relations. When the Chinese use it, it refers to the Soviet Union's attempt to dominate Asia. When the Russians use it, it means the Chinese attempt to build alliances to isolate the Soviet Union.

That the President premitted this word to be used was interpreted by the Russians as, at the very least, an "informal" American alignment with the Chinese against the Soveits. Experienced Chinese-Soviet diplomats of who there are few on the Carter team were shocked to see the word used and believe this and other errors and ambiguities can only harm the SALT talks and harden the Soviet posture.

It seems incredible, for example, that during these negotiations the U.S. embassy in the Soviet Union was never consulted. Ambassador Malcom Toon was not informed in advance of the hasty negotiations or of their consummation. He learned of the signing by listening to the Voice of America radio braodcast.

We have already commented on the treaty itself and on the unnecessary and unfortunate abrogation of the Taiwan treaty. The Taiwanese also had no specific warning of what was in the making. The whole scheme, from beginning to end, appears to have been hurried and uncoordinated, calculated for a media "spectacular." Far from being spectacular, it has come off as blundering and secretive amateurism.

The nation may forgive the blundering, although it may pay a price for it. Conducting the nation's business in secret, however, is inexcusable and not in harmony with covenants past or present. In his book, The Accountability of Power, Vice President Water Mondale wrote: "We have learned that most government secrets are far safer with the American people than those who would keep secrets from them."

He should have a talk with the President.

We Can't Afford This Procedure

Following editorial is from the Standard-Press of Burlington, Wis.:

We know the local post office can't do anything about this, but there were several comments last week when our newspaper printed the story that the clerk-carrier exam would be given in the near future and urged all interested parties to apply before Feb. 10 to take the job related tests that could lead to Postal Service employment.

Salaries, not including fringe benefits, for this clerk-carrier position begin at $7.27 an hour and increase to $8.56 an hour. Annually, that represents between $14,603 starting salary to $17,188 in eight years. The postmaster then goes on to say that they have discarded all previous applicants and are now looking for new applicants.

This, my friends, is what is wrong with the United States today. We have become unrealistic. When you take a person without any training whatsoever, who learns on the job, and then start that person at $7.27 an hour plus some of the best fringe benefits in the world, you're driving this great country of ours down the drain. Actually, this is a crime upon the taxpayers. You might argue that these people are taxpayers too — and they are — but a wage like that could, under no circumstances, be paid in the private sector. In fact, we have college graduates who can't earn that type of money.

We're talking about a 40-hour week at better than $300 per week.

We can't afford to pay people like that and why can't we afford it? Because, in our free enterprise system, the guy down the street can't pay us the prices we would have to demand of him to reach that kind of wage structure. It appears that those of us who send kids on to college are dumb and kids who finance themselves, even more dumb.

They'd be better off learning about government, taking a government test, working for the post office or some other federal job. I can recall some years ago Henry Schadeberg, Congressman from the First District, saying that someday this would be one of the major problems of our society. The government would pay the high wages, private enterprise would not be able to match them and chaos wuld develop which would lead to a takeover of the country or a recession or even a depression.

I hope Henry Schadeberg was wrong, but there's a chance he was right — and if he was right with that prediction, we're bordering on that problem right now. Some years ago, Germany had a situation where they had to fill a wheelbarrow with money to buy a loaf of bread. We're getting to that. In fact, we may even have to fill a front-end loader — and it will cost too much to own the front-end loader.

We need to demand that Congress and all levels of government become realistic. They would argue that you can't live on a low wage, but a better argument is if they keep raising wages there will be millions who won't be able to live at all.

Washington Report

Sen. Dave Durenberger

In his most vitriolic attack on the Congress, President Carter reacted to the defeat of his gas rationing proposal by calling Congress "irresponsible." The plan, which was designed as a response to national energy emergencies, was defeated because of "political timidity" and "parochial interests," according to the president.

Quite frankly, I think the president was wrong, both in the design of his gas rationing proposal and in his evaluation of why it was rejected by Congress.

Gas rationing was defeated because it was not a good plan. Rationing was viewed by the administration as being the best response to a national emergency, even though the evidence suggests that other options were discarded with little study. I am convinced that Congress, through the committee process, and with full-scale hearings, could devise a better response to a national energy emergency.

What was wrong with the administration's proposal?

The allocations of gasoline did not allow for the widely varying needs of the different states or for the needs of people in different areas of the same state. The needs of Minnesotans living in a small town or rural area, for example, are greater than those of the urban car owner who has shorter distances to travel and has access to public transportation.

Although the administration offered several amendments which improved the rationing plan, it still did not state the priority allocation that would be given to farmers and others involved in essential services and industries.

Also, the plan would have been implemented at the expense of low- and moderate-income citizens. According to the administration's proposal, gasoline would have been allocated on the basis of vehicle ownership and registration. Quite simply, those who own cars would receive ration coupons; those who do not own cars would receive nothing.

That seems reasonable, until the facts are examined. Nonownership of automobiles — nearly one-sixth of all U.S. households do not register automobile ownership — is concentrated in low income groups. Multiple ownership, of course, is greatest among high income groups. In fact, three-quarters of the households with incomes above $35,000 are multi-car families.

According to the administration's rationing plan those who own coupons may sell them in a "white market." The Department of Energy predicted that private businesses would be the major purchasers of extra coupons. Those of us who know anything about business know that the businesses and corporations of the United States will not swallow the increased energy costs. Instead, they will be passed on to consumers in the form of higher prices.

So who suffers? Low- and moderate-income people who have not had the advantage of selling coupons, but who now must pay higher prices for consumer goods. This massive transfer of income from low-income Americans to high-income groups could be in the billions of dollars, according to the Department of Energy.

Finally, the administration's proposal made no mention of the circumstances under which it would be implemented. It is unlikely that a national energy emergency would strike all states in the same way at the same time. Therefore, while some states are clamoring for implementation, other states would bitterly oppose the move. The result would almost certainly be inaction and chaos.

Since the defeat of the administration's plan, I have sent a letter to President Carter asking him to resubmit a proposed course of action in the event of a national energy emergency.

I will support the president's new plan if it clearly defines what this country's response to any energy emergency will be; outlines the conditions under which the plan would be implemented; identifies priorities if rationing is proposed, and; includes the recommendations made by the governors of all states.

The energy crisis won't be easily solved and the public will be forced to face some inconvenience and disruption in their daily lives before this nation has found a way out of the crisis.

However, I will insist that our energy policy reflect the American tradition of equity, that it contain a range of actions appropriate to a variety of situations and that it be well understood and the subject of broad public consensus before it is put into place.

A Bigger "Federal Nanny" Won't Bring Better Health

The Administration has listed the fight against inflation as its top domestic priority. Yet, it will soon unveil Phase I of the President's proposed national health insurance program, with a projected added cost to taxpayers of a cool $10-15 billion each year beginning about 1983.

Is national health insurance for major medical expenses needed? The Health Insurance Institute recently reported that 88.5 per cent of employees surveyed in 1978 already had maximum major medical (MMM) benefits of more than $100,000 — up from 24 per cent in 1973. And nearly all of the balance of these employees had MMM benefits of at least $5,000. Less than one per cent of health care claims exceeds this amount. So the few people not covered by employment-based plans (the unemployed or low wage earners) could obviously be covered by slightly expanding present programs.

No matter, the Administration will plow ahead with its $10-15 billion program anyway. And as Phase I implies, that cost estimate is just the beginning. In the revealing words of Joe Califano, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare: "It is rarely possible to solve every problem in an important sphere of our national life in a single bill."

Of course, the Administration sees this entire issue in a different light. Not only is universal and comprehensive national health insurance desirable — a "Noble dream" are the Secretary's words — but hallelujah, it might even save us money! How? Quite simply by preceding passage of Phase I with enactment of hospital cost containment legislation, which would impose mandatory price controls on hospital costs, if increases were not voluntarily limited to 9.7 per cent a year.

What would these controls mean for the cost and quality of American health care?

First, the Department of Health, Education and Walfare would be given a kind of veto from Washington over some 6,000 of the nation's hospitals. You might recall that HEW admitted actually losing some $6 billion of its own funds through fraud and abuse during the course of one year. Yet, presumably, this department would now be better qualified than local medical and administrative personnel to judge how each hospital could most effectively cut its costs and treat its patients.

Well, you might ask, what about all those wasteful hospitals? Would they be better disciplined? Sorry, but that's asking a bit much. You see, private hospitals through voluntary efforts in 1978 already reduced the rate of increases in hospital costs by about three percentage points, from 15.6 per cent to 12.8 per cent — a much better record than federal hospitals where costs increased by about 14-15 per cent in 1978. Yet, federal hospitals have been exempted from proposed controls.

Well then, what about labor costs, which amount to almost two-thirds of a typical private hospital's budget? Dear me! Perhaps it's only a coincidence, but it seems the Administration's bill has excluded wages for non-supervisory personnel as well.

Well, let's take a look at government regulations, which cost some hospitals the equivalent of $35 per patient per day. Surely hospital cost containment can reduce those unnecessary costs. Sorry, wrong again! The Administration's bill totally ignores the fact that government's regularory nightmare accounts for such a sizeable part of hospital cost inflation.

It's no coincidence that before the federal government decided it had a mission to improve the health care system, the cost per patient per stay rose each year by about 7.4 per cent. Now, more than a decade after a dramatic federal involvement in every step of that system, costs are rising at double-digit levels.

The Administration's hospital cost containment bill would undoubtedly result in still higher costs and reduced health care. There would be an incentive to encourage short-term hospital stays. What would that mean for sick people suffering from long-term illnesses? There would also be a disincentive to modernize expensive medical equipment, which could have serious consequences in a time of emergency.

We can only reduce costs and improve medical care by increasing competiton and reducing regulation. Some of those alternatives will be the subject of a future column.

Glenmore To Start Week-Long Family Plan

On June 3, 1979, the Glenmore treatment center in Crookston, will begin a new one-week in-patient family treatment program. In the past, Glenmore worked with families two days each week for approximately four to five weeks when one of the family's members was in Glenmore's residential treatment center. This new program will be more compact. It will be easier for families to attend and it will eliminate much unnecessary driving in these energy conscious times.

Goal of this program is to teach families what alcoholism and other drug dependencies are all about. Families will learn how the chemically dependent person who abuses drugs employs defenses to defend their usage. The family needs to become aware of how they are used as enablers by the chemically dependent person. They also need to learn what they can do to change that. Family members are not responsible for causing their loved one to drink. They need to learn how to avoid this kind of guilt.

Families will be together each morning with a family therapist for instruction and therapy sessions. In the afternoon, the family and the patient are together in the patient's group.

All family members, including children seven years of age or older, will be strongly encouraged to participate in this family program. A fee of $175 will be charged for the week. This therapy is covered through health insurance, self-pay, or social services.

The program will be run by Diane Markel, Glenmore's family therapist. Mrs. Markel received her master's degree in addiction counseling from the North Dakota state university and has had extensive experience in the family therapy program at the Heartview treatment center in Mandan, N.D.

Cancer Answers

"Cancer Answers" is a weekly column sponsored by the Red River Valley Medical society, the Red River Valley unit of the American Cancer society, and the Thief River Falls Times. Questions may be mailed to the editor, Thief River Falls Times. All questions will be answered, and those of a general interest will be published in "Cancer Answers."

Dear Cancer Answers:

Can animals get cancer too? If so, what kinds do they get? What causes cancer in animals? Can it be treated, or must the animal be "put to sleep"?

Brian

Dear Brian:

Yes, animals can develop cancer. The same cancers that occur in people occur in animals, which is why animals are important to research scientists looking for the causes of cancer and more effective ways of treating it.

Some animals seem to have higher incidence rates of certain types of cancer than others. Small rodents, such as mice and rats, seem to be more prone to mammary or breast cancer than other animals. Bone cancer occurs most often in large animals. Leukemias and lymphomas, cancers of the blood and lymph systems, are fairly common in cats and cattle. Veterinary scientists have found that boxers seem to develop cancer more frequently than any other breed of dog.

Except for certain specific virus-related cancers in animals, the causes for these diseases are not clearly understood. Animals share the same environment as people and are exposed to many of the same cancer-causing substances. In several cases the development of tumors in farm animals has alerted scientists to the hazards of agricultural or industrial chemical pollutants.

If detected early, cancer is treatable in animals just as it is in humans. Animal tumors can be treated with surgery, radiation, and chemotherapy in much the same ways as cancer is treated in humans. These types of treatment are expensive, however, and in many cases the cost is the determining factor in choosing whether an animal having cancer is treated or "put to sleep."

Dear Cancer Answers:

Since we know that cigarette smoking causes cancer, is there any reason to believe that eating smoked foods may also be a cancer risk?

D.W.

Dear D.W.:

Smoking foods, as a means of preservation, may induce or cause chemical changes leading to the production of substances that could potentially cause cancer.

However, as with so many other cancer-causing agents, the quantity consumed is of great importance. Small or moderate amounts of smoked food have not been shown to be harmful. A diet consisting primarily of smoked foods — or any other single type of food — could be expected to carry an increased risk.

Some statistical studies have shown a higher percentage of cases of esophageal and stomach cancer in countries where a normal diet contains consistently large amounts of smoked foods.

Slow down and live.

For many needs on the farm!

Telephone Co. Has New Coin Refund Method

Northwestern Bell has simplified its method of refunding coin telephone overpayments to its Minnesota customers.

Early this year, the company began using "postcard drafts" for refunds. The draft is printed on the front of a postcard and made out to the customer who requested the refund. The customer can either cash the draft at a bank or use it in paying his or her telephone bill.

The postcard system, which is computerized, replaces the old, manual method of mailing coins in an envelope. Northwestern Bell says the new system should result in substantial savings in labor costs and postage.

The company handles approximately 50,000 requests for coin telephone refunds each year. The average refund request amounts to about 25 cents.

Terms Used In Dairy Program To Be Changed

Some 32,619 dairy farmers in 20 states from Wisconsin to Texas will be told within the next two weeks to banish the words "price supports" and "over order premiums" from their vocabularies.

Making the request on behalf of Secretary of Agriculture Robert Bergland in a message to the Associated Milk Producers, Inc. (AMPI) membership is president Irvin J. Elkin of Amery, Wisc.

"The terms mislead consumers and congressmen," Elkin expalined. In talks with Bergland, agreement was reached to substitute "price stabilization" because that's what the support program really is.

"In the spring, government purchases surplus milk to keep the price stable to the farmer. In fall, government sells milk products because supplies are short, to keep the prices from rising for consumers," Elkin explained. "That's 'stabilizing' prices for farmers and consumers."

The "over order premium" will be called a "service charge," from now on because money paid farmers above the federal milk market order minimums is used to balance the market. In places, one day there is too much milk and the next too little.

For example, dairy plants closed on Memorial day (May 28) didn't bottle 145 tanker loads of milk (6.9 million pounds) for distribution in Chicagoland supermarkets. The trucks were directed by AMPI to those co-ops which could convert the milk into storable dairy products, like cheese and ice cream.

Bergland is asking all dairy farmers to forget the old terms and make the new ones a part of their vocabulary, Elkin revealed in his monthly column for AMPI's June "Dairymen's Digest."

In recent months, congressmen and consumer groups have complained that the two programs are inflationary.

Elderhostel Openings Are Still Available

People over 60 may live on campus and take courses in theater, children's literature and native plants at Moorhead state university this summer through Minnesota's new elderhostel program.

Plenty of openings are left for the week-long experience in college life scheduled at the university June 24-30. Fewer than a dozen have registered so far.

Besides the classes, elderhostel will offer a full week of other experiences ranging from field trips to live theater performances.

People don't have to be college or high school graduates to enroll. There are no exams and no tests; age is the only requirement. Spouses may register together and both are eligible even if only one is over 60.

For further information about elderhostel at Moorhead state, contact Elliot Garb at 236-2118.

Booklets On Mower Use Are Now Available

Accidents involving power lawn mowers are a major cause of serious injuries in the U.S. today. Some people do not know all they should about safe practices.

Estimates indicate there are more than 60,000 mower injuries treated each year in hospital emergency rooms. U.S. consumer product safety commission (CPSC) has publications on things to do before you start to mow and safe habits while you are mowing.

Concern Shown Over Elementary School Quality

"Elementary school supervision is declining at an alarming rate in Minnesota and the trend, if continued, will take its toll on the quality of elementary education in the next few years" according to R.F. Arnold, executive director of the Minnesota elementary school principals' association (MESPA).

Arnold expressed the association's concern in a recent letter to the governor emphasizing that it appears "school boards are placing preservation of the local school district above everything else and are disregarding the need for teacher supervision; communication with parents, advocacy for children and instructional leadership".

"We are about to see legislation permitting statewide school district 'pairing', an effort designed to bolster the offerings to students," Arnold continued. "While 'pairing' may be a reasonable approach to delcining resources, the concept opens the doors for disregard of existing rules and regulations including those providing for administrative staffing."

The association, in its attempt to amend the pairing bills, found legislators hesitant to jeopardize the concept by adding language that would assure adherence to existing state department rules and regulations.

"School district officials will be tempted to skirt the rules under the pairing concept as presently written. If they can do it with one regulation (administrative staffing), what's to prevent them from negating their responsibilities in areas of special education, title programs, employment practices and curriculum? Nothing," Arnold contends.

Approximately 60 school districts in Minnesota, responsible for the education of over 8,000 elementary children, do not employ elementary administrators. Dozens of districts have assigned two or more buildings to their principals. Other districts assign the principals' duties to teachers who are untrained in administration, to superintendents and interns.

Arnold concludes, "The K-6 education program is too important to be left to chance. Continuation of the present attitude of local school decision makers and the apparent apathy of parents when administrative staffing decisions are made can only rekindle the cry for accountability. 'Who's in charge?' is a question that will go unanswered in many of our schools."

High Number Of Drivers Insured Under No Fault

About 95 per cent of Minnesota vehicle owners were complying with the state's no-fault insurance law which is now four years old, said Ken Dirkzwager, director of the driver and vehicle services division, part of the Minnesota department of public safety.

"Minnesota has had generally good compliance with the no-fault law that requires insurance on every vehicle operated on public roads, streets and highways," he said.

"However, five to six per cent of all motorists are still uninsured. These drivers face stiff penalties that can range from fines and jail sentences, to the loss of their driver licenses and motor vehicle license plates," Dirkzwager warned.

"Some persons have the mistaken idea that the no-fault law prevents lawsuits. But uninsured motorists involved in a crash may still be sued and held liable for damages."

Every week, he said, more than 150 vehicle owners and drivers are found to be without no-fault insurance. These uninsured drivers are discovered through accident reports, court records, random checks with insurance companies; reviews of vehicle registration records and cancellation notices by insurance firms.

Once discovered, the uninsured motorist faces a host of problems. A conviction of driving without no-fault insurance is a misdeamenor and the driver's license is revoked for a minimum of 30 days, and up to 12 months, depending on circumstances.

The driver must go through the complete driver test again, pass it and apply for a new driver license. In addition, a certificate of current insurance must be delivered to the department of public safety before the new driver license is issued.

If the convicted driver is also the vehicle owner, the vehicle registration is revoked for at least 30 days. The license plates must be turned in to the public safety department.

After the revocation period, the vehicle owner must buy duplicate plates and furnish a certificate of current insurance before the registration is restored.

Plus that, the court penalty for a misdemeanor can mean a fine of up to $500 and-or a jail sentence of up to 90 days.

State Tennis Tournament

State tournament play produced disappointments for members of the 1979 Lincoln high school tennis team. Coach Whitey Olson's Prowlers, after an outstanding regular season, breezed through Sub Region 4 and Region 8AA competition and headed into Minnesota Class AA state tournament play with high hopes.

But dreams of a trophy finish for the team evaporated when Region 7AA representative Virginia edged Thief River Falls 3-2 in a first round match last Tuesday that produced a 360-mile, 12-hour journey for the Prowlers when rain forced a delay and finally a change in sites from Bemidji to Hill City.

Virginia then went on to join the four Class AA semifinalists on the University of Minnesota courts in Minneapolis where the Blue Devils beat Sibley 3-2 to reach the finals where powerful Edina East claimed a 5-0 decision.

"If we could have gotten by Virginia we would have been in the finals, no question," said Olson. "I don't know how to be modest and say it, but the only team we probably wouldn't have been able to handle was Edina because their power is where our power is. But we would have given them a good match."

Making it more frustrating for the Prowlers was the long drive for the first round matches, held outside of the metropolitan area for the first time this year because of the split into Class A and Class AA competition.

"It doesn't seem like we got to the state meet," said Olson, referring to the site of the first round — the isolated Quadna resort 20 miles south of Grand Rapids. "I just can't believe it's a fair deal for the outside teams because of the travel."

In addition to the first round loss suffered by the team, most observers were also surprised that the Prowlers' Bill Jury, rated among the top singles players in the state, did not make it past the first round of the Class AA individual competition Thursday on the University of Minnesota courts. Tom Schull of Minneapolis Southwest won the first nine games en route to a 6-0, 6-7, 7-5 victory over Jury in a match played indoors because of what officials thought was cool weather (60 degrees) and a threat of rain. Jury is much more effective outside where his quickness is such a factor in a faster game.

"Bill had a difficult time, in all honesty, with the travel," mentioned Olson. After returning from Hill City at 1 a.m. Wednesday morning, Jury, along with teammates Mitch Rustad, Bill Michalek and Tom Bjorkman had to turn around and leave for Minneapolis at noon that day to play Thursday morning. "I think the mileage factor had as much affect on us as anything," repeated Olson.

"We felt Bill deserved a crack at being one of those last four kids (Semifinalists)," said Olson. "I think he's capable of playing well against those kids."

"We had an excellent year," reminded Olson. "We think maybe things could have been different at the end, but that's why they play tournaments."

With Michalek the only senior on the 1979 squad, Olson was hardly overconfident when he said, "Things look real good for us next year."

Ostby Hits Grand Slam In Fast Pitch Softball

A grand slam home run by Ron Ostby helped North Star Transport rally from a 4-0 deficit to a 7-6 victory over Schmidts Thursday in Thief River Falls fast pitch solftball league action.

Schmidts scored four times in the second inning when Rick Johnson led off with a double to left. Bob Tunheim reached base on an error and Steve Haats came up with a two-run single. A double by Dean Lawrenz and Jim Olson's single plated two more runs.

The two teams traded fourth inning runs for a 5-1 ball game entering the fifth when Ostby turned it into a 5-5 contest. With one out, Mike Hoper singled to center to begin the North Star Transport comeback. A single by Darrell Stromlund and an error loaded the bases for Ostby who drilled a one-strike pitch over the left field barrier.

Schmidts regained the lead in the bottom of the inning on Bruce Johnson's run-scoring single, but North Star Transport scored the tying and winning runs in the sixth on one base hit and three two-out Schmidts errors.

Dallmann Athletic, Inc., the last team to open its 1979 season because of earlier weather delays, out-scored Schmidts 8-7 Friday.

The high-scoring affair started with a Dallmann Athletic, Inc. run in the first inning on a walk to Rex Rugland, a wild pitch, a ground-out and another wild pitch.

In the third inning, Keith and Steve Daley reached base on errors, Rugland beat out an infield hit, Keith Daley scored on an error, Bruce Johnson drove in a run with a single to right and Mike Drury came up with a two-run single to left.

Schmidts cut the gap to 5-1 in the bottom of the third when their Bruce Johnson doubled and Jim Olson singled.

Three Dallmann Athletic, Inc. errors in the fourth, combined with three base hits, enabled Schmidts to take a 6-5 lead. Olson's two-run single highlighted the inning.

A three-run Dallmann Athletic, Inc. sixth inning finally decided the issue, although Schmidts pulled within 8-7 before surrendering.

Coca-Cola tied it 4-4 in the third, but Melvies runs in the third and fourth made it 6-4.

Park Bears Pose Threat To Visitors

A steady increase in the number of tourists visiting U.S. parks each year has so altered bear behavior that the dangerous mammals have begun to attack tourists. It's called the "mugger bear syndrome," reports the current issue of National Wildlife magazine, and the problem is reaching epidemic proportions in Montana's Glacier national park.

From 1910, when Glacier was created, through 1955, only one person was injured by a grizzly there, says the National Wildlife Federation's bimonthly publication. As park visitation climbed rapidly in the mid-1950's, the situation began to change. Since 1956, 21 people have been injured by grizzlies and three have been killed.

To date, Glacier is the only U.S. park where grizzly behavior changes have become so obvious. But it's a problem all parks may have to face. Charles Jonkel, a University of Montana grizzly expert explained to National Wildlife: "American parks provide a setting for continuous contact between bears and people, and as a result, we are beginning to suffer serious problems with fearless and aggressive bears."

At Great Smoky Mountains and Yosemite national parks, there have been reports of black bears charging people. But because grizzlies are so much bigger than their cousins — they can grow to 10 feet and 1,700 pounds — the situation at Glacier is much more alarming.

There is another complicating problem: The grizzly was classified as a "threatened" species by the federal government in 1975. Glacier is one of the bear's last major strongholds in the lower 48 states, reports National Wildlife, and now because of its aggressive behavior, the animal's survival at Glacier may be ensured only by imposing stringent controls on people in the park. But this would contradict a federal mandate which states that parks are for the people.

Recently, park officials have noted a new, alarming pattern in the grizzly attacks. Instead of the classic confrontations involving a sow and her cubs, many attacks have involved just a single bear. And often the bears have attacked without provocation. In one case, a woman was killed when a young grizzly ripped into her tent at a popular campground and dragged her away.

"Last year," says National Wildlife, "only one minor injury occurred when two hikers surprised a pair of grizzlies feeding along a trail." But a number of hair-raising incidents took place, including one in which a woman had to take refuge in a backcountry outhouse while a bear stood outside scratching at the walls.

In attempts to solve the serious problem, Glacier park officials are trying to prevent grizzlies from associating food with people. Garbage collection and storage facilities have been improved. At campgrounds, all ice chests and other food storing devices must be locked in cars at night. And backpackers are no longer allowed to bury trash in the trail.

Already Glacier authorities have closed certain trails and campgrounds. But despite these preventive actions, problems can still occur. What should you do if you encounter a grizzly on the trail? Here's the magazine's advice:

+Don't panic.

+If the bear doesn't charge or menace you, speak to it in firm, even tones and back away slowly.

+Never run. Climb high into a tree if possible.

+If the grizzly charges, shout (don't scream) at it.

+If you are attacked, try to lie face down on the ground or curl up with your hands clasped behind your neck. Play dead. Don't struggle or cry out.

If you are lucky, says National Wildlife, this will convince the grizzly that you are not a "threat."

The U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that in late 1978 an unusually large number of women had entered or reentered the civilian labor force, as the nation's work force reached the 102-million mark.

Upper, Lower Red Lake Is State's Biggest

Ever had an argument over which of Minnesota's lakes is the largest? The Department of Natural Resources lists the state's five largest lakes in this order:

1. Upper and Lower Red Lake, 288,800 acres.
2. Mille Lacs, 132,510 acres.
3. Leech, 109,415 acres.
4. Winnebigoshish, 69,821 acres.
5. Vermillion, 49,110 acres.

In addition, Minnesota's share of Lake Superior is 1,315,700 acres and the state claims 307,010 acres of Lake of the Woods.

In Minnesota, there is one boat for every 7.3 persons.

New FWS Program Is Protecting Habitat

A 630-acre tract located 40 miles north of Madison, Wis., has been purchased by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS) through a program referred to as "unique wildlife ecosystems." This is the first land acquisition in the Great Lakes area under this program authority.

The 630-acre tract is an integral portion of a 2,000-acre proposal known as the "Fox River sandhill crane marsh." Acquisition of the remaining acreage is anticipated in the future, pending congressional appropriations.

Fox River marsh was threatened by drainage for agricultural development. Over 600 acres of marsh located downstream from the newly purchased FWS site was drained in 1974. Conversion to agriculture usage was an imminent conclusion for the Fox River sandhill crane marsh as well.

Greater sandhill crane, for which this tract is named, is the species of major concern. Shallow marshes provide excellent breeding, staging and feeding areas for sandhill cranes. Sandhill cranes are highly territorial, sometimes defending areas of up to several hundred acres, FWS biologists said. Five pairs of cranes have nested and successfully raised young for the last several years. Approximately 60 non-breeding cranes remain on the marsh during the summer. In the fall, the marsh serves as a staging area for up to 350 sandhill cranes.

In addition to the area's value for sandhill cranes, it is recognized by the FWS and other wildlife authorities because of a diversity of wildlife species and habitat types. According to surveys the area harbors a minimum of 100 species of birds, 26 species of mammals, 17 species of reptiles and amphibians and six species of mollusks. Ten distinct plant communities ranging from upland pines and hardwoods to aquatic or wetland types are found on the area. Several wildlife species found at the marsh are recognized on Wisconsin's list of endangered species while others are on the "watch" status.

Funding for the "unique wildlife ecosystems" program is authorized under the land and water conservation fund act of 1965. Lands acquired under this program will be a part of the national wildlife refuge system.

Numerous areas have aleardy been identified as unique wildlife ecosystems. In the Great Lakes Region, these areas include native prairie in Minnesota, marshlands in Wisconsin, sand dunes in Michigan, caves in Illinois and virgin forest lands in Indiana and Ohio. To date 32 areas have been identified for possible preservation under this program.

Preservation process is initiated by the identification of areas which qualify as unique or nationally significant wildlife ecosystems. Selection criteria includes wildlife habitats that are unique to a region or nationally significant wildlife ecosystems which provide benefits to the public over a broad geographical area. Areas utilized by a diversity of wildlife species will be given consideration in the evaluation. Habitats used by threatened and endangered species will also receive critical evaluation. Information will be obtained from knowledgeable sources and further refined from field inspections. A plan which identified these ecosystems and outlines a strategy for preservation is being prepared by the Fish and Wildlife Service for each state.

Second step in the process is the preservation and management of the ecosystems identified. The manner of preservation selected will provide optimum protection to the wildlife resources and best serve the long-term needs of the American public. Preservation alternatives may include acquisition by state or local governments, private organizations or private individuals. The Fish and Wildlife Service's role in this cooperative effort will be to protect ecosystems which are imminently threatened and cannot be preserved by any other agency. Protection may include a cooperative management agreement, easements or acquisition of an area when it cannot be protected by any other means.

Golf Lessons Start June 11 For Beginners

Beginning adult golf lessons will begin at the Thief River Country Club Mon., June 11, at 7 p.m. Golf instructors for this year are Deb Jacobson and Dick Skay.

Instruction will consist of five Monday lessons with major emphasis on the swing, putt, grip and etiquette when playing on the course.

Lessons are free for all new members. Cost for the five-week program will be $10, which in addition to the lessons, will include practice balls and a free round of golf with instructors at the end of the program. Participants need not be members of the Thief River Country Club, but pre-registration is requested by calling 681-2955.

Junior Golf League Starts On Thursday

Junior golf league for both boys and girls will begin at the Thief River Country Club Thursday. Thursday mornings are designated as junior league day with weekly league rounds being played at this time.

Prizes will be awarded weekly to team members of the team with the weeks low score. Junior league is open to all country club members under 18 years of age. Cost of the 8-week league is $2.

Included in the junior league program will be a junior invitational shortstop and a junior club tournament and banquet. In addition, the Thief River Country Club is sponsoring teams (both boys and girls) in Minnesota golf association (MGA) state competition. This involves traveling to other Minnesota courses to compete against golfers from other communities. Participants need not be members of the Thief River Country Club to take part in the MGA competition.

All junior golfers interested in either the junior golf league or MGA competition are invited to call the Thief River Country Club at 681-2955.

Deadline Is June 15 For Moose Hunters

Applications for Minnesota's 1979 moose hunting season must be postmarked or delivered to the DNR License Center in St. Paul no later than Fri., June 15.

The reminder was issued by the DNR, which also noted that persons who received moose hunting permits in either 1975 or 1977 are not eligible to apply this year.

A total of 685 hunting parties, each comprising four persons, will be selected at random by computer. The procedure will allow 2740 hunters to take part in this season's hunt.

License fee is $100 per party.

Application blanks and instructions showing the various hunting zones can be obtained from county auditors and most license agents. The forms are also available at various DNR offices throughout the state and the DNR License Center at 625 North Robert Street, St. Paul.

Applicants for northeastern Minnsesota moose zones are required to attend an orientation session before going out to hunt. Moose license holders will be able to attend these meetings at any of three locations and a time schedule for the meetings is included with the application information. All members of the party need not attend at the same time.

Moose licenses for the Northeast zones will be marked valid at the meetings.

1979 Bald Eagle Census Nearly Doubles Previous Survey Count

National Wildlife Federation has reported that its first census of bald eagles in the "lower 48" states, taken during two weeks of January, 1979, produced a count of 9,836 eagles — nearly twice the number counted in any previous survey of the endangered national bird.

The census was taken between January 13 and 27 by more than 2,600 counters, representing 39 state wildlife and six federal agencies and 72 private conservation organizations, according to William S. Clark, director of the NWF's Raptor Information Center.

Clark attributed the surprisingly high count of nearly 10,000 bald eagles — 6,196 adults, 3,413 immature birds, and 227 of indeterminate age — to the "intensity" of the NWF survey and the fact that its participants, under the guidance of 43 eagle experts serving as regional coordinators, were looking only for eagles.

A midwinter waterfowl-eagle inventory conducted by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service during the first week of January reported only 5,315 eagle-sightings — a figure that Clark attributed to the wildlife service's "primary interest" in waterfowl. The same USFWS waterfowl-eagle inventory last year counted only 4,516 bald eagles in the "lower 48."

"We sent people into many eagle habitats where they (the USFWS counters) just don't go when they are looking primarily for waterfowl," Clark explained.

Clark estimated that most of the bald eagles counted in both the NWF survey and the USFWS inventory were "immigrants" — winter visitors who fly down from Alaska and Canada when cold weather interferes with their hunting and feeding north of the border. Alaska has a summertime bald eagle population estimated at up to 50,000 and Canada's summer bald eagle population is estimated at 40,000 to 45,000.

A resident or year-round population of about 5,000 eagles in the lower 48 states would place the bald eagle population for the North American continent at about 100,000.

The bald eagle has been listed by the Interior Department as an "endangered species" in 43 of the contiguous states and "threatened" in five others — Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Oregon and Washington — since February of 1978. The NWF survey covered only the lower 48 states because the national bird is plentiful in the 49th state, Alaska, and nonexistent in the 50th, Hawaii.

Although the total of 9,836 bald eagles tallied in the NWF census was much higher than in previous counts, Clark said the new survey does "not necessarily" confirm the widely-held belief that bald eagles have made a "comeback" in the U.S. since some deadly pesticides were outlawed in the early 1970s.

"We just haven't had good nationwide figures in the past," said Clark, "and in this survey we probably counted only a fraction of all the bald eagles either nesting or roosting here during those weeks in January. But we have established a reference point."

The results of future NWF surveys, Clark said, will be invaluable: "Concentrations of eagles will, of course, tell us where the best habitats are and this will tell us the roosting birds' needs. If the population in one area suddenly declines, we can try to find out why. Was it pollution or deterioration of habitat? We want to learn to be good hosts to our wintering bald eagles."

Jay Sheppard, staff ornithologist for the U.S. office of endangered species, agreed with Clark that the high count was not indicative of a comeback. "It's too hard to judge because a whole new method of counting was used in this survey," he said.

But another eagle expert, Jim Ruos, nongame bird specialist in the office of migratory bird management of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, thought the survey "tended to confirm" that the bald eagle is making a comeback.

"It shows that this bird is in pretty good shape throughout a good part of his range," said Ruos. "The ratio of young to mature birds is also fairly high — and that's a good sign. Some populations are still depressed — for instance along the York River and the James River in Virginia, where we have bad pollution problems. But overall it is apparent that eagle productivity is up."

In the NWF census, 1,295 birds counted along the Mississippi River flyway between the river's source in Minnesota and its confluence with the Ohio River, at Cairo, Ill., were not credited to any state but to the flyway. Of these, 39 were counted above Dubuque, Iowa and 1,256 were counted below that point.

Upper Mississippi Valley count was directed by Elton Fawks, of East Moline, Ill., a veteran of 23 bald eagle surveys in that area. "There's definitely been a bald eagle comeback," said Fawks, who attributed this year's high count partly to restrictions placed on the use of pesticides in the early 1970's and partly to the fact that "more bald eagles are using the Mississippi Valley as wintering ground each year."

The use of DDT was virtually outlawed in 1972. In the period from 1962 to 1966, when DDT and other deadly pesticides were in wide use, only 20 per cent of the bald eagles wintering along the Mississippi were young or immature, Fawks pointed out, while this year the proportion of immatures jumped to 30.5 per cent in his area.

Washington state, with 1,126 sightings reported the biggest bald eagle population among the states surveyed. Runners-up were California with 810; Florida 675; Oklahoma 581; Oregon 494; Texas 435; Idaho 392; Arkansas 379; and Wyoming 365.

Eagles were sighted in all but three states — New Hampshire, Vermont and West Virginia. Bad weather may have interfered with the census in those states, said Clark. Bitterly cold weather and frozen lakes may also have affected the count in Minnesot, which reported only three sightings despite the fact that the state hosts a fairly large eagle population in the summertime.

Another state count which Clark felt was incomplete was in Florida, where the tally was based mostly on a count of eagle nests rather than actual bird sightings.

Raptor information center, established in 1976 by the National Wildlife Federation as a clearing house for data on eagles and other birds of prey, is working on a more intensive analysis of the survey. The analysis will provide information on eagle distribution vital to local bald eagle management, especially in inventorying public lands for potential designation as "critical habitat."

Twins Try-Out Camp Is Set For June 18-19

Dream of almost every youngster, to become a major league baseball player, is something the Minnesota Twins are giving young men the chance to fulfill when the 19th annual Metropolitan Stadium try-out camp is held on Monday and Tuesday, June 18 and 19.

To participate in the camp, one must be eligible to be signed to a professional contract. This requirement includes all players graduated from high school who weren't drafted earlier in June by another organization, who do not come under the restrictions of baseball's college agreement and who have not yet reached their 23rd birthday.

The camp will get underway at 9 a.m. on Mon., June 18. All players should bring their own equipment (except bats and balls) and enter the stadium through the press gate after completing registration. Following Monday's workout, a select number of players will be choosen from the day's drills to return for a more concentrated session the following day.

Twins vice president and farm director George Brophy will supervise the activities, with executive vice president Bruce Haynes and farm system aide Jim Rantz also lending their expertise. Twins' scouts assisting include Angelo Guiliani, Bill Kane, John Mauer, Marv Olson, Ken Staples, Earl Naylor, Omv Hahn and Mike Brisecse.

An average of three or four prospective big-leaguers have been signed annually through the session, among those being Twins righthander Gary Serum. Last year, St. Paul's Bob Blake came out for the camp, was signed to a Twins' contract, and at present the left-hander is pitching for the Midwest League's Wisconsin Rapids Twins.

"The camp can be very helpful for young men in this part of the country," said Rantz. "We're holding it again after the June free-agent draft, which gives players who were passed over in the draft the chance to show their talents to big league scouts. With spring baseball seasons somewhat limited in the Midwest because of weather, scouts don't get the chance to see everyone they would like to. The camp gives the kids a chance to be seen."

Boundary Area Fishing Unique

A Minnesota resident cannot fish the boundary waters between his home state and Wisconsin without a resident Minnesota fishing license. A non-resident license issued by Wisconsin won't do.

Minnesota Department of Natural Resources said some anglers on the Mississippi and St. Croix rivers may not know of the requirement.

Many Minnesota residents have summer homes in Wisconsin and buy a non-resident Wisconsin license instead of a Minnesota license. But, says the DNR, the non-resident license does not authorize them to fish on the boundary waters.

DNR officials said the same regulations apply to Wiscosnsin residents fishing on the Minnesota side of the boundary waters. They must have a resident Wisconsin license — a non-resident license from Minnesota will not suffice.

Under a fishing reciprocity agreement worked out between the two states a few years ago, anglers of both states may fish the boundary waters between Minnesota and Wisconsin from shore to shore on their resident license.

Minnesota DNR enforcement officials pointed out, however, that in such cases the angler is required to return to his home state with his fish "by the most direct route".

Good Bass Opener

Our headline is a bit conservative according to our sources of information around the Twin Cities. "Excellent" was the word used at Roy's Live Bait at Excelsior when he described the opening weekend at Minnetonka. "Fantastic" was the word used at Paul's Landing on Crystal Bay on Minnetonka.

Both locations agree that bass were taken in shallow water with many fisherman fishing from shore. On the opening day a 5½ pounder was registered at Paul's Landing and before the weekend was over many bass weighing more tha four pounds were registered. At Roy's Live Bait several bass weighing five and six pounds were registered.

Night crawler was a popular and effective bait. Early in the morning and in the evening was the best time to fish with many limits being taken around 6 a.m.

Tim's Sport Shop at Forest Lake reports that the bass were hitting all day on Forest Lake in 10 and 15 feet of water. The fishing was excellent with many four and five pounders being taken.

Stringers of two and three pounders were taken from Prior Lake according to Sam Ricci of Savage Bait & Tackle.

Crappie Report

Duane Gramstad of Lakeville has had good crappie fishing in Spring Lake.

"We have fished Spring Lake five times this year catching around 200 crappies so far — not keeping all of them. If you want to catch nice crappies go to Spring Lake! Use plain hook and minnow or Little Joe Spinner and minnow," he writes.

Walleye Report

Walleye fishing has been good in many sections of Minnesota. Donna Hamre who operates Elmer's Sportsmen's Center at Baudette reports that fishing continued excellent in the Rainy River and at both Morris Point Gap and Light House Gap in Lake of the Woods. The largest walleye weighed 10-pounds, two-ounces and was taken by Bill Rethke of St. Paul. Spinner and minnow has been the most popular bait and fishing has been in six to eight feet of water.

Three walleyes all over eight pounds were registered with Marv Koep at Nisswa Bait and Tackle. The next day three walleyes over nine pounds were registered. Dale Westerlund of Brainerd had one weighing nine-pounds, 12-ounces. Mike Boen of Eden Prairie had one weighing nine-pounds, nine-ounces and Chet Olsen of Burnsville had one weighing nine-pounds, one-ounce. All were taken from Gull Lake on jigs and minnows.

Don Wendt registered a walleye weighing 12-pounds, three-ounces caught by Mike Stephens of Calumet in Lake Panacia near Grand Rapids. This was the winner of the weekly contest conducted by Rapids Tackle.

Jerry Fuller of Fullers Tackle at Park Rapids registered a walleye weighing 11-pounds, four-ounces taken from Blue Lake by Gordon Dennis of Park Rapids. In second place for the week was a walleye weighing ten-pounds, five-ounces taken from Little Mantrap by John Laub of Blaine.

Willmar Club, DNR Plan To Stock Otters

Willmar Sportsmen's club has donated $600 to the Department of Natural Resources to help sponsor a project to reintroduce river otters along the Minnesota river valley from Odessa to Watson.

River otters disappeared from the Minnesota river valley about 100 years ago.

Portion of river proposed for the release is a 40-mile corridor comprised of the Big Stone national wildlife refuge and the Lac qui Parle wildlife management area.

The donation was announced by Carrol Henderson, DNR nongame wildlife program supervisor, after he received word of the gift from Ben Thoma of the Willmar Sportsmen's club.

Current plans call for live-trapping twelve otters in northern Minnesota in October of 1979 and transporting them to release sites on the Big Stone national wildlife refuge, Marsh lake and Lac qui Parle lake.

Henderson said, "The donation by the Willmar Sportsmen's club represents a major contribution toward restoring an extirpated species to its former range. The $600 gift will cover one-third of the costs anticipated for the project."

MN. Livestock Farmers Show Earnings Rise

In their first "really profitable year" since 1973, cattle feeders enjoyed a record-breaking high income in 1978, report agricultural economists Paul Hasbargen and Delane Welsch.

University of Minnesota farm management specialists say that both cattle feeders and hog producers had excellent incomes in 1978. Their information from southern Minnesota record-keeping farms shows earnings on these farms were even greater than the previous record set in 1973. They caution that their figures reflect current dollars, and have not been adjusted for inflation.

"Higher livestock prices, record crop yields and larger business volume all contributed to the record high net earnings," they report.

Returns over feed and cash costs were $27 per 100 pounds (cwt.) of beef produced in 1978 compared with about $7 in 1977 and 1973. Hasbargen explains that this large increase in returns was almost completely due to the increase in cattle prices during 1978 since feed and direct cash costs were almost the same as in 1977.

He also points out that this is the first really profitable year for cattle feeders since 1972. "In fact, losses in 1974 were about equal to the profits of 1978," Hasbargen explains. "Losses occurred also in 1976. The record returns of 1978 came too late for some previous cattle feeders who were forced to discontinue feeding because of the large losses of those years."

Beef cow herds showed good returns for the first time in five years. Losses on this enterprise were largest in 1974 following two good years. Earnings from the cow herd set a new record in 1978.

Like earnings from cattle feeding, the increase over the previous cow herd income record was great enough to more than offset the decline in purchasing power of the dollar. Hasbargen expects these two beef enterprises to show very good earnings again in 1979 because of a decline in beef supplies and subsequently higher beef prices than prevailed in 1978.

Return over feed and cash costs from the farrow-to-finish hog enterprise was $25 per cwt. of pork produced in 1978 compared with the previous record of $21 in 1975. According to Walsch, this is not quite enough to offset the declining purchasing power of the dollar. Therefore, specialized hog farms that have not grown in business volume during the past three years probably had earnings similar to purchasing power to that of 1975 and 1973.

Adolescence, Middlescence Often Collide

by Jeanne Hanson
'U' M News Service

Teenagers in the family are discovering sex in technicolor, just at the time their parents are feeling a little gray. Adolescents are faced with a bewildering array of career choices at the same time their parents are beginning to face retirement.

Does adolescence hit middle-aged parents at a bad time? Are teenagers mired in an unsympathetic family situation?

Although the development of adolescence has been studied exhaustively and middle age is coming more under study too, the two stages are seldom considered together — the way they occur in families.

The collision between adolescence and "middlescence" has been examined at the University of Minnesota center for youth development and research. The conclusion is that both groups are having some of the same problems at the same time, but on different levels. Having one's children a few years earlier will not really improve the situation, according to Miriam Seltzer, assistant professor at the center.

Tension between the generations can cause misunderstanding and conflict, but may lead to greater understanding rather than crisis, according to Barbara Smith, a student of Seltzer's who published her findings in a recent issue of the "Center Quarterly."

Ego problems hit adolescents, and to a lesser extent, their middle-aged parents, Smith says. Although most people realize that teenagers are going through turmoil of forming an adult indentity, few realize that "Middlescence" poses identity problems too.

For one thing, both groups must learn how to separate themselves somewhat from their families. Middle-aged people must also learn how to avoid stagnation and rigidity and to value wisdom more than physical power, among other things, Smith says.

Adolescents looking for support and guidance may not be able to find enough of it from parents who are feeling insecure about their own future. Adolescents who typically point to their parents' shortcomings add to the strain. It is a clash of inferiority complexes, Smith writes.

Sexuality is an issue with both groups. Adolescents, just launching their sexual careers, may be envied subtly by their parents who may be experiencing menopause and periods of psychological impotence, Smith says. At the same time, middle-aged adults are trying to focus more on socializing rather than sexualizing in their relationships.

Body changes trouble teenagers and their parents in different ways, according to the report. While adolescents are experiencing rapid changes in their bodies and body images, middle-aged people are experiencing changes that add up to the realization that life is no longer limitless. Death is no longer seen as a "ridiculous abstraction."

The meaning of one's work is also changing in both adolescence and "middlescense." Teenagers are faced with difficult choices for the future, while their middle-aged parents may be haunted by "career goals unachieved, unfulfilled dreams, mistaken decisions, and things left undone," Smith writes. Both groups may feel a threat from each other in the job market.

The waning of the parent-child role can be painful for both groups, even for adolescents desiring freedom. Middle-aged homemakers face the prospect of the "empty nest" just as they sense a not-so-subtle cultural message that they may have wasted their lives and have been cheated out of a career. The variety of career choices open to their daughters may make them envious. Their husbands often want to turn back to the family just at the time their children are demanding more distance.

The "generation collision" can be difficult to adjust to, although efforts can keep both sides flexible, Seltzer said.

"Mutual understanding is the first step. Parents should stop blaming their children for all their problems," she said. "Gradually, adolescents should begin to view their parents as people. Both should grant themselves and each other the right to have some problems. Once they grant each other humanity, friendship becomes real."

State Red Meat Production Is Down From '78

Commercial slaughter production of red meats in Minnesota during the first two months of 1979, estimated at nearly 284.9 million pounds, continued to be eighth highest in the nation despite a 2-million pound drop compared to a year ago, reports the Minnesota department of agriculture.

All of the reduction was experienced in February, due primarily to severe weather and adverse travel conditions that sharply curtailed normal livestock marketing activity.

Minnesota farmers have experienced the most favorable livestock prices in many years, the estimated farm value of January, Feburary commercial slaughter marketings of livestock was nearly $242-million, noted deputy agriculture commissioner Rollin M. Dennistoun.

Beef cattle accounted for the highest volume, almost 116,000 tons on the hoof valued at $128.9-million. That compared with 127,500 tons and $90.8 million farm value for commercial beef slaughter during the first two months last year.

Hog slaughter was second high, almost 105,000 tons live weight with a farm value of over $109-million. Because hogs yield a higher percentage of pork to the red meat supply than cattle contribute to the beef supply, this could be the first year in decades that Minnesota pork production will exceed beef production.

Calf slaughter this February showed a rare increase over the previous month, but still was well below a year ago, and the two-month total was only 241,000 pounds live weight with a farm value of $182,000. Veal from calves is Minnesota's smallest contribution to red meat supplies.

Lamb and sheep slaughter during January, February totaled 2,400 tons live weight with a farm value of $3.65-million, higher than last year by 6.5 per cent on volume and by 26 per cent on farm value.

Serious Crimes Decrease For Second Year

Serious crimes in Minnesota dropped slightly last year, for the second year in a row, announced Paul Tschida, superintendent of the bureau of criminal apprehension, a division of the Minnesota department of public safety.

Crimes decreased 1.2 per cent in 1978 compared to 1977. Total reported serious crimes numbered 164,593 last year as against 166,612 in 1977.

1978 crime decline continued the downward trend that started in the second quarter of 1976, said Tschida. More than 170,000 serious crimes were reported in 1976. Serious crimes totalled 168,469 in 1975 and 152,180 for 1974.

Overall, violent crimes against persons went down 1.3 per cent from 1977 to 1978. Murder dropped off 20.6 per cent, aggravated assault decreased 3.1 per cent and robbery totals remained about the same. However, rape rose 3.2 per cent and was the only serious crime category to show an increase last year.

Crimes against property decreased 1.2 per cent in 1978 compared to 1977. Property crimes account for more than 95 per cent of all serious crimes.

Burglary declined 2.8 per cent, motor vehicle theft decreased 4.9 per cent and larceny-theft remained almost unchanged.

Murders in Minnesota totalled 81 in 1978 compared to 102 in 1977. In nearly 70 per cent of the murders, the victim was killed by a relative or acquaintance. Half of the murders involved firearms.

Reported rapes last year number 795, up from 770 in 1977. During 1978, more than three-fourths of the cases were forcible rapes and the rest were attempted rapes.

Aggravated assaults declined to 3,298 in 1978 compared to 3,402 in 1977. Most common weapons were knives or cutting instruments in 28 per cent of the cases and firearms in 27 per cent of the incidents.

Total robberies remained about the same with 3,407 reported during 1978 and 3,404 in 1977. Robbery losses declined last year to $836,971, a nine per cent drop from $925,746 in 1977.

Hardest hit by robbers were commercial businesses which lost $238,849 in 1978. Bank robberies last year jumped to 48 compared to 27 in 1977. However, the average bank robbery netted $2,110 in 1978 and $3,640 in 1977.

Larceny-thefts numbered 100,624 last year, virtually unchanged from 100,604 in 1977. Larceny-thefts account for more than 60 per cent of all serious crimes. Property lost in larceny-thefts was valued at more than $17,137,800 last year, a 10 per cent increase from the $15.6 million in 1977.

Reported burglaries totalled 43,377 during 1978, a decrease from 44,748 in 1977. Dollar losses dropped five per cent in 1978 to $14,733,900 compared to $15,528,000 in 1977. Thefts have declined since 1975 when 14,922 vehicles were stolen. However, the value of vehicle thefts topped $23.4 million in 1978, up 14 per cent from 1977. While auto thefts dropped eight per cent last year, thefts of trucks and buses climbed 14 per cent.

Police recovered 49 per cent of the stolen vehicles in 1978, down from the 56 per cent recovery rate in 1977. In both years, about 70 per cent of the stolen vehicles were recovered in the same jurisdiction where they were stolen.

Quantity Beef Buying Lowers Food Expenses

Faced with today's higher prices, many shoppers are turning to quantity food purchases which can mean a real saving.

When buying beef for the freezer, it pays to consider all the alternatives, advises Reid Mason, manager of the Minnesota beef council.

"Basically, there are three ways to buy beef for the home freezer," Mason explained. "These include stocking up on advertised beef specials, buying wholesale or primal cuts, or buying an entire side or carcass. Each has its own advantages."

To help consumers decide which way is best for them, the Minnesota beef council has available a pamphlet called "Getting the Most from Freezer Beef Buys." It contains information on determining actual price per pound, cutting up a whole carcass or primal cut, wrapping, freezing and defrosting beef.

Here are just a few tips:

—Always make beef the last purchase before returning home from the food store and place the beef in your freezer or refrigerator promptly.

—Buy what your family enjoys and can use in the recommended storage time (6-12 months for fresh beef cuts, 3-4 months for ground beef and less for cooked or processed beef).

—When buying beef by the side, quarter or whole carcass, always deal with a reputable supplier who will explain all costs. If in doubt, consult the Better Business Bureau.

—When doing your own freezing, freeze no more than 10 per cent of your freezer's capacity at one time. When more beef is frozen, it takes longer and may cause deterioration of quality.

"Getting the Most from Freezer Beef Buys" contains dozens of other tips. To obtain a free copy, send a self-addressed, stamped business-size (long) envelope to: Freezer Beef Buys, Minnesota Beef Council, 2950 Metro Drive, Suite 111, Minneapolis, MN 55420.

Council Tells How To Stretch Beef Dollar

Price of beef in the United States is up. Following a period of relatively stable supplies of inexpensive beef from 1975 through the first part of 1978, consumers find themselves facing the prospect of considerably higher retail beef prices this year and for some time to come. Minnesota beef council has several helpful tips for consumers looking for ways to stretch their food dollar.

According to Reid Mason, manager of the Minnesota beef council, "The beef industry, like any business, operates according to the law of supply and demand. But unlike most other businesses, the beef industry cannot always produce exactly the right amount of beef to meet the demand for roasts, steaks, and hamburger. Even at higher prices, beef is still one of consumers best food buys, considering the quality protein, available iron, B-vitamins, and other nutrients in beef." Mason states there are four ways consumers can help themselves in buying beef: 1) Plan before shopping, 2) Be familiar with the various cuts of beef, 3) Think cost per serving, and, 4) Use proper methods in handling and cooking meat.

Scan the daily newspapers for stores having beef specials. This is important to all shoppers who want to get the most for their food dollar as well as those on tight budgets. Recognize stores which sell larger and subprimal cuts that shoppers can take home and slice into smaller portions. A good investment consumers can make for beef savings are a sharp knife and a few minutes of their time. Generally speaking, the cost of a beef cut is directly related to the amount of handling by the butcher.

Knowing a variety of beef cuts is also helpful in identifying good buys. A steer is not all steaks and ground beef. The shopper wanting the most out of the food dollar should look for beef cuts from the chuck, round, shank and short plate. The best cut the consumer can afford — in terms of quality and yield of meat — is generally the best buy.

The smarter shopper considers cost per serving rather than cost per pound. Some boneless cuts priced slightly more are better buys because they have little waste. Look for large inexpensive cuts that can be broken down into several meals. A good example is a large (about 6 pounds) chuck roast that is economically priced, supplies three fine meals (total of 10-12 portions) plus a bone for soup.

The fourth idea the Minnesota beef council suggests is to insure freshness and quality when buying. Bring your purchases home promptly and place them in the meat compartment or the coldest part of your refrigerator. Fresh beef prepackaged for self-service may be stored in the refrigerator in the original wrapping for two days. Cooking beef at low temperatures is the secret to both successful and moneysaving meat cookery. Avoid high temperatures and overcooking that shrink a roast and rob it's natural juices. Every cut of beef can be made tender and delicious when properly prepared. Less tender cuts should be braised or simmered in liquid.

Adults Learn About Science At Minn. Zoo

by Ronaele Sayre
'U' M News Service

More than 100,000 school children have visited the new Minnesota Zoological Garden in Apple Valley this school year. But the class that teacher Penny Chally brought to the zoo recently would stand out in any group of gradeschoolers.

Chally's class — 38 adult women — visited the zoo as part of a day-long look at the practical applications of science, sponsored by continuing education for women at the University of Minnesota.

Purpose of the program, Chally explained, was to expose people unfamiliar with science to the inner workings of a zoological garden, and to show them the variety of jobs available there for people with science backgrounds.

Group toured the greenhouse and breeding facilities, the health building and the solar facility, and heard presentations on veterinary medicine at the zoo and the breeding of endangered species.

Carole Martino of Minneapolis, one of the students, said the day was a great success. "I have been thinking about going back to school, and I found this interesting," she said. "I'm going to use this information when I bring my children to the zoo."

Chally's class got in-depth view of work at the zoo — a behind the scenes look not shown to the average zoo visitor. Kent Kane, zoo veterinarian, described to the class the various procedures used to ensure the continued health of the animals.

All of the animals on the Northern Trek, for instance, are taken in at night to protect them from vandals and natural predators, and to monitor closely their physical condition. "If an animal looks sick or injured, we keep him in the next day just to check," Kane said.

Environment at the zoo is important both the the animals that live there and the peopple who visit. Plants, trees and flowers are under the supervision of zoo horticulturist Steve Wachter.

Wachter must see to it that there are plants, trees and flowers ready to replace those no longer suitable for display and those that prove incompatible with the animals in a particular environment. There are 400 plant species in the tropic exhibit alone: "We had 15 different varieties of plants in the gibbon island, and only one survived," Wachter said.

The zoo has animals native to particular parts of the world, and Wachter sees to it there are plants native to each of those environments. Both plants and soil must be monitored to make sure everything stays in balance.

Ralph Waterhouse, zoo curator, told the class that the zoo displays are planned to show animals in as natural a setting as possible and to allow the animals to function as they would in the wild. He described the extensive planning necessary to set up the weasel display in the Minnesota wildlife exhibit.

"There are three different varieties of weasels, and every weasel we have was observed to determine its habits and food preferences," Waterhouse said. "Weasels have a high metabolic rate, and after about an hour of activity, a weasel will curl up and sleep."

Since a sleeping weasel is not the ideal zoo display, zookeepers acquired a number of weasels, and began to hid food among the foliage to encourage more scurrying about. As each weasel gets tired and decides to sleep, he is roused and attracted out of the display by food, and replaced by another hungry and active weasel.

The students also toured the solar plant and exhibit. Solar energy is used to heat the zoo building public restrooms, kitchens and animal service areas, and solar heat will be used to heat the monorail station.

Continuing education for women is planning another such "Day at the Zoo" for July, and Kathryn Doyne of St. Paul hopes many other people will take advantage of the offering. "These people shared with us their dreams," Coyne said.

Average Farmer Spends More As Income Rises

Average farmer-member of the southwestern Minnesota farm management association spent $202,576 in his or her community during 1978, according to association records analyzed by University of Minnesota farm management specialists.

Delane Welsch, the extension economist who prepared the association annual report, adds that the spending figure was an increase of 30 per cent ($46,000) from 1977. Farmers with membership in the Southeastern Minnesota farm management association spent $149,843 on the average. This was a 14 per cent ($18,000) increase over the year before.

Data from the 183 southwestern association farms showed that about $61,000 was spent on the farming inputs of fertilizer, chemicals, seed, feed, repair and ruel. Another $22,500 was used to purchase machinery and equipment. More than $50,000 was paid to other farmers for livestock and custom work, while members spent about $2,000 for support of local government through property taxes.

In the southeastern association, the average farmer-member spent approximately $51,000 on the farming inputs and $19,000 on machinery. Other farmers were paid about $11,000, and support of local government cost about $2,900. These averages are based on records from 74 farms.

In the southwestern association, returns to the farmer's labor and management were nearly double the 1977 figure. The increase from $29,307 to $58,196 is an all-time dollar high. In terms of purchasing power, the real dollars are worth less than the $53,488 earned in 1973.

Return on labor and management increased nearly 75 per cent for the southeastern members. Increase was from $23,274 in 1977 to $40,055 in 1978. All-time dollar high was $40,531 in 1973.

Return on investment was still only three-four per cent when figured on today's land prices, agricultural economist Paul Hasbargen points out. He estimates that Minnesota farmland increased in value by about 15 per cent during 1978.

Counties included in the southwest group are Pipestone, Murray, Redwood, Cottonwood, Watonwan, Rock, Nobles, Jackson, Martin and Fairbault. The southeastern association members reside in the counties of Nicollet, Scott, Dakota, LeSuer, Rice, Goodhue, Waseca, Steele, Dodge, Olmsted, Winona, Freeborn and Mower. No claim is made on whether or not these farmer-members are representative of their regions or the state as a whole.

SPECIAL HONORS were accorded to L. B. Hartz of Thief River Falls with a number of area agencies who deal with senior citizens participating in the recognition. A dinner was held at Lon's restaurant Wednesday evening at which Hartz received a plaque and verbal tribute in appreciation of his support of senior citizen projects. Morris Owen (left) presented the plaque to Mr. and Mrs. Hartz at the banquet. Senior citizen coordinators from economic development region one had voted to hold the recognition night at their May meeting in observance of national older Americans month.

CERTIFICATE of appreciation was presented to L. B. Hartz of Thief River Falls by Mrs. Erma St. George on behalf of the Minnesota board of aging at a recognition dinner held for Hartz Wednesday evening. The award was made in recognition of his service to senior citizen programs throughout the region.

NW Dairy Princess Has Active Promotional Year

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

"Holy cow!" exclaimed petite Mary Jane Hanson last June 13 in Thief River Falls when the crown of Northwest Dairy Princess was placed on her head. For a dairy farm girl who intends to marry a minister, no remark she could have blurted out would have been more appropriate.

Mary Jane recalled the comment during a recent interview at the Hanson farm southwest of Trail. "I don't remember saying it, but I suppose I did. At least a couple of the girls standing by me told me that's what I said."

Next Tuesday Mary Jane will crown her successor as Northwest Dairy Princess at the Region One Minnesota ADA princess contest held during the 30th annual Northwest Dairy day here. The 1979 princess will advance to the Minnesota state fair where she will compete for the title of Princess Kay of the Milky Way and assist with the promotion of Minnesota dairy products.

"There have been quite a few activities during the year and it has all been fun," Mary Jane said. "My family makes a good part of its living from milking cows and we all know the importance of dairy product sales. If I have been able to help improve the image of dairy products as good tasting and healthful foods, then my year as dairy princess has been doubly rewarding."

The regional princess comes from a family of 10 children, the sons and daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Hanson. Her three older sisters are all married. Mrs. Ken (Miriam) Buchanan lives in British Columbia, Mrs. Bob (Jeannie) Hill and her husband are missionaries in Munich, Germany; and Mrs. Donald (Elaine) Swenson resides in the state of Washington. An older brother, Kenneth, 23, farms with his father.

Younger brothers and sisters include Mark 17; Gordon, 15; Linda, 13; Laura, 12; and Emily, 7. They all get involved in farm and household chores on the family farm. A betting person would give good odds that one or more of the younger Hanson sisters will find their way into the dairy princess competition in the future. Their older sister Miriam was an attendant to the regional princess a few years ago.

A 1978 graduate of Fosston high school, Mary Jane enrolled part-time at Hibbing community college last fall. In addition to her college courses she has been employed by the Internal Revnue service, working at the Hibbing and Duluth offices. Starting Monday she went to work for the IRS full-time for the summer and this fall she will transfer to the Twin Cities office area. She also plans to attend Northwestern college with areas of study interest including drama, counseling and social work.

A year from now she plans to marry Joe Walsh of Hibbing, who will attend North Central Bible college this fall with the intent to become a minister with the independent Assemblies of God church.

Office education association (OEA) activities at Fosston high school were Mary Jane's area of emphasis in high school. She won first place awards at state OEA speaking contests as a junior and senior and placed third and fourth nationally in competition in Detroit, Mich., and Houston, Tex.

She served as OEA region one president and regional representative on the state board of directors. In 1977-78 she was selected as Minnesota office education association member of the year. Also during her school years she was active in chamber choir and concert choir and participated in drama events.

Participating in the Future Homemakers of America chapter activities she won trophies for child development projects on regional and state levels. She also placed first in state vocational industrial clubs of America (VICA) speech competition.

A member of the independent Assemblies of God congregation at Fosston, she was active in the youth group, Missionettes group and the adult choir. She also worked at the Fosston municipal nursing home for a year and a half as a nursing assistant.

On the farm she helped with house cleaning and meal preparation, calf feeding, milker and bulk tank cleaning and did a lot of tractor and truck driving during haying time and harvest. The Hanson dairy herd is on DHIA test and the milk is sold to Associated Milk Producers, Inc., at Bagley with pickup every other day.

DAILY PRODUCTION of a good diary cow would fill the milk cartons prettily exhibited by 1978 Northwest Dairy Princess Mary Jane Hanson of Trail. A part-time Hibbing community college student who is also employed by the Internal Revenue service, Mary Jane has made a number of appearances during the past year in promotion of milk and other dairy products.

County Board Asked To Resurface Road

Bituminous surfacing of county state aid road 10 (Ridge road) was among the topics of discussion at the June 5 meeting of the Pennington county board. Numedal town board and a group of area residents were present to ask the board to plan surfacing of the road from Carpenter's Corner to the southwest county line, a distance in excess of 13 miles.

County engineer Arvid Olson informed the board and audience that the car count on the road in question was only 55 - 66 per day and that in order for it to be eligible for the use of state aid funds the county must be at least 100.

After discussion the board instructed the engineer to study the problem and check various stabilization methods that might be used on the road. The Numedal delegation was also assured that the board would re-evaluate its list of priorities in the five-year plan and attempt to include the resurfacing of CSAH 10.

Board members were also informed by the eingineer that some difficulties had arisen in the work at the south St. Hilaire bridge for which replacement is planned. Survey work had previously been done on the west bank and metal stakes were placed for markers. The stakes have been removed, apparently in an effort to protest or delay the bridge replacement, and the area will now have to be re-surveyed, adding to the project cost.

Joyce Fox from the community health services was in attendance at Tuesday's meeting to present the health services budget for the 1980 fiscal year. The board gave tentative approval to the budget which would include $35,296 in funding for the Inter-County Nursing service and $14,308 for emergency services. The budget will now be presented to the state for approval and funding.

In other business Tuesday, bids were opened for the year's supply of culverts for the county. Lowest of six bidders was Northern Culvert company of Shakopee with a $15,213.40 bid compared to the high bid of $19,607.72 and Northern Culvert Co. was awarded the bid.

Representing the fair board at the county board meeting were Vernon Lee and Dan Helle who requested an increase in the county's annual appropriation for county fair activities. After discussion the board voted to raise the county's contribution to the fiar board from $9,500 to $10,000.

Appraisals for tax forfeited lands were approved and county auditor Charles Rodekuhr was instructed to proceed with the sale of the lands which lie in Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire. Sale of the lands was set for 10 a.m. June 29.

Bill Nelson from Computer Election Services was in attendance at the meeting to ask the board if it would be interested in putting the punched card ballot system into effect throughout the county. Estimated cost was $12,000 to $15,000. The county board indicated that it was not interested but would contact the individual townships to see if

Gores Pleads Guilty Today To Assault Charge

Accused of firing a shotgun blast which injured state patrolman Harold Blazek of Thief River Falls last December 30, Anthony Junior Gores of Euclid entered a plea of guilty to a charge of aggravated assault with great bodily harm in Pennington county district court this morning.

A pre-sentence investigation was ordered by Judge Robert A. Peterson of Crookston who presided at the court session. Gores also entered a plea of guilty to possession of a short-barreled shotgun — a violation of federal law. In exchange for the guilty pleas, a charge of attempted first degree murder was dropped, according to David Olin, Pennington county attorney.

Pending report of the pre-sentence investigation by Curt Geatz of the state probation and parole office, Gores was released on the same $30,000 bond which had been posted following his arrest. Penalty for aggravated assault with great bodily harm is a minimum of one year and one day in prison and a maximum of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Patrolman Blazek had stopped a pickup truck shortly before midnight on December 30 of last year when the vehicle displayed no taillights. As he approached the vehicle he saw a shotgun poked out of the window. He jumped back as the gun was fired, the main charge striking him in the right hand and pellets hitting the right side of his face.

A left-handed shooter, Blazek fired two shots from his revolver as the pickup left the scene. Gores, now 32, was arrested the following evening in East Grand Forks. A pickup truck with two bullet holes in the back was found at his farm. The shotgun, sawed off at both barrel and stock, was found along County Road 8 about a mile from the area of the shooting.

Patrolman Blazek lost three fingers on his right hand from the charge of pellets and reportedly has suffered hearing difficulty.

RRV Historical Society Given Grant For Plan

Upper Great Lakes regional commission composed of the governors of the states of Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan recently awarded a technical assistance grant of $50,000 to the Red River Valley historical society to complete the design development phase of architectural planning for the proposed Moorhead heritage interpretive center.

This grant was the largest technical assistance grant awarded at the quarterly meeting of the commission.

Completion of this phase of architectural planning will provide firm cost projections for construction and operation of the proposed center as well as providing a "script" for the designers of the interior exhibits.

Architectural planning for the center will be administered by the Moorhead heritage interpretive center task force recently appointed by the Moorhead city council.

The Red River Valley historical society will conduct the research effort to produce a comprehensive history of the Red River Valley which will serve as the "script" for the designers of the interior exhibits.

Design development phase of architectural planning is expected to be completed by the end of 1979.

Retirement Not Mandatory Until Age 70

Mandatory retirement of most Minnesota workers before they reach age 70 is now prohibited by state law amendments effective April 24, 1979. With limited exceptions, the law applies to all public and private employers, according to Harry D. Peterson, commissioner of labor and industry, whose department is responsible for administration.

Continuation of employment beyond the usual 65 retirement age is dependent on a worker's ability to meet bona fide requirements of his job, Peterson pointed out. Notice requirements of the law call for an employer to inform worker in writing three months before he reaches his 65th birthday that he may elect to continue at work if he so chooses. If the employer can demonstrate that the worker can no longer meet job demands, he must give 30 days notice of intention to terminate the employee.

The law is now applicable to employers of more than 20 employees and is to be effective June 1, 1980 for employers with fewer than that number of workers. Where collective bargaining agreements are in force, the new law provisions will not apply until the termination of current union contracts or Jan. 1, 1980, whichever comes first.

Police and fire department personnel are not covered by the new prohibitions and mandatory retirement at 65 continues. Also not covered are high level management personnel entitled to annual retirement pay of more than $27,000, Peterson reported.

The department is now considering regulations to implement the new law and preparing a poster for employer use in informing workers of their rights. Peterson urged that persons having questions on the law contact the deapartment and said that agency personnel will seek to conciliate differences between employers and their employees on mandatory retirement issues.

VW Brakes May Be Defective On Four Models

Suspected brake defect on more than 400,000 late model Volkswagon cars is under investigation by the U.S. department of transportation.

Under scrutiny are 1975-1976 Rabbits and Sciroccos and 1974-1976 Audi Foxes and VW Dashers. The cars may show diminished braking performance possibly due to faulty seals in the brake master cylinders, the government agency said.

About 30 owner complaints have been received on the problem, including two reported accidents and one injury, the agency announced. If you experience this braking problem, call the toll-free auto safety hotline, 800-424-9393.

Dairy Princess Helps Promote Dairy Products

princess Mary Jane rode in parades at Fertile, Thief River Falls, Newfolden, Crookston, St. Hilaire and Fosston and made an appearance at the Miss Thief River Falls pageant. She participated in the Princess Kay contest at the state fair and spent two days at the Red River Valley winter shows distributing awards and dispensing cheese samples in a dairy booth. She also made appearances at the East Polk county fair at Fosston and West Polk county fair at Fertile.

The entire Hanson family is involved with church activities and Christian crusades and they attempt to apply Christian principles to their daily living. The application is a realistic one with emphasis on action rather than words.

"It's possible to be so heavenly minded that you're no earthly good," Reuben Hanson quipped.

The quip doesn't apply to his own family. They are hard working, happy and caring people — just the right kind of family to be representing the state's dairy industry.

Bacteria Used To Rid Coal Of Sulfer

by Mark E. Canney
'U' M News Service

Scientists at the University of Minnesota have enlisted one of nature's more efficient cleaning agents to rid coal of inorganic sulfur.

Since supplies of oil are uncertain, coal is being touted as a major source of energy for the future. Theoretically, there is enough coal in the U.S. to satisfy the energy needs of the entire country for the next 100 years.

Use of coal, however, does have serious environmental consequences. Inorganic and organic sulfur contained in coal produce airborne pollution upon combustion. Sulfur can irritate the eyes, throat and lungs, and has been implicated in bronchitis, emphysema, and asthma.

Inorganic sulfur is found at high levels in coal from the eastern United States, while organic sulfur is predominant in coal from the western states.

When sulfur-containing coal is burned, sulfur dioxide is released and transformed in the atmosphere into ammonium sulfate and sulfuric acid. Ammonium sulfate causes lung damage in humans, and sulfuric acid is a component of acid rain, which has already caused extensive damage to lakes and waterways.

Michael R. Hoffmann, professor of civil and mineral engineering at the University of Minnesota, and his colleague, microbiologist Henry M Tsuchiya, have been experimenting with bacteria that "eat" the sulfur contained in coal mined in eastern coal states.

Bacteria — single-celled plant-like organisms — have been attributed with causing major disease epidemics. But bacteria also are known for their ability to break down various substances to fulfill their own nutritional requirements. The bacteria Hoffmann and Tsuchiya have been studying are not disease-causing, and may prove to be an efficient tool for cleaning coal.

The bacteria under study — thiobacillus ferroxidans and thiobacillus thiooxidans — are found in acidic streams flowing through abandoned coal mines in the eastern United States. These bacteria use inorganic sulfur, in the form of iron pyrite, as part of their diet.

Process currently in use by the coal industry removes some of the inorganic sulfur from coal. Called the slurry method, the process separates sulfur from coal through the addition of water to pulverized coal. Sulfur, which is more dense, will sink, while the less dense coal will float. Once the two have been separated, the coal can be removed from the solution with the sulfur left behind.

Tsuchiya and Hoffman's bacteria method begins with the same mixture of crushed coal and water but goes a step further. Bacteria are introduced into the mixture to further oxidize the sulfur and eventually ingest it. Tiny organisms send out an extracellular enzyme that acts as a catalyst for the oxidation of the sulfur.

After the sulfur has been ingested, the bacteria can either be removed from the cleansed coal or left to feed on additional nutrients supplied them until the next batch of dirty coal is introduced. Left without nutrients, the microorganisms eventually become cannibalistic and kill each other off, Hoffmann said.

"Slurry method removes approximately 60 per cent of the sulfur, while the bacteria are capable of removing up to 98 per cent of the sulfur," Hoffman said.

Slurry method, while not as thorough in its cleaning abilities as the bacteria method, is still the faster method, Hoffmann said. Slurry method takes only a few hours, while the bacteria can take several days to remove the sulfur.

According to Hoffmann, "culture shock" is the prime reason for the sluggishness of the bacteria. On introduction to the water and coal solution, the bacteria go into a slump. They won't eat and seem to enter a period of dormancy.

Hoffmann attributes the bacteria's dormant period to shock from being taken from one environment and put into another. Researchers are now looking for a way to help the bacteria overcome this culture shock.

"Young persons are supposed to be better able to adjust to new environments. We're looking for the bacterial age that is analogous to that resilient age in young people," Hoffmann said.

Once the bacteria best able to adjust to the change are found — and Hoffmann is confident that they will — he and Tsuchiya are certain that the bacteria method will prove to be much more effective than the slurry method.

Hoffmann and Tsuchiya's research has so far dealt primarily with inorganic sulfur, but they are beginning to study similar bacterial removal of organic sulfur found in coal originating in the western United States.

North Central April Earnings Record High

North Central Airlines earned $2,821,000, or $.22 per share, in April — three times the $889,000, or $.07 per share, for the same month in 1978, reported Bernard Sweet, president and chief executive officer.

Thief River Falls regional airport reported an April total of 1,164 passengers boarding and 1,149 passengers boarding in May.

April revenues climbed 54 per cent to $32,844,000 from $21,261,000 last year. Operating expenses of $28,708,000 were 45 per cent ahead of the $19,731,000 the previous April. Operating profit jumped 170 per cent to $4,136,000 from $1,530,000. Net earnings of $2,821,000 soared 217 per cent.

"Additional DC-9-50 aircraft, increased traffic on our new nonstop, long-haul routes, and the strike against United Air Lines were major factors in the company's dramatic earnings increase over April 1978," Sweet said.

Revenues for the first four months gained 38 per cent to $114,311,000 from $82,681,000 in 1978. Operating expenses increased 36 per cent to $106,858,000 from $78,344,000. Operating profit through April was up 72 per cent to $7,453,000 from $4,337,000 for the same period last year. Net earnings were up 91 per cent to $3,159,000 from $1,650,000 in 1978.

Heart Attack Victims Needed For Research

"Can heart attacks be prevented by lowering cholesterol?" is the question asked by a team of University of Minnesota researchers conducting a study of the relationship between heart disease and cholesterol.

Most heart trouble results from atherosclerosis or hardening of the arteries. A clue to the cause of atherosclerosis may be that cholesterol, a fatty substance, is found in diseased arteries; it is, however, still uncertain whether lowering cholesterol can actually prevent heart attacks.

University is seeking persons aged 25-65 who have had only one heart attack in the past five years. Anyone interested in more information may call the University of Minnesota Hyperlipidemia study collect at 612-376-4494.

Water Planning Board To Hold Meeting Here

Tom Kalitowski, chairman of the Minnesota water planning board, will preside when the board holds a public meeting in Thief River Falls at the city auditorium (basement) at 1:30 p.m. on Wednesday, May 23, to receive citizen comment on a draft version of the state water plan.

Water planning board, established by the legislature in 1977 to direct the preparation of a framework water and related land resources plan for Minnesota, has scheduled 14 such meetings throughout the state during the month of May.

"The primary issue the draft plan attempts to address", Kalitowski explained, "is how the state can best manage and utilize its water resources to assure the availability of an adequate supply of quality water to meet the competing beneficial needs of present and future generations".

The draft document contains over 85 recommendations developed by the water planning board staff in the following 12 major issue areas: water resources management, water quality, water-based recreation, water information and data, flood damage reduction, wetland management, water conservation, related land use, water supply and allocation, water research and education, water resources coordination, and federal-state relations.

After receiving public review and comment, the water planning board will meet in June to adopt recommendations for submission to the Governor and the Legislature.

"Governor Quie has pronounced 1979 as 'The Year of Water Awareness in Minnesota' " Kalitowski said. He stated, "We believe the state water planning effort and these public meetings offer citizens of the state a tremendous opportunity, not only to become aware of water issues and problems, but to participate in a process aimed at solving the problems".

Persons interested in receiving a summary of the draft water plan should contact either the regional development commission in their area or the Minnesota Water Planning Board at 600 American Center Building, 150 E. Kellogg Boulevard, St. Paul, MN 55101. (612) 296-1424.

MN. Cash Farm Income Helped By Exports

New federal estimates indicate that nearly one-third of Minnesota's gross cash farm income now comes from overseas export sales, agriculture commissioner Mark W. Seetin reported recently.

Minnesota's share of national export sales value for fiscal 1978, ended September 30, has been estimated by the United States department of agriculture at $1,484.8-million. This is a new all-time high and boosted Minnesota to the fifth-leading state in farm export sales, behind Illinois, Iowa, Texas and California.

Cash receipts from Minnesota farm commodity marketings during fiscal 1978 were estimated at $4,649.6 million. Minnesota cash farm receipts for calendar 1978 have been estimated at a record $4,894.3 million.

In fiscal 1977, Minnesota's share of national agricultural export sales value had been estimated at $903.7-million, the lowest since 1973 and 11th ranked among all states.

Commissioner Seetin said these figures continue to emphasize the importance of agriculture's contribution to off-setting our tremendously increasing costs for energy. Through these exports agriculture has done its part and will continue to increase these exports in the future.

He added that while the U.S. department of agriculture emphasizes that the respective state export shares do not reflect actual export transactions, the annual prorating of production and commodity sales is the best available measure of the importance of overseas markets to the domestic agricultural economy.

According to the detailed federal analysis of individual commodity export shares Minnesota continued to be the leading state in dairy product exports, primarily non-fat dry milk, valued at $31.7 million. That value was almost 22 per cent of the national dairy product exports total.

Sunflower seed exports estimated at $66.1 million, accounted for over 29 per cent of the national total for that commodity, but Minnesota ranked second behind leading producer North Dakota.

Soybeans and soybean product exports provided the biggest dollar share of Minnesota's fiscal 1978 farm exports, $487 million. Although that was less than eight per cent of U.S. soybean exports value, it was 33 per cent of Minnesota's total exports share, and fifth highest among all states.

Close behind at an estimated $474.1-million was the value of Minnesota's exports of feed grains and feed grain products — corn, oats, barley, grain sorghum. That also was fifth highest nationally. Wheat and wheat products exports provided an estimated $197.2 million.

Other Minnesota agricultural export sales value shares estimated for fiscal 1978 include: meats and meat products $33.2 million; hides and skins $46.9-million; lard and tallow $18.8-million; poultry products $9.2-million; vegetable products $17.1 million; fruit products $400,000; and miscellaneous food and fiber products not listed under the respective commodity groupings, $103.1 million.

Commissioner Seetin said that since the U.S. department of agriculture began estimated state share of agricultural export sales in fiscal 1970, Minnesota's economy has benefitted by an aggregate of over $7.1 billion through last September, the close of fiscal 1978.

Last year's export sales value was 5.4 times the $274.5 million estimated for Minnesota in fiscal 1970, when only about one-eighth of this state's gross farm income came from overseas export sales.

MBA's Robbery Reward Program Is Paying Off

Minnesota Bankers association (MBA) officials said recently that their bank robbery reward program is continuing to pay off.

Executive vice president Truman Jeffers said the association paid a reward May 30 for information which led to an arrest and indictment in the December 1978 robbery of the First Minnehaha National Bank, Minneapolis. He said this is the fourth reward paid since the program began last February.

"Prior to the reward program, a bank robbery occurred every 2.5 days," Jeffers said. "That figure has dropped to every 7.5 days since we announced the reward program, and we will continue to offer rewards in an effort to eliminate bank robberies in the future."

Jeffers said anyone with information which could lead to an arrest and indictment in a bank crime is encouraged to call the Minneapolis office of the FBI at (612) 339-7861.

Cash Receipts Show Improved Ag Economy

Estimated Minnesota cash receipts for the first two months of 1978 totaled $791.2 million and indicate continuing improvement for the state's agricultural economy, commissioner Mark W. Seetin reported recently.

January-February total is higher by $122.1 million or over 18 per cent ahead of the same two months last year.

Receipts from the marketings of livestock and livestock products — meat, milk, eggs and wool — totaled $480.1 million, accounting for an increase of $97.5 million over a year earlier.

Crops marketing receipts accounted for $311.2 million of the current year's two-month total. That was an increase of $24.7 million over a year earlier.

Commissioner Seetin said that although Minnesota's rates of increased cash receipts were slightly lower than national increases, Minnesota gross farm income for the period was surprisingly good, considering adverse winter weather and transportation shortages.

'Market prices on virtually all Minnesota farm commodities also were significantly lower in January and February. Prices that have since improved for farm commodities, some to the highest levels farmers have seen in two to five years, suggest that monthly reports will continue to show increases in gross farm income at least for the first half of 1979, if not for the year.

"Farmers need higher commodity prices to cushion the exploding increases in production costs, which the latest federal estimates indicate are at least 12 per cent higher than last year and still going up. Both government and private economists are forecasting little if any improvement in net farm income, the bottom line that really counts most," commissioner Seetin emphasized.

Berry Guide Lists Farms To Pick Your Own

Free directories of "pick your own" strawberry and raspberry farms are now available for the 1979 berry season from the agricultural extension service of the University of Minnesota and from the Minnesota department of agriculture.

This year's cooperative Minnesota directories of commercial growers who welcome berry pickers lists 52 strawberry farms and 31 raspberry farms.

Strawberry picking is expected to start by late June in most areas of Minnesota. The raspberry crop should be ready for the first harvest by early to mid-July.

Co-sponsors of the "pick your own" berry directories recommend that Minnesotans conserve gasoline and avoid disappointment by contacting the berry farms in advance of making the family trip to be sure that the berries are ready and there will be room in the patch for one more family.

Copies of either or both directories may be obtained by writing to either: Agricultural Extension Service, Bulletin Room, 3 Coffey Hall, St. Paul MN 55108, or to Marketing Services Division, Minnesota Department of Agriculture, 540 State Office Building, St. Paul MN 55155.

Participation In Set-Aside Program Grows

Ninety-three per cent of the normal cropland acres in Pennington county is owned and operated by the 768 farmers who indicated an intention to participate in the 1979 set-aside program of the county agricultural stabilization and conservation committee this year.

Phillip Bergland, county executive director of the ASCS office, said the farmers own and operate 210,587 acres of normal cropland. Last year the ASCS office only had 589 farms with 79 per cent of the county cropland involved in the set-aside program.

All producers have received photo copies of aerial photos of the land they operate. After planting is completed, farmers are asked to draw in their fields and approximate acreages on the photos and bring them to the office when they file for final certification.

"It only takes a few minutes to complete this task at home," Bergland said, "and much less time in our office when that work has been completed. During busy office hours it will mean that producers will have less time to wait to have their applications processed."

Final date for certification is Friday, June 29. Producers may have their questions answered by Kathy Fimrite or Kathy Nelson in the county ASCS office.

Disciplinary Board Investigates Judges

What happens when a judge is not, in fact, "sober as a judge." Or, when the scales of justice are tipped not by the law, but by a judge's mental or physical disability, incompetence, habitual intemperance or continual failure to perform his or her duties?

The board on judicial standards created in 1971 by the legislature, serves as a disciplinary body for the Minnesota judiciary. The board recently prepared a report showing that in 1978 there were 71 complaints received against judges, and with carry-overs from 1977, a total of 89 reached a board disposition.

When a question of a judge's ethics or fitness to serve on the bench arises, the board gets involved. It investigates complaints and can admonish a judge or hold hearings and make recommendations for action to the Minnesota supreme court that a judge be removed or retired from office. Last year, two such recommendations were made to the high court.

Any person can make a complaint to the board. The report showed that of the 1978 grievances, the mast majority — 58 — were from litigants, although others were from attorneys, fellow judges and the public. The complaints ranged from a judge's slowness in issuing decisions, to conflict of interest, prejudice, and disability for service. Thirty-two complaints were against county court judges, 18 against district judges, nine against municipal judges, one against a Supreme Court justice, and the remainder against judicial officers or referees.

The board is composed of nine persons — three judges, two attorneys, four public members. When a complaint is received by the board, it is first studied to determine merit. For example, unless fraud or corruption is involved, the board can't act on a complaint about the legal correctness of a judge's decision. That would have to follow the normal process of appeal. Thirty-four of the 1978 determinations fell in this category.

When a complaint is well-founded the board may undertake an investigation. Complaints are confidential, unless the step of a formal hearing is necessary. Before any such hearing, however, other actions can be taken by the board. Last year, 32 judges were asked by the board to explain the conduct that was the subject of the complaint.

Some of the cases require more detailed inquiries — 29 last year, of which five developed into full-scale investigations. In those cases, the allegations involved courtroom demeanor in two cases, alcohol problems, conflict of interest and mental disability in others. The investigations are conducted by the board's executive secretary.

To protect the confidentiality of the complainant, sometimes special steps are taken. For example, when attorneys complain that a judge has been inexcusably slow in issuing a decision, the board asks the judge for a list of all outstanding cases. If the judge is not up-to-date without justification, his paycheck can be withheld. When this occurred in one case last, the judge brought all his cases up-to-date within a week.

Most cases are resolved informally. The board can issue a private reprimand or an admonition — nine were issued last year. The board could also direct professional counselling for a judge or impose conditions on a judge's conduct.

In cases of serious infractions, the board, upon a finding of probable cause, is empowered to issue a statement of formal charges against a judge. Within 30 days, a hearing is held where evidence is taken and the judge is permitted to present a defense. It was after just such hearings last year concerning judicial misconduct of two judges that recommendations were made to the supreme court that they be relieved of their duties.

The board's authority is broad. In addition to reviewing complaints, it can initiate its own investigation or investigate matters referred by the supreme court. Grounds for discipline against a judge are conviction of a felony, willful misconduct in office, willfull misconduct bringing the office into disrepute, conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice or unbecoming to a judge, or violations of the code of judicial conduct, which requires judges to avoid impropriety, perform impartially and other guidelines.

Authority for the creation of the Board was set by the Minnesota Constitution, Article VI, which permits the legislature to establish a disciplinary body, and Minnesota Statutes, 490.16 et. deq. The number of complaints in 1978 compares with other years as follows: 1972 — 4; 1973 — 35; 1974 — 54; 1975 — 51; 1976 — 53; 1977 — 73.

Persons wishing to register complaints about judges or judicial officers can contact the Board on Judicial Standards, Room 202, Minnesota State Bank Building, 200 South Robert Street, St. Paul, Minnesota, 55107.

Current members of the Board are: Chairman, George King, attorney; David Coleman, public member; Ruby Hunt, public member; Honorable Robert F. Johnson, municipal court judge; Honorable Gordon McRae, district court judge; John W. Padden, attorney; Honorable Sewell Sawyer, county court judge; Harvey Stegemoeller, public member; and Juanita Young, public member. George Kurvers is the executive secretary.

Okay To Sell Wheat And Oats In Farm Bins

Pennington county producers of wheat or oats stored in the three-year reserve program are reminded that the national average market price has now triggered the release level on the reserve agreements. Producers now have the option of being released from the agreement upon payment of the loan and accumulated interest.

Option period will remain open through June 29, at which time another review of national prices will be made, according to Phillip Bergland, county ASCS executive director.

If prices of wheat and oats continue to be higher than the release level, storage payments will stop as of July 1. If prices have fallen below the release levels ($3.29 for wheat and $1.29 for oats), storage will continue without interruption.

"If you are going to be short on storage space for the 1979 crop, it might be to your advantage to empty some bins during this release period." Bergland advised the producers. Lucille Haugen is in charge of the loan program in the county ASCS office.

County Given Increase In ACP Allocation

Moderate increase in funds available for agricultural conservation programs (ACP) has been received by Pennington county ASCS, according to Phillip Bergland, executive director.

Funds can be used to pay up to 75 per cent of the cost of correcting particular conservation problems on Pennington county farms.

Practices approved by the county committee include farmstead and field shelterbelts, forest tree plantings, erosion and water control structures, grassed waterways, animal waste control facilities, water impoundments for livestock and wildlife and the establishment of permanent vegetative cover in areas subject to wind or water erosion.

"If you wish to use any of these practices over a three to 10-year period," Bergland advised county farmers, "we can guarantee funding with a long-term agreement. Check with Ruth Hanson in our office for details."

Legislative Report

Marv Hanson

District 1 State Senator

The 1979 meeting of the Minnesota State Legislature concluded with a short one day special session. A special session was needed because the appropriations for the Minnesota department of transportation got caught up with the political leadership fight in the state House of Representatives.

The state Senate refused to become involved and time ran out on the regular session. The three major items left unfinished were passed in the special session, and the following is a legislative wrap-up of measures passed by the 1979 Legislature.

Income Tax

Individual income taxes were reduced by a total of $472 million dollars for the upcoming biennium of the state.

The most significant change is indexing. Several income tax factors will now be indexed reducing inflation's increase of taxes paid by taxpayers. All income tax brackets will be indexed starting with this year's 1979 taxes at 85 per cent of the increase in the consumer price index. Personal credits reducing income taxes will increase with that index after 1980. And the standard deduction will also increase according to that index.

The personal credit will be increased at $55 per taxpayer and dependent in 1979 and $60 in 1980 and as stated above, indexed thereafter. The standard deduction was raised from $1,000 to $2,000 and then will be indexed as mentioned.

Another change excludes the gain on the sale of a home by a taxpayer age 55 and older as federal law now permits.

These adjustments in our Minnesota income tax structure should take a lot of inflation's bite out of the pocketbooks of Minnesota taxpayers.

Property Tax Cuts

Property tax relief set for the next biennium will be approximately $177 million dollars, and the changes made will help hold down real estate taxes.

The homestead credit will increase to 50 per cent of the tax with a maximum credit of $500 next year, and 55 per cent and $550 the year after. Classification ratios were adjusted and the agricultural mill rate credit on ag homestead property was increased from 15 to 17 mills. The ag homestead classification was also expanded from 150 acres to 240 acres and a substantial increase in the funding for property tax refunds was provided as well.

New property tax relief to counties with large acreages of public owned land was begun with the enactment of a "payments-in-lieu-of taxes" program. This package provides $4.7 million dollars in tax relief to most of our northern counties in Minnesota.

Local cities and counties in northwest Minnesota will receive $43.9 million dollars in local government aids. These funds will help meet increased costs and help keep real estate taxes down.

Inheritance And Gift Tax Reforms

A substantial reworking of Minnesota's inheritance and gift tax laws were enacted this session, of which I was pleased to be a co-author.

First, the gift tax was repealed effective for gifts after Dec. 31, 1979. This change will greatly help planning for the transfer of your estate on to your children and grandchildren.

Secondly, the inheritance tax was changed to an estate tax modeled after the federal estate tax. The effective date is Jan. 1, 1980 and provides for a base $200,000 exemption. In addition to that exemption, a spouse will receive a marital deduction of 50 per cent of the estate or $250,000, whichever is greater. This means an estate of $450,000 inherited by a spouse would pay no tax whatsoever.

An important provision of this new legislation was the adoption of an alternative valuation of family farms. This alternative is to base farm valuation on rental value which more closely indicates the farm's real value for farming rather than on comparative sales prices as done now, which can be greatly inflated.

These changes will enable our farms and small businesses to be kept in the family and will help the economic base of our rural communities.

School Aids

Appropriations for aids to Minnesota schools will amount to $1.97 billion dollars for the upcoming biennium, a 15.8 per cent increase over current funding.

The basic foundation aids will increase from the current $1,095 per pupil unit to $1,182 for the 1979-80 school year and $1,265 for the 1981 school year.

Transportation aids will go up to $181.7 million dollars for the coming biennium. The funding will be based on a new formula which focuses on the number of full time equivalent students transported, the size of district in square miles, and the per cent of the students transported. Hopefully, this new transportation funding will provide our northern Minnesota schools with additional help for the escalating costs of school transportation.

A one-half mill discretionary levy was authorized for the use of the 1980-81 school year and thereafter increases to a one-mill discretionary levy. This discretionary levy is equalized so that each school district is guaranteed $27.50 per pupil unit the first year and $64.50 per pupil unit in the second year. Should the one mill in any one school district raise less than that amount, the state will make up the balance.

Many of our schools continue to have declining enrollments and the averaging for this was increased to four years. This will provide $25 million in new dollars to alleviate the impact of enrollment declines.

For many of our schools in northern Minnesota $1.8 million dollars was allocated for sparsity aid. This aid goes to our smaller school districts that have large areas to serve.

For the 1980-81 school year, school districts will begin to levy for the declining enrollment and the sparsity aid. The state will pay the same portion of this levy as the state pays the foundation formula allowance. This means, however, that if a local school district has a high valuation, which many of them do in northern Minnesota, then they will be paying an even greater share of the support for their school locally than before.

Declining enrollment and sparsity aid funds will be state dollars for 1979-80, and I felt that it would be appropriate to continue to have those dollars funded from the state rather than have them shifted on to the local tax base. And that is why I opposed this change and felt the State Senate had the better position.

In another education legislative act, a school district pairing bill was passed. This provides that school boards of two or more districts may agree to discontinue any grades or portions of grades in one district and provide instruction in a neighboring district. Schools discontinuing any grades must still maintain at least three grades. This legislation may help many of the small districts establish cooperative programs where student enrollment has dropped severely.

As a whole, funding for our schools in the upcoming biennium will be stronger than before and should enable our schools to continue to maintain the quality programs of education that we have had in Minnesota.

This summarizes the major legislative measures passed in the past session. Should you have any question on these or other matters, you can contact me this summer during the interim at my home in Hallock. The address is Rural Route 1, Hallock, Minnesota 56728, and the phone number is 843-5274. I'll be visiting in most of the communities in the district this summer and will be happy to visit with you.

Farm Supply Co-Op Buys A Pipeline Share

CENEX farm supply cooperative has made an equity investment in Northern Tier Pipeline, thus becoming the first owner of Northern Tier Pipeline who will also be a shipper-receiver of crude oil from the pipeline.

The proposed 1,500-mile pipeline would extend from Port Angeles, Wash., to Clearbrook.

In making the announcement, CENEX President J.G. (Jerry) Tvedt said: "Current petroleum shortages in the United States should be an indication to our elected and appointed representatives that time is running short in finding real answers to America's energy needs. Farmers require a regular, uninterrupted flow of energy to produce food and fiber abundantly.

"As Canada phases out its oil exports to protect its energy future, and as historical suppliers continue to leave rural markets that CENEX serves, we have to find additional sources of crude oil to serve agriculture," Tvedt said.

"Northern Tier Pipeline will provide CENEX and other northern tier refiners with a reliable delivery system for domestically-owned oil from Alaska."

In January of this year CENEX shareholders attending the cooperative's annual meeting voted overwhelming support for construction of Northern Tier. This week's action by the 13-member board of directors received unanimous support.

Tvedt said Northern Tier will supply CENEX's wholly-owned refinery at Laurel, Mont., which has a daily capacity of 40,000 barrels per day. Presently the Laurel refinery depends on Canadian crude for up to one-half of its daily throughput. CENEX also shares ownership in cooperative refineries at McPherson, Kan. and East Chicago, Ind., which have combined daily capacities of almost 200,000 barrels per day.

Tvedt called on President Carter, federal officials and state agencies to act swiftly and positively on approving plans for the pipeline's construction. "Every day that action is delayed is costing farmers and America's consumers millions of dollars," Tvedt said. "We urge President Carter, as well as federal and state government officials, to give plans for the Northern Tier Pipeline a green light. A west-to-east route for Alaksan curde oil will go a long way toward solving present energy problems in the northern tier states.

CENEX is a leading regional farm supply cooperative serving 1,500 local co-ops throughout 13 states with refined fuels, chemicals and fertilizer, and a wide range of farm and home products.

Summer Work Programs Open Through ICCC

This year, Inter-County Community Council, Incorporated, Oklee, will be operating two summer youth employment programs in the Region I area (counties of Kittson, Roseu, Marshall, Norman, Polk, Pennington and Red Lake). There are still a few job openings under the CETA program in the Thief River Falls area.

The two programs are the CETA program (SYEP), and the Governor's youth program (GYP). Even though the two programs are run consecutively, the guidelines are quite different for each.

SYEP is a federally funded program to serve low income youths ages 14-21. The income guidelines that are used to determine whether or not a youth is low income consists of a graduated scale based on the family's income for the past twelve months and how many people are currently living at home.

Governor's youth program (GYP), is a state funded program under which one-half of the participants are low income, (using the same income guidelines as the CETA program), and the other one-half need not be low income. The Governor's youth program, therefore, is not solely for "high" income youths.

Both programs will begin June 18 and run for eight weeks. Participants will work 32 or 40 hours per week and receive $2.90 per hour. All worksites must be public sector, or non-profit organizations.

Applications may be picked up at the Job Service office, the CETA office, or by contacting Mary Lou Harthun at Inter-County community council, Oklee by calling 796-5144.

Each example represents architecture of enduring beauty, strength and usefulness.

Also a block of four 15-cent commemorative stamps featuring endangered floral will be issued in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, on June 7 during the national convention of the Garden Clubs of America.

Each stamp portrays a different plant species likely to become extinct in the forseeable future. The plants depicted represent more than 1,700 seriously threatened plant species in the United States. The stamps feature the persistent trillium of northern Georgia and South Carolina, the Hawaiian wild broadbean of Hawaii, and the Contra Costa wallflower and the Antioch Dunes evening primrose, both of California.

Anyone wishing first day cancellations should purchase their own stamps at the local post office. The stamp is to be affixed in the upper right corner of an envelope approximately one quarter of an inch from both the top and the side. Return addresses are to be placed on the right side at least five-eighths of an inch from the bottom. A filler should be inserted.

Requests for the American architecture stamp should be mailed no later than June 19 to First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, Kansas City, MO 64108.

Requests for first day cancellations on the endangered flora stamp should be sent no later than June 22 to First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, Milwaukee, WI 53201.

No remittance is required for either stamp.

Join In Burglary Prevention Month

On the national average a home is burglarized every 10 seconds, and many of these burglaries occur during the summer months when families are away or traveling.

This is one of the reasons for burglary prevention month this June as a way for local law enforcement agencies to dramatize the high burglary rate in the summer.

During the month of June 1979, declared to be burglary prevention month by the International Association of Police Chiefs, the local police department will launch a special campaign to provide citizens with anti-burglary information.

Chief Ken Froschheiser asked all citizens' cooperation to help reduce the surge in burglaries which result each summer, when families leave their homes for vacation trips and weekend outings. "By learning and practicing a few simple home protection hints, residents can help prevent their homes from falling victim to a burglary," he said.

"Knowing some fundamental techniques of home protection will help reduce the 100 burglaries committed in our city last year. Although most people didn't intentionally invite intruders to ransack their homes, many might as well have hung up a sign saying, "No one's home, burglars welcome," the chief stated.

A stroll around your neighborhood any day will tell you at a glance who's away; their porches will be cluttered with circulars and there will be an accumulation of milk bottles on the stoop, an unkept lawn, an empty garage with the door open or a bulging mailbox. All of these are tipoffs that'll broadcast "no one's home" to anyone canvassing the neighborhood.

In the evening, most empty homes can be spotted too — just look for the dark houses. It's a known fact, light is one of the best deterrents to crime, yet most homeowners go out for an evening and leave their homes completely dark. Or, they'll go off for a weekend or vacation and leave the same light burning day and night. No light at all, or a light burning continuously, is a good giveaway that no one is home.

A simple but effective means of having light in your home every evening is by connecting an automatic timing device to one or two lamps. Such a timer will turn a lamp "on" early in the evening, then turn it "off" several hours later. With lights turning on and off during the evening hours, it will give the appearance someone is home and may avert a possible burglary attempt.

Chief Froschheiser went on to say that most burglars pick the easiest targets they can find. They want to get in, get the loot and get away as quickly as possible. Therefore, if you put several obstacles in his way, he is less likely to try to break into your home, but will seek "easy pickings" elsewhere. By observing these few simple precautionary steps, you can reduce the possibility of a burglar selecting your dwelling as his target next time you're away.

(1) Close and lock all doors, including porch, basement and garage. Use pin-tumbler cylinder locks on outside entrances and safety latches on the windows.

(2) Connect a lamp to an automatic timer to turn lights in the home on and off each evening. Since sound is a deterrent, connect radio or TV to a timer.

(3) Protect all doors and windows with an inexpensive, portable burglary alarm which sounds whenver someone attempts to break in.

(4) Light up your porch and yard with outdoor lights to increase the likelihood that an attempted burglary would be seen. These lights can also be timer-controlled, if desired.

(5) Be sure all screens are fastened from the inside.

(6) Never leave valuables lying around; keep them in a safety deposit box.

(7) Notify your police department when you'll be leaving and how long you expect to be away.

(8) Cancel all deliveries, such as the milk, laundry, cleaning, etc. Also, be sure to discontinue the newspaper or arrange to have it sent to your vacation home.

(9) Have a neighbor, or your post office, hold all mail until your return.

(10) Arrange with a friend to mow the lawn and sweep your sidewalk once a week. Also ask him if he'll pick up any circulars or handbills that may be left on your porch.

(11) Leave your shades and blinds as you normally do; closed blinds keep the sun out, but also make an effective screen for the burglar.

(12) Never advertise your departure in the local paper. Give the item about your travel to the newspapers right after you've returned.

"There is no such thing as a burglar proof home," the chief said, "but following the suggestions listed above will help to protect your home whenever you're away."

FARMYARD CHORES are most often divided among the children in a farm family. For Mary Jane Hanson of rural Trail, 1978 Northwest Dairy Princess, mowing the lawn has been one of those chores. Now that she is away from home at college and work, the task falls to younger children in the family.

OUTDOOR LIVING is one of the enjoyable parts of the Minnesota summer season. Northwest Dairy Princess Mary Jane Hanson of Trail suggests that outdoor meals include plenty of cold and healthful milk. Other dairy products also have a definite place on the picnic table with either light or hearty lunches or meals.

Polk County Ties For Top Sugarbeet Crop

Polk and Norman were Minnesota's top counties contributing to the state's record 1978 production of sugarbeets, agriculture commissioner Mark W. Seetin reported recently.

Harvest of 1,566,000 tons of sugarbeets last year made Polk the production champion. That was 31.5 per cent of the state total of over 4.97 million tons, and was just 2,000 tons short of the state total for 1972.

Norman earned the 1978 average yield crown by harvesting 21 tons of sugarbeets per acre. Faribault county holds the all-time average yield on the 23.3 tons per acre harvested in 1977, the record yield year statewide.

Minnesota's ten leading counties in sugarbeets harvested in 1978 are in respective order:

Production: Polk, Clay, Norman, Renville, Wilkin, Marshall, Chippewa, Kittson, Traverse and Grant.

Average yield: Norman, Polk, Renville, Kandiyohi, Clay, Redwood, Chippewa, Wilkin and Marshall tied, Faribault and Kittson tied.

Roseau County Flaxseed Crop State's Highest

Roseau county repeated as Minnesota flax production champion in 1978 with 574,800 bushels or 26 per cent of the state total of over 2.2-million bushels, reports the State-Federal crop and livestock reporting service of the Minnesota department of agriculture.

Three counties, Lincoln, Marshall, and Swift, tied for the highest average flaxseed yield last year, 16.5 bushels per acre.

Minnesota's 1978 flaxseed production, at an estimated average farm market value of $6.10 per bushel, was valued at over $13.4 million.

Flax is valued for its premium quality straw as well as for its oilseed. The straw is processed into linen and high quality papers, including cigarette paper. The oil product is used primarily by the paint and chemical industry and the pulpy residue is sold back to livestock farmers for beef cattle feeding.

The 1978 Minnesota leading counties in flaxseed are:

Production — Roseau, Lincoln, Pipestone, Marshall, Pennington, Kittson, Polk, Clay, Douglas, Traverse, Big Stone, Grant, LacQui Parle, Otter Tail, and Lyon.

Average yield — Lincoln, Marshall and Swift tied, Roseau, Big Stone, Chippewa, Lac Qui Parle, Stevens, Yellow Medicine, Lyon and Murray tied, Kittson, Wilkin and Pipestone tied.

Grain Shipment Volume Valued At $214 Million

Bulk grain and oilseed shipments from Minnesota's major terminal markets during the first four months of 1979 totaled nearly 81.4 million bushels with a farm value of over $214 million, agriculture commissioner Mark W. Seetin reported recently.

Wheat exports accounted for 47 per cent of the volume and $108.7 million in value.

Volume of Minnesota's shipments for the January-April period was down only a fraction of one per cent compared to last year's 81.7 million bushels.

"This is remarkable in view of the continuing transportation crisis, made more acute during most of the first four months by severe winter weather conditions, the rail car shortage, and the fact that our two major inland waterways opened about two weeks later than last year," commissioner Seetin noted.

Estimated grain shipments include only those from the metropolitan, Duluth Port, and Mississippi River terminal grain elevators, as reported by the Minneapolis Grain Exchange, Duluth Port Authroity, and the grain inspection division of the Minnesota department of agriculture. No estimates are available on Grain and oilseed shipments from rural Minnesota direct to seacoast terminals for export or to other states for domestic processing.

Rail shipments from Minnesota terminal elevators totaled 47.4 million bushels, down 6.4 per cent compared to January-April 1978.

Shipments by water transportation, combined for Duluth port and the Mississippi river, totaled almost 30.1 million bushels, a 2.7 per cent increase over last year. Duluth Port accounted for 16.7 million bushels, up 18.3 per cent, while river barge movement of grain and oilseeds totaled 13.4 million bushels, down almost 12 per cent compared to last year.

Duluth Port also showed a significant increase in total shipments, 36.7 million bushels, 16.8 per cent above last year, while the metro area exports, 44.7 million bushels, were down by 11.2 per cent from January-April 1978.

Bill To Reduce Gov't. Use Of Fuel Aired

Co-sponsoring of the "Federal Automobile Mileage Act of 1979," which is intended to require federal agencies to reduce vehicle use by 10 per cent over the next four years, has been announced by Congressman Arlan Stangeland.

"Congress, in 1975, mandated improved automobile mileage standards to reduce the amount of gasoline consumed by the government and the general public, but the government, even with improved mileage, has not made a concerted effort to drive less and live up to these standards," said Stangeland. In 1977, the total number of miles driven by the federal automobile fleet increased 5.1 per cent, and the amount of fuel consumed increased eight per cent to over 300 million gallons.

Under the provisions of this act, federal agencies would be required, beginning in 1980, to reduce driving by six per cent, or approximately 15 miles per week per vehicle below their 1978 mileage. In fiscal year 1981, an additional reduction of two per cent would be required followed by one per cent cuts in 1982 and 1983. The bill also directs the President to promote the use of gasohol in federally owned or operated vehicles. Stangeland estimates that this could further reduce the amount of gasoline consumed by as much as 10 per cent.

"I think the federal government should be leading the way by setting a good example of fuel conservation. We can't expect the American people to increase the number of car-pools, use mass transit, and cut gas consumption if we continue to display bad examples by wasting gasoline," he concluded.

UMC Receives Allocation For 79-81 Budget

Rural Minnesota fared extremely well this year in the legislative sessions, according to Sen. Roger Moe (DFL-Ada) and Rep. Tony Stadum (IR-Ada). University of Minnesota-Crookston (UMC) was one of the recipients of the good fate.

Legislative request presented by Provost Stanley D. Sahlstrom on behalf of UMC for a $100,000 increase in the operating budget for the 1979-81 biennium was granted. Included in the request were two new positions, a director of institutional research and development and a student personnel worker in the financial aids office, as well as funding for additional supplies, purchases and equipment.

Although odd years in the legislature traditionally deal with operating and maintenance costs, this year's legislature also granted $3.4 million for the new UMC athletic complex.

Bids for the $3.4 million athletic complex will be let this fall with construction to begin around November 1, according to Bill Menzhuber, director of plant services.

The facility will be located on the east side of Knutson hall. The new gymnasium will seat approximately 3,500 people. Other areas in the facility will be offices for coaches, two handball courts, wrestling room, men's and women's locker rooms, space for weight training and a sauna, dressing areas for officials and a concession stand.

The existing swimming pool and gym in Knutson hall will remain an integral part of the physical education complex, with primary emphasis placed on intramural and physical education classes.

A new football field will be constructed south of the Skyberg parking lot. This area will also include an all-weather track, a soccer and practice field, baseball and women's softball diamonds. The field located east of Skyberg hall will be made into tennis courts, outdoor basketball courts and playing areas for intramural softball, flag football and volleyball.

Anticipated completion date for the outdoor complex is fall of 1980 and for the building the fall of 1981, according to Menzhuber.

The legislative session also approved $35,000 in planning money for remodeling of the agricultural research center auditorium and existing buildings plus a classroom addition.

Use Child Car Restraints To Protect Young

Commissioner John Sopsic of the Minnesota Department of Public Safety has urged Minnesota parents to mark child auto safety month by "purchasing and using faithfully" auto restraint devices for children under four years old.

Proclamation issued by Governor Albert Quie designated June as the Month for Minnesotans to use "parental Vigilance" and "protective measures" to prevent children's accidents which result in injury and death.

"Motorists who permit small children to ride unrestrained in an automobile are inviting tragedy," Sopsic said. "Children under four years old often are the helpless victims in traffic crashes because they are permitted to ride on someone's lap, in the back area of a station wagon or in the front seat of a car without a restraint."

The commissioner pointed out that, in a sudden stop or collision, an unrestrained child is thrown with great force into the windshield, dashboard or out of the car. Children on laps can be crushed by the adults who are holding them.

"The very best way to safely secure a child in a car is with a crash-tested infant or child restraint device," Sopsic said. "These seats are designed specificaly for the child under 40 points."

While standard safety belts are better than no protection at all for the very young child, they do not offer adequate protection for the small undeveloped body, he said.

He urged Minnesota parents to "make a small monetary investment" to protect their children's lives.

Agassiz Health Agency Holds Annual Meeting

Corporate annual meeting of the Agassiz health systems agency was held Thursday, May 24, 1979, at the Westward Ho, Grand Forks, North Dakota. Council members from Agassiz's 22-county region attended a regular meeting of the board of directors at which by-law changes concerning committee structure were approved.

Agassiz HSA will now function with three major standing committees: Plan development, plan implementation and project review. Membership on those committees is open to board and council members, with a board majority.

Eric Monson, executive director, presented a slide show, "Investing Your Community's health care dollars" which will be used as part of county public meetings scheduled to begin this summer. Mary Ellen Preston, public information coordinator, discussed the county meeting format and presented the summer schedule: Bemidji, June 18; Devils Lake, June 25; Crookston, July 9; Grafton, July 16; Grand Forks, July 23; and Thief River Falls, July 30.

It is expected that these meetings, and subsequent ones to be held during the fall and winter months, will familiarize more citizens with the health planning process and will gather information about citizen health care needs and concerns.

Following luncheon and opportunity for informal discussion, the official council session and election of new board members were held. Roger Paavola, nominating committee chairperson, presented the formal ballot and received additional written nominations from the floor. The results of the election are below.

The board and council then heard Jan Malcolm of Interstudy discuss cost containment and alternative health care delivery systems.

Involvement of new council members in the corporate meeting as well as on ad hoc and special study committees has increased the scope of Agassiz community contact and aided health planning efforts. Applications for Agassiz HSA council membership continue to be received at regularly scheduled board meetings, and openings remain in most counties.

For additional information on council membership, committee participation and health planning involvement, contact the agency office, 124 DeMers Avenue, East Grand Forks, Minnesota, (218) 773-2471.

Elected to the board from Region I were: Marshall county consumer, Leon Pribula; Red Lake county consumer, Jean Hanson; nursing home administrator-Provider, Mike Siekas; pharmacist provider, Gerald Lindsay; health care insurer provider, Marlys Jackson; and indirect provider, Lynda Gilbertson.

Farm Prices Decline From Previous Month

Index of prices received by Minnesota farmers declined slightly during the month ended May 15, according to the Minnesota crop and livestock reporting service. Lower prices for most meat animals, dairy products, poultry and eggs offset higher crop prices. Wheat prices rose nine per cent, the sharpest increase since September of 1977.

This was offset by the first decline in beef cattle prices since November of 1978 and the continued decline on hog prices. Compared to a year ago, prices were up for all items surveyed except corn, hay and hogs. Largest increases occurred for beef cattle, calves, milk cows and sheep. Replacement milk cow prices rose two per cent during the month to an average of $1,010, breaking the thousand-dollar level for the first time.

Crops index increased two per cent to 219 during the month, three per cent above last year's index. The mid-May prices and the changes from last month are: All wheat — $3.23 per bushel, up 26 cents from the revised April estimate; corn — $2.18, up 12 cents; oats — $1.27, up 4 cents; barley $2.20, up 16 cents; soybeans — 16.72, down 14 cents; flaxseed — $7.01, up one cent; potatoes averaged $3.00 per hundredweight for all grades, up 25 cents. All hay was $42 per ton, up $1.50.

Meat animal index at 272 was down slightly from last month but was 15 per cent above a year ago. All hogs at $43.90 per hundredweight were down 40 cents from a month earlier. Beef cattle averaged $64.50, down 50 cents. Calves were up $4.10 to $95.40. Sheep brought $26, down $2.20, while lambs were up $1.60 to $71.30.

Dairy index decreased one per cent during the month to 234 but was 14 per cent above the index last year. The preliminary milk price at $10.90 per hundredweight was down 10 cents from the revised April price.

Poultry and egg index at 210 was down five per cent from last month but was 22 per cent above a year ago. Turkeys were 40 cents per pound liveweight, down three cents from a month earlier. Eggs brought 49 cents per dozen for all grades in mid-May, down three cents from mid-April but 11 cents above a year earlier.

Applicants Are Few In Nursing Market

by Paul Schurke
University News

Statewide job market for professional nurses these days is great and promises to become even better. That's good news for registered nurses, but it is an ominous sign for health care consumers, say University of Minnesota nursing educators.

Hospitals and county health services throughout Minnesota are reporting seasonally high numbers of vacancies. The shortages have not yet seriously crippled health care delivery, but they are posing growing challenges for recruitment officers.

"This is the first year we've had to advertise heavily in the newspapers," said Barbara Tebbitt, nursing services director for University hospitals, where there are about 90 part and full-time nursing vacancies.

Due to high employee turnover rates during the spring months, some hospitals regularly have many vacancies at this time of year. They are usually filled later by June graduates. But, Tebbitt said, vacancies this year are occurring earlier and in greater numbers than usual.

Spot checks with other metropolitan area hospitals confirmed her observation. For most, the university included, it has meant intensified recruitment efforts. For one Rochester hospital, St. Mary's, shortages have resulted in the temporary closing of 130 beds.

"They've put a bounty on nurses," quipped Mitzi Duxbury, assistant dean of graduate studies in nursing at the university. St. Mary's employees who refer a nurse to the hospital get a $100 bonus.

The situation here is not unique. In fact, administrators say Minnesota is on the tail end of a nursing crunch that is sweeping the nation. Although all areas have been affected, the hardest hit are states in the east and south, where nursing shortages have prompted numerous bed closings.

Shortages in this state are particularly critical because Minnesota, with its numerous nursing schools, has traditionally been considered a supplier state, Duxbury said.

As in other states, shortages here have resulted from both decreases in supply and increases in demand for nurses. Supplies are down, nursing educators say, because many nurses — faced with uncompetitive salaries and expanding career options — are no longer practicing.

This worries administrators, but it is the increasing demand — coupled with cutbacks in nursing education — that is of greater concern. The need stems from the rise of health care practices that require many nurses. Examples are health maintenance organizations, home-based care, and the medical services being developed for an increasingly older population.

"The health care system has changed a lot, and health care professionals need to look at the changes," said Ruth Lunde, director of the Minnesota nursing association. "We need more nurses for new alternative types of care."

Favorable employment conditions exist for lower level practical nurses and nurses' aides, but the real need is for registered nurses (RNs).

As a cost-saving measure, some hospitals are going to all-RN staffing, said Irene Ramey, dean of the university's nursing school. "It is cheaper to hire better prepared nurses than practical nurses and aides because they don't need on-the-job training and they don't need as much supervision," she said.

Better preparation often includes four years of college training. In fact, Lunde said, "the future of the professional is at the baccalaureate level."

A recent federal study that charts future nursing needs in Minnesota supports her contention. At projected graduation rates, the supply of nurses with bachelor's degrees will in four years fall about 4,000 short of the state's minimal needs (12,000), it indicates.

Increasing numbers of nurses are responding to this growing need by seeking extended college training. But they are finding that nursing schools — beset with budget and faculty cutbacks — are not always able to accommodate them, Ramey said.

Faced with an enrollment squeeze, nursing faculty are incensed with President Carter's pocket veto last fall of an extension for the 1975 Nurse Training act (NTA). Carter's action on the act, which contains crucial faculty development monies for many nursing schools, is being challenged by Congress.

If the veto holds, Ramey fears it will jeopardize the recent expansion of the university's master's degree program in nursing. Schedule changes last fall allowed the school to nearly double its graduate school enrollment to 210 students. Without the expanded program, Ramey believes there will be a very critical shortage of nurses with master's degrees, who are needed in administrative, supervisory and faculty positions.

"Nursing schools around the state have been on my back since I came here. They are saying we have got to have more nurses with master's degrees," Ramey said. "We haven't been graduating enough to even begin to fill the need."

Ramey cited need projections for master's nurses in the federal study. The study, which charts needs for 1982, indicates that projected graduations will continue to be well below half of the state's minimal needs.

But one doesn't have to look to 1982 for the impact. Thirty unfilled faculty positions currently exist in the state's six southeastern nursing schools alone.

"One nursing school in Minnesota has already lost its accreditation because of faculty shortages, and two others are in jeopardy," Duxbury said. Furthermore, she said, more than half of the state's nursing faculty are not adequately prepared. "Ideally, we would like our faculty to have doctorates, as they do in other departments. But the employment situation does not allow this."

Nursing administrators believe the solution is to secure more funding through aggressive lobbying. Ramey said that nurses throughout the state are sensing this need. She pointed to the barrage of phone calls from nurses that accompanied the university board of regents' consideration and later acceptance of the nursing school's bold $800,000 biennial request. The proposal is now before the state legislature, which is also being besieged with phone calls, she said.

Lunde, who heads the state nurses are becoming more politically astute and active. There has been a significant increase in their involvement at the legislature and it is making a difference."

CRAIG MOLSTAD, 1979 graduate of Lincoln high school, has been awarded a $600 presidential scholarship by Moorhead state university. Established by the Moorhead state faculty, foundation and alumni association, presidential scholarships are reserved for students demonstrating academic ability and talent and are awarded to incoming freshmen. Craig is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Molstad of Thief River Falls. He was active in football, wrestling and speech at school, and is also involved in radio, orchestra and photography. The $600 is equivalent to nearly a full year's tuition at the state university.

Issue Special Need Permits For Pesticides

Five special local need registration permits for the use of specific pesticides to control pests in agricultural crops have been issued by the Minnesota department of agriculture subject to public view and objections.

These are in addition to eight previously authorized special local need registration permits. Such permits are issued when a use other than those stipulated on the label of the pesticide is considered necessary and environmentally acceptable.

Four of the five new permits are restricted to control of pest problems in sunflower seed production:

Hopkins Sevin Carbaryl Bait manufactured by Hopkins Agricultural Chemical Company, Madison, Wisc., to control cutworms and grasshoppers in sunflowers grown for seed;

Clean Crop Sevin 5 Bait, manufactured by Platte Chemical Co., Fremont, Neb., to control cutworms and grasshoppers on sunflowers grown for seed;

Agsco D.B. Green (EPA 554-109), manufactured by Gustafson Inc., Dallas, Tex., for treatment on sunflower seed to control seed and soil borne diseases including damping off, seed decay organisms and seedling blights.

Other special local need registration permit is for Colloidal Lindane 40 per cent (EPA 682-26), manufactured by Woods Industries Inc., Yakima, Wash., use as a seed treatment to be used in liquid or slurry treaters for various crop seeds to protect from damage by wireworms and seed corn maggots.

Public has until June 28, 1979 to file written comments by petition signed by 500 or more citizens of legal voting age and listing the address of each signer. Comments should be mailed to the Department of Agriculture, 420 State Office Building, St. Paul, Minnesota 55155.

Like most people, Whitey Olson and Jack Boyer probably aren't too enthused about becoming another year older. But those two veteran Lincoln high school coaches are more than likely eagerly looking forward to springtime 1980 when they'll both be directing outstanding Prowler teams.

Olson's Lincoln tennis team won a Region 8AA title this spring with just one senior in its line-up — Bill Michalek. Boyer's Lincoln golf team, also with just one senior on the team — Charlie Boyer — was a Region 8AA runner-up this season.

The way Thief River Falls dominated Region 8AA tennis in 1979 leaves little doubt who will be expected to be the front-runner in 1980 when the Prowlers return Bill Jury, Mitch Rustad, Bill Holmes, Tom Bjorkman, Mark Collins and Mark Lundin off this year's squad. Junior Chris Simons could step in for Michalek.

"Things look real good for us next year," acknowledged Olson who just completed his tenth year as Thief River Falls tennis coach.

With two members of his state tournament team returning, along with another varsity squad performer and a pair of fine sophomores, Detroit Lakes high school golf coach Chuck Merry is optimistic about 1980, but warns that Thief River Falls and St. Cloud Tech will be strong in Region 8AA.

Detroit Lakes beat Thief River Falls by six strokes in the 1979 Region 8AA meet, but the Prowlers' 1980 line-up will feature varsity returners Wade Hoppe, Bob Fitzgerald, Dave Geatz, Tony Loeffler and Tim Imgrund, with Jeff Imgrund and Mark Isaacson as potential varsity additions.

"It should make us tough next year," said Boyer when looking at his list of returning performers.

It's interesting to note that no less than eight of those before-mentioned athletes will be candidates for the 1979-80 Lincoln hockey team, generally regarded as the preseason favorite in Section 8. The hockey players include Jury, Bjorkman, Holmes and Simons off the tennis team and Hoppe, Fitzgerald, Loeffler and Geatz off the golf squad.

In addition, Lundin will be looking for playing time on a 1979-80 Lincoln basketball team that returns three starters off a Region 8AA Sub Region 4 championship team.

Youth Fast Pitch Softball Program

Officials of the Thief River Falls fast pitch softball league, with an eye on the future, have announced plans to organize a youth fast pitch softball program in Thief River Falls this summer, similar to those in operation in Grand Forks and Fargo.

"We're dying on the vine," said Bill Dormady, spokesman for the Thief River Falls fast pitch softball league. "We have to get some new blood into the league."

Although set with a seven-team line-up this summer, officials in the fast pitch league are concerned that the player supply may dwindle as some of the veteran fast pitch performers leave the game, a factor that is complicated by the ever-expanding slow pitch softball association in town that has increased its membership dramatically in recent years — to its current 32 teams.

Dormady hopes to have as many as six teams operating in the youth fast pitch softball program this summer under two age groupings: a 13-15-year-old division and a 16-18-year-old division. Games would be played on Monday and Thursday nights. Fast pitch officials hope to hook the younger ball players on the sport before they turn to slow pitch.

Organizational meeting for the youth fast pitch softball program will be held Monday at 7 p.m. at the Thief River Falls fairgrounds fast pitch diamond.

Legion Baseball Season Opens Against Roseau

Opening game of the 1979 Thief River Falls American Legion Northwest League baseball season will be played Friday when Thief River Falls hosts Roseau in a 7 p.m. game on the new Northland community college diamond, located behind the school.

New Thief River Falls American Legion baseball coach Terry Sullivan, named this week to succeed Randy Dallmann in that position, has scheduled his first practice session tonight (Wednesday) at 7:30 p.m. at Northland. All players interested in participating in the American Legion baseball program this summer are asked to attend tonight's practice. Those planning to play baseball this summer but unable to practice tonight should call Sullivan at 681-1681.

Pizza Hut Is 19-0 Softball Winner Monday

Perennial power Pizza Hut opened its 1979 Thief River Falls women's slow pitch softball season in impressive fashion Monday with a 19-0 drubbing of Roseau Transport. Patty Langlie homered for the winners.

Red Lake Falls began the year with a doubleheader sweep, beating the St. Hilaire Saints 7-3 and taking a see-saw contest from the Farmer's Co-op Stingers 10-7. The Stingers rallied from a 6-1 deficit with a six-run sixth inning, but aided by a pair of double plays, Red Lake Falls came back for the win.

Kelly Storhaug hit a home run as Ekeren Drug defeated First Federal Savings & Loan Association 10-3.

Elsewhere, Hydra-Mac drilled Credit Bureau 27-3, the Ridge Runners handled Rusty Nail 21-3, the Schmidt Stealers downed Falls Clinic 11-4 and Great Northwest Agency, Inc. out-scored the Healthy Hustlers 17-6.

Retirement from work does not necessitate retirement from physical activity. This will be evident July 3, in Crookston when the first annual senior olympics will get underway at 8:30 a.m.

Events will include among other things horseshoes, checkers, 100-yard relay, miniature golf, walk-a-thons, billiards, lawn bowling and 25-yard dash.

Pre-registration is required by June 22.

Registration forms will be available at local senior citizens clubs, banks and in small communities at local grocery stores.

UMPIRE DENNIS BENDICKSON gave the "out" signal as Swenson Plumbing & Heating, Inc. base runner Terry Sullivan was forced out by Rusty Nail Raiders second baseman Gary Lavalley during Monday's Thief River Falls men's fast pitch softball association Division I game. Lavalley tried to turn a double play in the fourth inning of the Raiders' 16-0 victory, but was spilled by Sullivan's slide just as he released the ball.

Raiders Out-Score Hartz, Swenson 36-8 On Mon.

It was incorrectly reported that the Rusty Nail Raiders had swept a Fridy Division I doubleheader in Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softabll association play when in fact the Raiders did no better than a split after losing to the TRF Merchants 9-2.

However, there was no mistaking a Rusty Nail sweep Monday as the Raiders blanked previously unbeaten Division I leader Swenson Plumbing & Heating, Inc. 16-0 and then drilled Hartz 20-8 for a 6-1 first place record.

Meanwhile, the TRF Merchants, with their record corrected, beat Hobo Haus 11-6 behind Bob Dicken's 4-for-4 night at the plate that included a grand slam home run.

Arnold Realty remained the only winless team in Division I play by dropping both ends of a Monday twinbill, losing to the Wagon Wheel 12-2 and falling to Fufuseth-Nelson, Inc. 8-4.

Division II

Bridgeman's moved into the Division II lead Tuesday with a 12-10 victory over Hamms-Pizza Hut. The winners blew an 8-2 lead in falling behind 9-8 in the sixth but came back for the win and a 4-1 record. It was the second loss of the night for Hamms-Pizza Hut, beaten 5-0 by the St. Hilaire Bears who turned three double plays.

First Federal Savings & Loan Association was a double winner, out-scoring The Get-A-Way 14-12 and Dallmann Athletic, Inc. 15-14. Bill Poole and Arlan Overbye hit first game home runs for the winners.

The Get-A-Way bounced back to beat Popplers-Action Realty 8-3.

Division III

Arctic IWA pounded out 24 base hits in a 14-10 victory over McDonald's Monday for a 3-0 record and the Division III lead.

Mike Bregier pitched a two-hitter as Phase II handled Consumer's Co-op Association 8-1 and The Club edged Great Northwest Agency, Inc. 8-7.

Division IV

Tip & Ring remained unbeaten in Division IV play Tuesday with a 14-4 conquest of Kmart.

Wilson Brothers Co. decisioned Lon's Restaurant & Pub 11-7 and Jean Junction knocked off Smith & Holthusen 10-2 behind Phil Fore's inside-the-park home run and five RBI.

Harder, Langlie Pitch Elks To Twinbill Wins

Mark Harder pitched a no-hitter and Rick Langlie followed with a one-hitter Tuesday as the Thief River Falls Elks Babe Ruth baseball team opened its 1979 season with a pair of five-inning wins over Roseau.

Thief River Falls won the doubleheader opener 2-0 by getting the game's only base hit. Robbie Blankenfeld scored both runs. In the first inning he singled, stole second and third and scored on a wild pitch. In the third he walked, again stole second and third and scored on an infield ground-out.

Langlie had plenty of offensive support in the second game won by Thief River Falls 18-2. A 12-run first inning decided the issue quickly. Greg Harder was 2-for-2 at the plate in the winners' nine-hit attack.

The 13-15-year-old Elks, coached by Paul Williams and Bruce Williams, will host the East Grand Forks Blue Thursday at 2:30 p.m. at the Northland community college diamond.

Thief River Falls Merchants ball for 13-year-olds was scheduled to begin play today (Wednesday) with a doubleheader at Roseau.

Drury Pitching, Hitting Beats Radio Shack 7-0

Mike Drury pitched a two-hit shutout, striking out 12, and went 2-for-2 at the plate, driving in three runs, to lead Dallmann Athletic, Inc. to a 7-0 victory over Radio Shack Monday in Thief River Falls fast pitch softball.

Dallmann Athletic, Inc. began scoring in the top of the first inning when Steve Daley beat out a bunt and scored on Drury's double to center field. Drury advanced on a passed ball and scored on a run-down play.

It became a 6-0 in the third as Daley drilled a one-out single to left, Rex Rugland reached base on an error and Bruce Johnson was hit by a pitch. Drury then laced a two-run single to center. Johnson scored on a ground-out and Drury came home on Mark Drury's base hit.

Drury completed his strong performance by striking out the final five batters he faced.

Schmidts broke into the win column at the expense of Melvies, 10-0 in Monday's doubleheader opener.

Rick Kofstad's wildness gave Schmidts an early edge as he walked two, hit another and threw three wild pitches. A pitcher-to-catcher-to first double play took Melvies out of further first inning trouble.

But in the second inning, four walks, three wild pitches, a hit batsman, two Schmidts hits and two Melvies errors accounted for seven runs and an 8-0 game.

Schmidts scored twice with two out in the bottom of the fifth off relief pitcher Erv Melvie to shorten the game via the ten-run rule.

Radio Shack 10
Melvies 0

Melvies came up with a triple play, but for the second straight night suffered a 10-0, one-hit loss via the 10-run rule as Radio Shack claimed its first fast pitch softball victory Tuesday.

Radio Shack opened the scoring in the bottom of the first inning when Bob Lundbohm singled to left and scored on a double to center by Brian Peterson who was cut down trying to stretch the hit into a triple.

Melvies came up with its fielding gem in the bottom of the second as Tim Erickson walked, and Glen Kalsnes and Mark DuChamp loaded the bases on errors. Lundbohm then hit a sharp bouncer to Rick Kofstad at third. Kofstad fired home to Jim Myrah to force Erickson, Myrah's relay to first nipped Lundbohm and Darwin Nelson's quick return to Myrah found Kalsnes sliding into a waiting glove.

But the gates finally opened in the bottom of the fourth when Radio Shack scored three times on four two-out hits. Radio Shack plated two more runs in the fifth for a 6-0 bulge and finished the game in the sixth on four runs on four hits, again with two out.

Melvies avoided a no-hitter when Mike Peterson laced a one-out single to center in the top of the second inning.

State Ranks Second In U.S. Boat Numbers

According to a report just released by the U.S. Coast Guard, Minnesota is second only to California in the number of licensed pleasure boats.

The report showed Minnesota had 541,202 boats registered with the Department of Natural Resources in 1978. California had 548,800 licensed boats.

A total of 8,034,905 boats were registered in the U.S. during 1978.

Other states with large numbers of boats registered are Texas, Michigan, Florida and Wisconsin.

Minnesota continues to lead the nation in number of boats per capita with an average of one boat for every 7.4 persons.

Kim Elverum, DNR boat water safety coordinator, said that despite the large number of boats in Minnesota, the state has a low boating accident rate. He said Minnesota has nearly seven per cent of the nation's registered boats but records only two per cent of the boating accidents in the U.S. during an average year.

Fran Tarkenton passed for a NFL record 47,003 yards from 1961 through 1978 with the New York Giants and Minnesota Vikings.

Ramrodders Host To Black Powder Shoot

Bill Williams of Park Rapids won the high overall aggregate award among 31 shooters when the River Junction Ramrodders of Thief River Falls sponsored its annual black powder shoot Saturday and Sunday at the Pennington county sportsmen club range.

Dr. Stuart Johnson of Winnipeg, Man., Canada was aggregate winner in the shotgun and pistol matches with Jane Hoy of Grygla winning the award for high women's score and Tim Williams of Park Rapids the prize for high junior score.

Winners in Saturday events were David Peck, Bemidji, 25-yard pistol shoot; Bill Williams, Park Rapids, 50-yard pistol; Steve Sylvester, Grand Forks, rapid fire revolver; and Howard Hagen, Thief River Falls, 10-bird clay pigeon shotgun shoot.

Sunday rifle shooting event winners were Dr. Stuart Johnson, Winnipeg, 100-yard offhand; Leo Hoy, Grygla, 50-yard offhand; Dick Ganyo, Grand Forks, N.D., 50-yard freestyle; Alan Moe, Grafton, N.D., 25-yard freestyle; Don Ramberg, Mentor, 50-yard flintlock offhand; and Lloyd Cooley, Winnipeg, Man., 50-yard cartridge rifle offhand.

Fish, Wildlife Aid Received By Minnesota

Minnesota was eligible to receive $1,120,133 in federal funds for fisheries projects during fiscal year 1979 and $2,001,493 for wildlife projects, the Department of Natural Resources reported.

A otoal of $109.3 million was made available to the 50 states this fiscal year for fish and wildlife restoration projects. The funds are derived from excise taxes on sporting arms and ammunition, and on fishing equipment.

Distribution of the funds is based on a formula which takes into account the number of license buyers, the area of each state, and population.

States are required to expand their own dollars on the project and are then reimbursed for up to 75 per cent of the cost.

Issue Final Recommendations On Management Of Wildlife Refuges

Secretary of the Interior Cecil D. Andrus has approved final recommendations for the management of the national wildlife refuge system as prepared by assistant secretary Robert L. Herbst.

"The national wildlife refuge system is the largest, most comprehensive group of lands set aside for wildlife in the world," Andrus said. "It is worthy of our best and most professional stewardship. I am convinced that the steps we have asked to be taken and the policies we have outlined are in keeping with that kind of responsibility."

The recommendations cover a broad range of topics, including organization of the refuge system, planning for acquisition of new refuge lands and policies on management practices such as farming and animal control as well as activities such as sport hunting, fishing and trapping.

They set the guidelines and policies by which national wildlife refuges will be managed in the future. They respond to a report published last year by the national wildlife refuge study task force, a group of citizens and officials from private organizations, state wildlife agencies and the Interior Department. The task force studied the operation of the 34-million acre refuge system, which is administered by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

In preparing the recommendations, Herbst agreed with the task force's view that the refuge system needs to be expanded for both migratory birds and other wildlife including threatened and endangered species. He directed the Fish and Wildlife Service to prepare a 10-year plan for accomplishing these recommendations. He also directed that procedures should be established for identifying refuge lands that are no longer serving their intended purpose.

He added that alternatives to land ownership by the Fish and Wildlife Service, including easements, leases, and retention in private or state ownership, should be carefully studied, and suggested that the service should also improve the management of existing refuges as an alternative to additional land acquisition.

Herbst asked the service to complete state plans for its unique wildlife ecosystems program, under which unusual areas of natural habitat are acquired and preserved as refuges. He also supported increased public involvement in refuge planning, improved public education programs on refuges and designation of suitable refuge areas as wilderness.

Herbst supported the continuation of public hunting, fishing and trapping on refuges, "so long as they are consistent with the refuge system's objectives to preserve, protect and enhance fish and wildlife resources and their habitat." Herbst said that service policy "reflects and will continue to reflect the idea that refuges will not be managed primarily to produce game species but that sound, scientific wildlife management will produce populations normally able to sustain reasonable consumptive uses. . . service and departmental acceptance of the idea that public hunting, fishing, and trapping are legitimate recreational activities recognizes the considerable — and continuing — contribution of the American hunter and fisherman to the cause of wildlife protection and enhancement."

Herbst also found that grazing, timber harvesting and agricultural practices could be permitted on refuges only when they are employed for the benefit of and are not harmful to wildlife and wildlife habitat. He pointed out that these practices may, in some cases, have secondary economic purposes. "Without exception," he said, "any economic uses of the national wildlife refuge system must be demonstrably compatible with service objectives to preserve, protect and enhance wildlife habitat."

Herbst's final recommendations are based not only on the task force report but on public comments about the report and on recommendations made by Fish and Wildlife Service director Lynn A. Greenwalt following his own review of the task force report and public comments.

Herbst's report, "Final Recommendations on the Management of the National Wildlife Refugee System," is available free from the Publications Unit, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Department of the Interior, Washington, D.C. 20240 (202-343-2982).

Mini-Indy, Late Model Car Races Set For Fair

Minnesota State Fair and Amsoil, Inc. have announced a 1979 auto race schedule that will feature United States auto club Mini-Indy events, August 25-26, and American Speed association late model stock car races, September 1-3.

The fair's two-day Mini-Indy series will be for a total purse of $40,000 plus Robert Bosch-Volkswagen Super Vee Cup championship points. Each day will include a 100-kilometer main event plus time trials and preliminaries.

Mini-Indy cars are powered by rear-mounted Volkswagen racing engines, capable of propelling the low profile machines at speeds in excess of 150 miles per hour. Races at the half-mile state fair speedway will be unique since Mini-Indy competition usually is in conjunction with USAC's events on one-mile or two and one-half mile tracks.

ASA-sanctioned late model stock cars return to the state fair for the Labor Day weekend. In 1978, more than 30,000 fans were on hand for the three days of racing culminating in the AMS OIL 300 on Labor Day.

Program for this year calls for a $50,000 purse to be distributed at two 50-lap races plus a 25-lap feature for the 12 fastest qualifiers on Saturday, Sept. 1; two 100-lap contests on Sunday; and the 300 lap windup on Labor Day.

For the first time all seating for track events at the fair's 22,000-seat grandstand will be unreserved. For complete ticket order information write Minnesota state fair, St. Paul Minn. 55108.

Cattle Prices Expected To Drop This Fall

Currently high prices for fed cattle are likely to drop as more feeder cattle are placed in feedlots and seasonal forces take hold, says University of Minnesota agricultural economist PaulHasbargen.

Fed cattle marketings for the first three months of this year were about the same as last year, while placements of feeder cattle in feedlots were down 9 per cent for the quarter, according to the cattle on feed report released by the U.S. department of agriculture April 19.

Hasbargen explains that good pastures and large forage supplies allowed cattle producers to keep their animals out of the feedlots longer than normal. "We do have a build-up outside the feedlots," he says. "I think there will be a jump in feedlot placements in May, with a subsequent jump in fed cattle marketings in October."

Prices to fed cattle producers in the last quarter of 1979 are likely to average $10 below current levels, he says. "It's risky to be buying feeder cattle at present."

Producers who have cattle on feed aiming for fall marketing may want to consider taking advantage of high spring prices by contracting for fall delivery.

Current choice steer prices in the high $70s are partly a result of unusually high demand levels, and are therefore highly vulnerable, Hasbargen points out. "As fat cattle prices get over the $80 mark, the risk of outside forces causing a price break becomes greater."

Minnesota Milk Production Ranks Fourth

Stearns and Dakota counties paced Minnesota's nationally fourth-ranked dairy position in 1978 milk production. That milk production enriched the state's agricultural economy by over $896 million, commissioner Mark W. Seetin reported recently in a June dairy month salute.

"It is important for all Minnesotans as we observe this 1979 June dairy month to recognize the economic and nutritional significance of this keystone segment of agriculture."

"Impressive by itself, the $896 million grossed last year by dairy farmers in Minnesota represents only the value of 1978 milk production. Adding the other commodities produced and sold by dairy farmers — livestock and crops — should easily boost the gross income this year to over $1 billion," commissioner Seetin estimated.

On an annual basis, each and every day Minnesota dairy farmers are producing upwards of $2.5 million in new earned wealth for our state economy. This represents about one-fifth of total state farm income, the largest segment for any individual commodity, even though Minnesota's average farm milk price is third lowest and seven cents a gallon below the national average.

Stearns county was again the leading county in 1978 milk production, the more than 87.3 million gallons representing 8.3 per cent of the state total and an estimated $74 million gross market value for Stearns dairy farmers. During 1978 Stearns dairy farmers maintained an average of 70,200 milk cows on the production line, the same as in 1977 and also highest for all counties.

Dakota county dairy herds were statistically the most efficient with the average production per cow of 1,477 gallons during 1978 being the highest again for all Minnesota counties. Dakota's gross income of $1,252 per milk cow compares with a state-wide average of less than $1,075 per cow producing about 1,268 gallons of milk last year.

Rankings of Minnesota's leading counties in 1978 dairy farming enterprise are respectively:

Milk production — Stearns, Otter Tail, Todd, Morrison, Goodhue, Winona, Fillmore, Carver, Wright, McLeod, Douglas, Wabasha, Olmsted, Houston, Rice:

Production per cow — Dakota, Stevens, Pope, Chippewa, Carver-Olmsted tied, Big Stone-Kandiyohi tied, Renville, McLeod-Meeker-Wright-Cottonwood-Redwood-LeSueur tied.

Milk cows on farms — Stearns, Otter Tail, Morrison, Todd, Goodhue, Fillmore, Winona, Carver, Wright, McLeod, Wabasha, Douglas, Rice, Houston, Olmsted.

Individual projects are the core of 4-H work. In 1977 4-H members enrolled in an average of 2.2 learn-by-doing projects.

The best way to photograph a small animal is to get down to the level of your subject. Close-ups of animals, flowers and other nature subjects are fun to take and almost as easy as taking snapshots at conventional distances. Young people 9-19 can improve their camera skills in the national 4-H photography program, supported by Eastman Kodak Company and conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service.

4-H Photography Close-Up

Get close to nature with a camera. Close-up photos are fun to take and are almost as easy as taking snapshots at conventional distances.

Here are a few tips on close-ups from young people in the national 4-H photography program, supported by Eastman Kodak Company:

- Try to photograph flowers, small animals and other nature subjects in direct sunlight. Use a large piece of white paper or aluminum foil to reflect sunlight into any shadow areas.
- If subjects are in deep shade or if the day is cloudy, use flash. Drape a single layer of white handkerchief over the flash reflector to avoid overexposure. Be sure the handkerchief doesn't cover the camera lens.
- You may need a close-up or a zoom lens with a close-up (macro) setting to get a good-sized image on the film —an image that will show the subject's color and markings. Ask your photo equipment dealer about lenses available to fit your camera.

4-H members 9-19 can learn-by-doing about all types of photography, from close-ups to action shots, in projects and activities supervised by the Cooperative Extension Service.

The 4-H photography program is fun as well as educational, and it offers boys and girls recognition at all levels of participation.

Four program members in each county can earn medals of honor. One member per state receives an expense-paid trip to the 58th National 4-H Congress, Nov. 25-29 in Chicago. And six national winners are awarded $1,000 scholarships.

One volunteer leader per county receives a special pin in recognition of outstanding leadership in 4-H photography.

Awards are provided by Kodak and arranged by National 4-H Council. Winners are chosen by the Cooperative Extension Service.

More information is available from county extension agents.

System Of Ring Dikes Proposed By Stangeland

Congressman Arlan Stangeland met with federal officials Friday to discuss development of a federal program for ring dikes as one method of improving flood control in the Red river valley.

"The meeting went very well," Stangeland said, "and I think we're finally on the road to improving flood control in this region. The bureaucrats in Washington have held up progress in the past, but I'm certain, from the cooperation they have expressed, it will be only a matter of time before we have a beneficial ring dike program in operation."

Officials suggested that the agricultural stabilization and conservation service (ASC) should handle the program, with the soil conservation service (SCS) providing technical and planning advice.

The next step, according to Stangeland, is to survey the number of farms that have dikes, determine how dikes withstood the flooding and how many failed, how many farms would require diking, and the average cost of the dikes.

Stangeland said "The program would probably have to be a national program to cover the areas that have the year to year flooding like that which occurs in the Red river valley. The army corps of engineers estimates there are only 10 to 12 areas in the nation that would qualify under such a program."

The agencies will now begin analyzing more closely the flood problems and other alternatives, and Congressman Stangeland added that it might be necessary for the subcommittee on oversight and review to hold a hearing in that area.

"We spend millions of dollars fighting floods and cleaning up after floods, and it's time we begin spending dollars that will permanently prevent the need for spending excessive dollars every year as a result of the flood. It doesn't make sense to sit by year after year without developing better flood control measures. I will be introducing into the House within a few weeks legislation to provide remedial relief to the flood area," Stangeland said.

Legionville School Patrol Camp To Open

Forty-second annual program of 11 weekly training sessions for school patrol members ranging in age from 11 to 13 and from all over Minnesota, will open on June 10 at the Legionville school safety patrol training center, on North Long lake near Brainerd, according to Arnold Nietfeld, Underwood, president of the center.

The center has a capacity of 210 in each weekly session and over 2,250 are scheduled to take part in the program during the summer of 1979. Thief River Falls school patrol members will attend sessions in July.

Selected to attend by their schools, most of the patrol members attending will be coming back to take part in their patrols this coming year and impart their knowledge to other members of the school patrol in their schools.

Legionville is located on 620 acres of land with 1,600 feet of beach and is a recreational center for the patrol members as well as a training school in school patrol methods and programs. A well rounded program of education and recreation, along with plenty of good food and a staff of people trained to handle young people, instructors from the Minnesota highway patrol and physical education people, provide an interesting and busy week for the young patrol members.

Legionville school safety patrol training center is the only one like it in the United States devoted to this program and has been recognized as an outstanding safety program by the national safety council.

Gas Supplies Expected To Be O.K. For June

Shorter hours at stations but adequate supplies of gasoline will greet motorists the first part of June, according to the Minnesota State Automobile association (AAA).

Eighty-three per cent of the 65 stations surveyed throughout Minnesota reported they'd be closed after 8 p.m.; 37 per cent said they were closing by 6 p.m.

However, the curtailed hours are helping many stations stretch their supplies over the weekends, and only 46 per cent of all the stations surveyed reported they are closed on Sundays. In outstate Minnesota, only one-third of the stations are closed on Sundays. None of the stations surveyed by Minnesota AAA said they are limiting purchases.

Most of the state's gasoline stations made it through the Memorial day weekend. Unleaded regular gas was the tightest, and nine out of the 65 stations reported they had run out of that grade over the long weekend.

Allocations for June are between 70 and 80 per cent of last year's supply, according to Ken Wingard, executive secretary for the Minnesota Independent Retailers association. Some suppliers are maintaining the same allocations as in May, while others have dropped six to 10 per cent, Wingard said.

Prices continue to climb, with the biggest increase at the diesel pumps. In the past month, the price of diesel fuel has climbed 10 cents per gallon. Other grades continue to increase about a penny a gallon per week.

Currently, the average price per gallon at full-service stations is 85.4 cents for regular, 90.5 cents for premium, 89.3 cents for unleaded regular, 91.4 cents for unleaded premium and 81.1 cents for diesel.

At self-service stations, the average price per gallon is 83.3 cents for regular, 88.5 cents for premium, 87.5 cents for unleaded and 90.4 cents for unleaded premium.

THIS FEMALE ORIOLE is the beneficiary of the effort and expense put forth by a local bird watcher who goes far beyond the average in his efforts to make his woodland visitors welcome. That expense and effort is rewarded with a profusion of sound and color which he warns is more addictive than drugs. For more about this birdland benefactor and his friends, see Monday's edition of the Times.

Winners In Photography Contest Named

The first Northland nature photography contest has been judged and prizes have been awarded. Fifty-seven entries in four categories were received. The grand prize was awarded to Tom Nelson of Thief River Falls for his wildlflower print.

In the adult color category first prize went to Nelson for his wildflower entry, second place was awarded to Irene Davidson of Roseau for her print of a loon, and third place went to Tom Nelson for his sunset entry.

In the adult black and white category, first place went to Alice Hofstad of Plummer, second prize to Rick Gail of Hallock and third to Alice Hofstad.

In the grade 7-12 competition for black and white entries a first was awarded to Dawn Scramstad of Middle River. No other prizes were awarded.

Dan Narverud of Thief River Falls entered prints which took first, second and third places in the color competition for grades 7-12.

The entire show will be on display at the headquarters library at 101 East First street in Thief River Falls until June 16. The winning entries then will be exhibited in branches of the Northwest regional library for the following periods: Hallock, June 29 - July 11; Red Lake Falls, July 18-30; Warroad, August 8-20; and Roseau, August 22 - Sept. 3.

Agassiz environmental education council and the Northwest regional library, sponsors of the event, thank all participants for their interest. Plans are being made to hold another nature photo contest next year and area photographers are encouraged to keep it in mind as they take pictures throughout the year.

Campground At Gooseberry Will Be Closed

Campground at Gooseberry state park on the North Shore of Lake Superior will be closed this summer but all other park facilities will remain open, the Department of Natural Resources emphasized.

Among the facilities that will remain open for public use are the picnic area, interpretive center, group camp and trails.

An earlier release from the department indicated that "an effort" would be made to keep these facilities open, but park officials said they are now confident that public use of them will not interfere with reconstruction of the campground and installation of a new sewer and water system.

They said the campground at the popular park should be open for the 1980 summer season.

They added that other public and private facilities are available along the North Shore for use by campers.

Newfolden To Offer Summer Youth Program

Independent School District 441 of Newfolden will sponsor a swimming instruction program again this summer for students in grade 1-8 in the school district. The instruction will take place in Warren city pool. The pool is heated.

Students should not register for instruction if they do not plan to attend all 10 lessons. The school pays tuition on the number registered and registration will be held on June 19 with 10 regular lessons starting on June 21 and running to the end of July.

Bus schedule for the Tuesday and Thursday lessons will be: Holt, leaves 10 a.m. and returns 1 p.m.; Viking, leaves 10:30 a.m. and returns 12:30 p.m.; Newfolden, leaves 11 a.m. and returns 2 p.m.

Students will be able to catch busses along the highway routes if arrangements are made with the bus driver.

Northwest regional library has schedule its Summertime '79 program to visit Newfolden June 7, 21; July 5, 19; and August 2 and 16. The hours are 1:15 p.m.-2:15 p.m.

Summer band lessons will be given at the Viking elementary school and the Marshall county central high school by Mrs. Jan Klopp. Viking lessons will be given on Wednesdays and Newfolden lessons will be given on Fridays. Your child will receive a note stating the exact time. If you need to change your time, call Jan Klopp 681-2920.

Bike Or Hike Day Sponsored By Northland

Northland community college will sponsor its first "bike or hike day" Thursday with Northland students, faculty and staff encouraged to use their legs instead of an automobile to get to and from the college.

"The purpose of "bike or hike day" is to make persons more health and fitness conscious as well as making a contribution to the energy crisis," said Deb Jacobson, whose health class is sponsoring the event.

Health food refreshments will be served in the student commons for all participants.

Wishing Wells and Well-Wishers

Few wishing wells left. Those that remain are preserved more by sentiment than superstition.

Lots of well-wishers, though! They guild the day with their cheery platitudes. They just know everything will work out right — without their getting involved.

Lord, grant me grace to be a friend — not a well-wisher. Give me courage to stand for something, and to stand with others who share the belief. Prime me with vision to build tomorrow . . . faith to know it will come . . . patience to await the dawn.

Deliver me, Lord, from the sentimentality of simply wishing . . . the polite indifference of well-wishing . . . the numbing temptation not to get involved.

Lead me! To church . . . conviction . . . commitment.

SURGERY SHOULD BE YOUR LAST RESORT

We live in an age where almost everything is disposable. This tends to influence our thinking about our bodies. We forget that we have only one heart, two lungs, one liver, two kidneys, one stomach, one spine . . . and one life.

Bodily organs are not disposable. And surgery is no simple procedure. Therefore, we should think about it very carefully and exhaust all alternate nonsurgical methods of treatment before going "under the knife."

First of all, we must recognize that all operations, no matter whether they are called "major" or "minor" offer a certain element of risk. Actuaries can give you the percentage, but certainly death is a possibility with all surgery. Disability may be more frequent. And pain and hospitalization is certain.

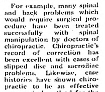
The risk depends on the complexity of the operation . . . and luck. Certainly, open heart, brain surgery, and spinal surgery can result in more complications than an appendectomy or a tonsillectomy. But people have been known to die from even the simplest of procedures.

A conscientious surgeon will evaluate the situation and risk, and advise you based on your physical condition and his experience.

But before you have that operation, it would be wise to weigh the alternatives. Of course, the nature of some health problems, such as cancer, are such that you have very little time and very few alternatives. But in most situations, you do have a reasonable choice.

One alternative, of course, is not to have the operation. Here, there are other risks involved. For example, if you have a hip joint problem, weigh the benefits you can expect (as well as the risks) against the pain and inconvenience you are experiencing.

Another alternative is trying other methods of treatment. Have you explored them thoroughly? Have you had your problem diagnosed and treated by doctors of other disciplines? Perhaps they can advise a treatment that is less drastic than surgery.



For example, many spinal and back problems which would require surgical procedure have been treated successfully with spinal manipulation by doctors of chiropractic. Chiropractic's record of correction has been excellent with cases of slipped disc and sacroiliac problems. Likewise, case histories have shown chiropractic to be an effective non-surgical method for the treatment of many other types of health problems. Chiropractic utilizes the inherent recuperative powers of the body and the relationship between musculo-skeletal structures and functions of the body, particularly of the spinal column and nervous system, in the restoration and maintenance of health.

When all is said and done, in some cases, you may need surgery. And if you do, your doctor of chiropractic and every other conscientious member of the health team will refer you to a surgeon experienced in handling the problem. But on the other hand, you may not need surgery. Isn't it worthwhile to at least find out before you take the painful step . . . and accept the inherent risk?

Food Contamination Stories Are Studied

by Jeanne Hanson
'U' M News Service

Remember hearing about the dead mouse in the soda pop bottle?

Or the time your kid came home with story that his friend knew for a fact that there were spider eggs in a particular brand of bubble gum.

And what about wormburgers and deep fried rat?

There are hundreds of them, and most of us have heard at least one. Gary Fine calls them "urban belief legends," and he collects them and studies them.

University of Minnesota sociologist, Fine has examined court desicions, modern folklore archives, and newspaper accounts, and has contacted corporate personnel and done field interviews with police officers and other relevant participants to track the origin and spread of urban legends.

Fine welcomes letters from people who have food contamination stories of their own, or other unusual legends to share.

"Some of this "fast food folklore" is true, but some is only wildest rumor, Fine said. "The story about dead mice in pop bottles is definitely true," said Fine, who has found the records of court cases involving 45 different dead mice in soda bottles from 1914 to 1976.

These records are all from the appeals court level, most accessible to researchers, he said. Many more dead mice have been found by people who never sued, or who settled their cases out of court, or who ended the proceedings at the trial court level. Fine guesses that there may have been between 36,000 and 180,000 bottled mice found by horrified soda pop drinkers since 1914.

Although nearly all of the 45 cases Fine studies were against one company, that company is not necessarily the main culprit, he said. It is one of the largest companies, and thus has more bottles. Also, it has more lawyers to appeal the cases than do other bottling companies.

A quick mouse check won't save the soft drink fan from a nasty surprise, however. Fine has found records of cases where plaintiffs claimed finding roaches, maggots, worms, putrid peanuts, cigarette butts, kerosene, concrete, glass slivers, hairpins, safety pins, paint, and even one condom, in their drinks.

The mouse, however, seems the least plausible. Fine has no idea how a mouse can get into a soda pop bottle or why all of those found were in bottles rather than cans. In court cases, company lawyers always argue that it is absolutely impossible, Fine said, but it's true.

Not all urban belief legends are true, however, Fine said. No evidence has ever been found that there are spider eggs in bubble gum and fast food chains do not use horsemeat or worms in hamburgers.

This latter legend was discredited when a competing hamburger store owner pointed out that a pound of worms costs more than a pound of ground beef. "It's interesting that this economic agrument really helped to stop the rumors," Fine said.

Fast food companies and other large commercial enterprises are often the subjects of the urban legends, with the stories tending to form around the largest outlet, Fine said. "With more than a third of our meals prepared outside the home, and with our fear that impersonal corporations are changing our society and will do anything for a buck, the conditions are ripe for fear and alienation," he said, adding that the rumors are often an outgrowth of these fears.

Although there may be more food rumors now, folklore about food is by no means a modern phenomenon. At the time of the Black Death in Europe, Fine said, Jews were accused of causing the plague by poisoning the wells. Stories of Japanese people putting ground glass in food were common for years.

The way such legends spread is especailly interesting to Fine. A story tends to spread first among the group using the product, especially if it is recounted by a high status member of that group. Then it spreads to other communities through a network of "weak ties" — church members, cousins, camp counselors and the like.

The mass media, on a local, regional, or national level, spreads the story next, usually by quoting a denial of the rumor. "One little league baseball player told me that he knew one such story was true because his mother had read it in a medical journal," Fine said. It turned out that she had seen a story in Newsweek explaining the falsity of the rumor, but repeating the story. The boy, and adults too, tend to remember only the interesting part, Fine said.

As an urban legend spreads, it changes, Fine said. It is embellished and made into a better story. A process called "assimilation." For instance, although Fine has not been able to substantiate it, the story of an unsuspecting woman who supposedly eats a fried rat, grows all the more gruesome because she eats most of it while sitting in a darkened room watching television.

"Leveling," a second process, removes all unnecessary details from the story, and "sharpening" makes the relevant details especially easy to remember, Fine said.

All urban legends, whether they begin in one or many places and whether they are true or false or somewhere in between, all spread this same way, Fine said. "It's hard to be sure there is no grain of truth in a legend," said Fine who has still not been able to reach a conclusion on the fried rat.

. . . As Though It Were A State

It seems to be highly unpopular in these fast-paced times to voice an opposition to change. There are no time-honored institutions held sacred, it would appear, and change for the sake of change is deemed progressive.

Little regard is given to the reason for establishment of things as they have been founded and endured for considerable time. Such is the case of the District of Columbia, the home of the nation's capitol, where residents are now trying to promote an amendment to the U.S. constitution which would provide D.C. treatment "as though it were a state".

Representative Robert Bauman of Maryland opposes the amendment, pointing out that nearly 200 years ago the nation's founding fathers determined that the nation should be comprised of sovereign states and that its capitol should be a city created specifically for that purpose, a federal district.

Approval of the amendment by the states would make the District of Columbia an entity neither state nor non state, Rep. Bauman says, which would be given all the benefits of statehood without need for a state constitution or governor, legislature or responsibility for its own finances. Congress would still have control over its affairs.

"Supporters of the D.C. amendment use a variety of half-truths in their arguments for the measure," Bauman writes. "They point out that D.C. residents pay federal taxes and serve in the armed forces, but resident aliens are also required to do both. Supporters conveniently fail to mention that the district receives one federal dollar for every 29 cents its residents pay. In addition, D.C. receives a direct $300 million grant from the federal government to offset the revenue loss from untaxable federal land, a payment no state can get."

The district may be larger than seven of the present 50 states, but there are a number of cities in that situation. Should they also be allowed two senators and at least one representative as the D.C. amendment would provide?

In attempting to push the amendment through state legislatures, supporters seem unwilling to look at other alternatives, Rep. Bauman said. "They want all of the candy and none of the bellyache," he said.

But the fact remains that the district was set up for valid reasons that still stand today, and ratification of the amendment would damage the union of sovereign states as established in our early history.

I.M. Drained's Terrible Tale

Roger Dunnette, communications specialist for Land O'Lakes cooperative, wrote the following column for publication in the "Land O Lakes Mirror", official publication of the cooperative:

With the price of gasoline what it is today, this friend of mine, I.M. Drained, is at his wit's end. In fact, he decides that he has now had to resort to buying his motor fuel on a long term credit.

Drained tells me he was able to secure a gasoline loan from his local bank, but it wasn't easy. He picks up the story from the point at which he was ushered to the desk of loan officer Phil Friendly.

"Are you Friendly?" (extending his hand) "I.M. Drained."

"What can I do for you, Mr. Drained?"

"I'd like to take out a gasoline loan."

"Fine. We're getting a lot of those requests lately. How much gas did you plan to purchase?"

"I was thinking of a full tank. We want to attend our son's wedding next week."

Friendly pulls out a form marked For Pleasure Use.

"We don't usually advance money for this sort of thing under our crisis allocation guidelines. We certainly can't consider a whole tank of gasoline without some type of pretty substantial collateral. What can you put up?"

"Will my life savings do?"

"Well, that's a starter. Anything else?"

"You mean my life's earnings won't cover it?"

"Mr. Drained, do you have any idea of the value of a full tank of gas today? We insist on more than that for collateral."

"I'm sorry. I should have known better. I could surrender my future profit sharing..."

Friendly interrupts.

"Are we talking leaded or unleaded gas?"

"Unleaded," Drained replies meekly.

The loan officer consults a chart and says, "Then I'm afraid that's insufficient."

"I feared you were going to say that."

"What else do you have in the way of a guarantee that you'll pay back this gas loan?"

"I have one other child besides the one who's getting married. She's nine."

"That just might swing it for you. Of course, you understand, you'll have to leave her here with us. We consider these loans very high risk ventures."

"I'll do it, Mr. Friendly, I'll do it, but can I have visiting privileges?"

"Certainly. Feel free to drop in anytime Monday through Friday between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m., our regular business hours."

"Oh, thank you. Then, it's all set?"

"Not quite. We need references on you. What can you show us?"

"Here's a testimonial to my good character signed by President Carter."

"Anything else?"

"I'm afraid that's all I've got."

"Well, I suppose that will have to do. Now, what period of time do you need to pay us back?"

"What choices do I have?"

The loan officer pulls out another chart, eyes it quickly, and then announces, "Well, our most popular gasoline loan is the 36 month one. You get a real break, interest-wise, on that one — only 25 per cent semi-annually. Of course, you understand, that if you pay off the loan before 36 months, there's a penalty fee."

"I think I can handle it if my wife can find work."

"All right, then, if you'll just sign these forms... Oh, I almost forgot."

"What's that?"

"Just as a matter of routine, we like to hold the deed on your house so we're assured everything is on the up and up. You can bring that in at the same time you drop your little girl off with us."

"Oh, thank you. I'm so indebted to you."

"I like your sense of humor, Drained. "It's a pleasure doing business with you."

Both men shake hands. As Drained exits, Friendly calls out:

"Remember, when you get us paid off in 1982, we'll be more than glad to refinance another tank of gas for you. Have a nice day!"

As hard as it is to believe, my friend's story certainly has set me to thinking. Maybe I should attach more significance to the sign displayed above the pumps at the Urban Turban Oil Company where I buy my gas.

It reads: We Sell to the Highest Bidder.

Walking A Fine Line

Following comments were carried recently in the Truman Tribune:

The separation of church and state walks a fine line. In Sioux Falls the singing of Christmas carols caused a rumble which pushed the school board into a needless clarification position. Yet, when the taxpayers get hooked into the expenditure of millions of dollars to transport and clean up after the members of the tax-exempt People's Temple "church" in Guyana, there were no Supreme Court tests; no Madalyn Hair lawsuits; in fact, very little objection from the media, the civil liberty activists, the atheists or the churches. In case the government does attempt to recoup its losses by laying claim to the organizations legal and illegal monies, we feel quite certain the bulk will be eaten up in court expenditures and that the final ruling will favor the cult.

The swindlers which have been permitted to operate free and clear amassing property and bank accounts under the guise of the clergy and the church, make some narrower definitions seem necessary and advisable.

Use Of Worn Tires Illegal On State Roads

Passenger auto-type tires with treads worn to less than one-sixteenth of an inch are not only unsafe, but are illegal to use on state roads, said James Crawford, chief of the state patrol, a division of the Minnesota department of public safety.

Poor grip of worn tires means a dangerous increase in the distance needed to stop a vehicle. Worn tires also multiply the possibility of tire failure, skidding and hydroplaning, he said.

"Tires with marginal, or no, tread are much more likely to be punctured by stones, glass or other objects on the road," said Crawford.

"Hydroplaning is a hazard on wet roads because tires tend to ride up on a thin film of water and this can lead to skids and loss of steering control. Hydroplaning occurs at lower vehicle speeds with worn tires because they lack sufficient tread depth to permit water to escape between the tire tread and the pavement."

According to Minnesota law, a tire is unlawful if:

+ any part of the ply or cord is exposed
+ any separation is indicated by a bump of bulge of the sidewall; tread or ply,
+ tread depth is less than one-sixteenth inch measured near the tread center at three spots spaced about equally around the tire or
+ it is worn to the level of the tread-wear indicators in any two tread grooves at three locations. A tire is also illegal if:
+ it is marked "not for highway use," or "for racing purposes only," or similar marking showing the tire is not designed for normal highway travel,
+ the tread or sidewall has cracks, cuts or snags deep enough to expose body cords,
+ it has been regrooved or recut below the original tread-design depth, except for certain taxi cab tires which have the word "regrooveable" molded on or into the tire sidewall.

State law also requires that all vehicles offered for sale must have tires that meet the safety standards listed above. This includes sales between private individuals.

If the vehicle being sold has unsafe tires, these must be replaced with tires meeting the requirements or the vehicle must be towed or hauled away.

Drivers should periodically check the tread depth on all tires. Look for tread-wear indicators which are materials specially molded into the bottom of the tread grooves to show when the useful life of the tread has been expended.

On a worn tire, the wear indicators will visibly disrupt the tread pattern and warn you that the tread is down to one-sixteenth inch or less and replacement tires are needed to comply with state law.

For tires without tread-wear indicators, use a Lincoln penny for a quick check of tread depth. Put the penny into a tread groove with the top of Lincoln's head pointing toward the axle.

Look from the side at the penney. If the top of Lincoln's head show above the tread level, the tread is already worn to less than one-sixteenth inch and the tires need replacement.

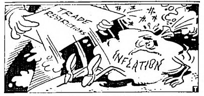
Inflation Fighting Ideas

NEWS OF PROGRESS



Experts say that if trade restrictions are removed, inflation will decline, and jobs in some areas will increase.

What does the recently completed Tokyo Round of trade agreements have to do with inflation? According to experts, free trade among nations is one of the few ways left to reduce prices without risking loss of jobs.

Trade agreements recently initialed in Geneva by 41 nations will reduce tariff barriers and therefore prices on nearly 90 percent of the manufactured goods entering this country.

Already, according to Dr. William Cline of the Brookings Institute, consumers save an average of ten cents on the dollar by buying imported products rather than comparable domestic goods. For instance, according to Dr. Cline, imported apparel is generally 8.7 percent lower in price than domestic apparel, footwear 11.6 percent cheaper and home furnishings made abroad 11.8 percent less expensive than those made at home.

At the same time the new trade treaty is lowering prices on consumer goods it will also help to create new jobs.

An increase in export-related employment should bring openings in entry level jobs, expanded training opportunities and more stable work situations.

In short, free trade should contribute to the controlled expansion of the economy necessary for slowing down inflation and help substantially to maintain a desirable unemployment reduction rate.

Remedy For A Heat Wave

TODAYS SPECIAL

Even before summer officially arrives, there can be days that are scorchers and the best advice is to be prepared. To greet the school bus set, how about Cranberry Punch, a sparkling drink that combines Kool-Aid unsweetened soft drink mix with cranberry juice cocktail or cranberry-apple drink. It's a flavor combination children appreciate, and each serving contributes toward their daily requirement of vitamin C. Doubly appreciated are Crunchy Peanut Butter Balls and a basket of fresh fruit on a sultry, sweltering afternoon in June.

CRANBERRY PUNCH

Combine 1 envelope strawberry, cherry, raspberry or orange flavor unsweetened soft drink mix, 1/2 cup sugar, 1 bottle (16 fl. oz.) cranberry juice cocktail or cranberry-apple drink and 6 cups water with ice in large nonmetal pitcher or bowl. Stir until soft drink mix and sugar are dissolved. Makes 2 quarts or 16 servings.

CRUNCHY PEANUT BUTTER BALLS

Combine 1 cup creamy peanut butter, 2/3 cup sweetened condensed milk, 1/2 cup crunchy nutlike cereal nuggets and 1/4 cup raisins in bowl, mixing well. Roll into balls and roll in 1/2 cup additional cereal. Store in refrigerator. Makes 3-1/2 dozen candies.

Minn. Iron Range Was 2nd Wild West

In the beginning, Minnesota's Iron Range was a throwback to America's Wild West.

Robust towns of rough-hewn log cabins and woodframe buildings sprung up at the edge of mines and along railroad lines. These towns were populated predominantly with men — tough, powerful miners who believed that no town deserved a name unless it had a good saloon.

The saloon was one of the few gathering places for townfolk and the miners from camps and locations. It was the social spa where men would hear news of the town and the outside world, cards would be played, and problems of the day would be talked over.

In 1903, the population of Gilbert was 1,300. It supported 36 saloons. Hibbing, with its 1905 population of 5,000, had no less than 66 saloons. Red light districts flourished.

As the towns began to grow, churches began to exert influence. This was especially true when women arrived and the character of the community slowly changed from that of a "boom town" to a family-oriented society. When the community had made that transition, the church emerged as a dominant force.

The setting of the early communities was very rough. The entire area was a dense pine forest. Prior to extensive lumbering, the only clearing was the townsite and mine. Timber was logged-off to build the towns. Streets often were bogs of red mud or troughs of red dust. Sidewalks along the shop fronts were built well above street level.

One observer said the housing offered "a general appearance of wretchedness comparable to the slums of our great cities." There were tarpaper shacks, rough log cabins, or hastily constructed woodframe homes or boarding houses.

Boarding houses came in a variety of sizes. Often they were large homes that served the family but also provided dormitories for three to as many as 60 men. Rent at a boarding house would include a bed — which was often shared — breakfast, a packed lunch pail, and the evening supper. Usually ethnically oriented, the most popular boarding houses were the ones with the best cooks.

Frontier towns on the Iron Range differed from camps and locations. The town was the commercial center, providing the churches, barbershops, markets, banks and other businesses needed to serve a large area. A characteristic shop would be a two-story woodframe building with a false front. Wooden sidewalks, hitching posts and water troughs were generally the only municipal improvements. Fire was always a great danger, since the towns were extremely close to the forest.

The frontier town was the meeting place, whether the meeting occurred at the saloon, the socialist hall, the church, or on the street corner. It provided the opportunity for ethnic groups to mingle, to learn about one another and to exchange ideas. It was this "coming together" of the different ethnic backgrounds that began the process of bridging the various ethnic barriers and working together to improve their individual lot.

Life in the Iron Range frontier town is dynamically depicted in the Iron Range Interpretative Center, located just off U.S. Highway 169 between Hibbing and Chisholm. The Center, a division of the Iron Range Resources and Rehabilitatoon Board, is open every day of the year (10-6 Oct. 16 to May 14; summer hours are 9-9). A free brochure is available from the Iron Range Interpretative Center, Box 392, Chisholm, MN 55719.

Spotting pigeongrass no longer spells disaster for your wheat crop.

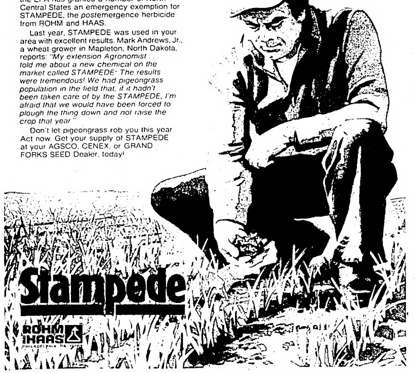
Now Stampede 3E, the *post*emergence herbicide, stamps out weeds after you spot them.

With Spring coming so late this year, pigeongrass is really on the rampage. If it's not controlled it can reduce your wheat yield by as much as 60%.

To help handle this major weed problem, the EPA has granted a number of North Central States an emergency exemption for STAMPEDE, the *post*emergence herbicide from ROHM and HAAS.

Last year, STAMPEDE was used in your area with excellent results. Mark Andrews, Jr., a wheat grower in Mapleton, North Dakota, reports: "My extension Agronomist . . . told me about a new chemical on the market called STAMPEDE: The results were tremendous! We had pigeongrass population in the field that, if it hadn't been taken care of by the STAMPEDE, I'm afraid that we would have been forced to plough the thing down and not raise the crop that year."

Don't let pigeongrass rob you this year. Act now. Get your supply of STAMPEDE at your AGSCO, CENEX, or GRAND FORKS SEED Dealer, today!



STAMPEDE has been given an emergency exemption for hard red spring wheat in the Dakotas, Montana and Minnesota under the name STAM™ F-34.

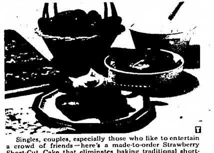
SHORTCUT TO SHORTCAKE!



Singles, couples, especially those who like to entertain a crowd of friends—here's a made-to-order Strawberry Short-Cut Cake that eliminates baking traditional shortcakes. It's appealing from the aspect of keeping two staple frozen foods inventoried, ready to go into action when you bring home fresh strawberries this season. Topped with sliced fresh strawberries and a dollop of Birds Eye Cool Whip non-dairy whipped topping, this "berry delicious" dessert can be prepared easily for one or several shortcake enthusiasts.

STRAWBERRY SHORT-CUT CAKE

1/4 cup honey
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/4 cup sliced almonds
6 slices thawed frozen pound cake
1 pint strawberries, sliced and sweetened
1 cup (about) thawed frozen whipped topping

Heat honey and butter in small saucepan over low heat until bubbly, stirring constantly. Stir in almonds and spread on cake slices. Place on baking sheet and toast in preheated broiler until lightly browned. Cool. Spoon strawberries over cake slices and top with whipped topping. Makes 6 servings.

Note: 1 tablespoon grated orange rind or 1-1/2 teaspoons grated lemon rind, or a few drops almond extract may be blended into the whipped topping.

AT LAST, YOU CAN POLISH OFF WILD OATS, AND MAKE SOME REAL MONEY ON FLAX.

AND HERE'S WHAT IT MEANS WHEN YOU DO.

Herbicide	Yield*	Increase over check
Check	12.5 bu.	—
Leading wild oat herbicide	16.1 bu.	29%
Asulox	23.9 bu.	91%

*Yield increase will vary with severity of wild oats infestation.

This year, consider setting some of your best acres aside for this profitable cash crop. Because now you can be sure wild oats won't take over.
Here's why. The EPA has granted a Section 18 specific exemption for the use of Asulox for post-emergent weed control in flax in Kittson, Lake of the Woods, Marshall, Pennington and Roseau Counties.
Asulox controls wild oats plus wild buckwheat and foxtail in the same application. Just spray it on by ground or air when wild oats are in the three to four-leaf stage, and you'll set yourself up for yield increases on the order of those shown above. These were the results of 8 separate tests run right here in this area by Rhône-Poulenc, makers of Asulox, as well as Bronate and Buctril.
Now, just a few cautions. Under EPA regulations, Asulox must be applied on flax by a certified private or commercial applicator. Great care should be taken to avoid spray drift onto adjacent crops. And don't apply when the crop is under stress, or before flax is at least two inches tall.
Control of wild oats is usually achieved within 2-3 weeks after Asulox application.
The exemption granted by the EPA limits the amount of Asulox that can be sold. The quantity purchased in your name will be noted for EPA records. So don't miss out on this opportunity for outstanding weed control. Order your supply from your dealer today, before he has a chance to run out. Because, at last, you can polish off wild oats, and make some real money on flax.

OBSERVATION DECK at the H.R. Achenbach residence is what most people would call a patio. Beneath the large umbrella, Herb Achenbach spends many hours observing birds and animals which come to visit. He makes them welcome with a vareity of feed and liquid provided for their use. Bird houses and feeders abound on the property and are used extensively. When the Achenbachs built their house in 1971, the site was selected with nearby woods and river in mind. A backwater area from the river extends back behind the house and is used by several species of ducks as well as visited by furbearers.

Feeds A Ton of Feed A Year . . .

Achenbach Yard Is Haven For Hundreds Of Birds

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

While most people can appreciate the color and sound provided by numbers of birds, Dr. H. R. Achenbach of Thief River Falls takes some extra steps to assure being surrounded by that sound and color. He has made the area of his home in the Sherwood forest addition on the northeast edge of Thief River Falls a haven for birds and animals of every description.

"I've arranged my schedule to give me more time for bird watching," the Thief River Falls dentist said while seated beneath a large umbrella on his patio, overlooking a large yard and a backwater area from the nearby Red Lake river.

"Most of the time in the summer I don't have appointments until 9 a.m. and I take two hours for lunch. That way I can have breakfast and lunch out here and see what is going on with the birds. I see a pair of English sparrows are trying to take over that tree swallow house. We'll have to do something about that."

Achenbach, who feeds more than a ton of bird feed a year and buys syrup by the case to mix with water for his watering stations, has no fondness for English sparrows, starlings or grackles — all imported bird species which are generally considered to be pests at best.

"I don't object to any indigenous species," he said. "I can understand sparrow hawks, sharp-shinned hawks and other predators taking some song birds. They have to live, too. But I can't stand those imports. They completely take over the place and chase everything else away if you let them. When they come in my yard, they commit suicide."

Achenbach's yard is tailor made for bird watching. The area is quite heavily wooded and there is water nearby. Bird houses have been placed in a number of trees and natural nesting sites abound. Feeders at a number of locations are filled daily with sunflower seeds, screenings from the St. Hilaire elevator and millet when it is available. The feed is kept in a bin in the family's garage.

Waterers in several locations are filled daily with a mixture of a pint of dark syrup to a gallon of water with about a gallon of the mixture consumed by the birds each day.

The Achenbachs built the house in 1971, selecting the site because of its location and adaptation for wildlife development. The patio overlooking the back yard and pond has been transformed into an observation deck where Herb and others can sit under a large umbrella and watch and listen to the woodland symphony.

"Orioles have really increased around here," Achenbach observed. "A few years ago we would only have a pair or so in the neighborhood. Then we started putting out twine for nesting material and found out they liked the syrup water. Several years ago I had 40 orioles an hour coming to the suet feeder, then it went up to 120 an hour and last year there were 200 an hour coming to the feeder. This year I haven't even tried to count them.

"Orioles are territorial, you know; they need a certain amount of room for nesting area. I wonder how far they come to get feed and syrup water here. Next year I'm going to put some colored twine in the nesting material box and ask the neighbors to watch for it in nests around the area."

Feeding is not confined to the feeders on posts and strung from wires in the yard. Achenbach also feeds whole kernel corn to ducks which come to the pond and the pool also abounds in wild rice later in the year. He has put out 16 wood duck boxes and has a pair of wood ducks nesting in a hollow tree near the house every year. Last year the Achenbachs watched as the downy young emerged from the opening some 20 feet above the ground and fell to the grass to join the hen which led them to the nearby water.

"One year I had two dozen wood duck drakes that would come to feed in the evening. I would no more than turn the canoe around to come in than they would come swimming out of the wild rice or gliding in through the trees. They are mallards and teal that nest

BIRD WATCHER Dr. H. R. Achenbach of Thief River Falls is more than just an observer of wildlife. He has developed the area around his home in Sherwood forest addition into a mecca for his feathered friends, feeding over a ton of bird food a year. He has even arranged his dental schedule to permit him extra time to remain at home for morning and noon-time viewing.

BOX SEAT SPECTATOR joining in the bird watching at the H.R. Achenbach residence is this chipmunk. The little rodent's interest is generated more by the grain and seeds which the feeders have to offer than by the beauty of the birds. Whatever its interest, it found an ideal viewing site.

Shotgun Murder Takes Life Of Local Resident

Another Arrest Made Following Redlake Events

In follow-up to the violence on the Red Lake Indian reservation May 19 and 20, 20-year-old Gordon Wayne Roy has been charged with assault with a deadly weapon and bond set at $35,000 by U.S. Magistrate Robert Renner in Minneapolis.

Roy was arrested last week on the reservation in connection with an incident involving WCCO-TV reporter Tom Hanneman and photographer Keith Brown. They said a man with a pistol stopped them as they entered the reservation May 19, forced them to lie face down in the street and threatened to blow their heads off. They said he also forced them to destroy $60,000 worth of camera equipment before he drove away in their rented car.

Six other reservation residents were arrested earlier in connection with the take-over of the law enforcement center at Redlake.

James Stevens, an Apache Indian with 16 years of experience with the Bureau of Indian Affairs, has been named BIA superintendent at Red Lake to succeed acting superintendent Nathan Joe Head. Head was appointed acting superintendent to replace Celestine Maus, considered unacceptable by opponents to tribal chairman Roger Jourdain. The violence on the reservation in mid-May resulted from Jourdain's ouster of Stephanie Hanson as tribal treasurer. Her husband, Harry, is one of the six charged with assault on law enforcement officers on the reservation May 19.

Garden Valley Company Has Meet June 5

More than 400 persons attended the 73rd annual meeting of the Garden Valley telephone company in Erskine on Tuesday, June 5.

O. Gjerdingen of Red Lake Falls, Norman Hendrickson of Gonvick and Thorfin Ostby of Grygla were reelected to three-year terms on the cooperative's board of directors.

President L. J. Lee reported that the board of directors recently authorized the payment of capital credits equity to members for the years 1956 and 1957. "Some one-quarter million dollars of capital credits," he said, "including estate settlements, have been declared payable to members during the past two years."

General manager Lawrence Ware provided members with a comprehensive review of the reasons why the cooperative must, in the near future, increase rates for local telephone service. He explained that the cooperative, to provide improved services, has increased the average investment per subscriber nearly 10 times since 1951—from $144 to over $1,400.

During this same 27-year period, although the consumer price index has gone up more than 2½ times, Garden Valley's average rate for one-party residential service has been increased just once — only 23 per cent, or less than one-sixth of the rate of inflation. Although the exact amount of required increase will depend upon the results of a detailed rate study, the general range is expected to be approximately $1 per month, on an average, or about three cents a day.

Members attending the 1979 annual meeting were provided an opportunity to visit various displays showing the cooperative's service activities and equipment. These displays, representing Garden Valley's service center and construction, installation, maintenance and central office equipment departments, included the older types of equipment as well as today's modern facilities.

Tim Trudeau Selected As Student Advisor

Forty-eight students at Moorhead state university have been chosen as student advisors to incoming freshmen and transfer students. Among these is Tim Trudeau of Thief River Falls.

Nominating by department chairmen or faculty members, student advisors help entering freshmen with registrations and acquaint them with the campus. They are trained through the campus financial aids, housing, admissions, academic affairs and registrar's offices. The advisors also maintain an information center and regular office hours throughout the school year to meet with and answer questions from new students.

Student advisors are paid for their work and must have a 2.5 or better grade point average to apply for the position. They begin work during the last week in July with summer preregistration.

Former Pastor Celebrates 60th Anniversary

Monsignor A. I. Merth, former pastor of St. Bernard's Catholic church of Thief River Falls, will celebrate the 60th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood Thursday, June 14.

A 1 p.m. Mass will be celebrated followed by a public reception from 2 to 4 p.m. at Villa St. Vincent (former St. Francis hospital) in Crookston where Msgr. Merth is a resident. The following Sunday, June 17, Msgr. Merth will celebrate the 10:30 a.m. Mass at Sacred Heart church in East Grand Forks.

Ordained June 14, 1919 at Josephinum Pontifical seminary in Columbus, Ohio, where he spent 12 years preparing for the priesthood, Msgr. Merth assumed his first assignment in the diocese of Crookston that year serving as the assistant pastor at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception. Three years later, in 1922, he assumed the pastorship at St. Stephen's church in Stephen where he remained for two years.

In November of 1924 Msgr. Merth began his 23-year service as pastor at St. Bernard's in Thief River Falls. According to Rev. James Bernauer, present pastor at St. Bernard's, Msgr. Merth was noted for his speaking ability and leadership in Catholic education.

Msgr. Merth left St. Bernard's in 1947 when he was named pastor at Sacred Heart church in East Grand Forks. Under his direction there, the church, high school, gymnasium, grade school, rectory and an addition to the convent were built.

In the spring of 1971 Msgr. Merth retired the pastorship in East Grand Forks but continued serving in the diocese as a priest's assistant. He spent 1965-1967 back at St. Bernard's parish working with Bernauer.

During his career in the priesthood Msgr. Merth's abilities brought him many honors. He was named to the chairmanship of the priest's senate, served as superintendent of schools in the Diocese of Crookston, served as a consultor to the bishop and was made a domestic prelate by Pope Pius XII.

Monsignor A. I. Merth

Msgr. Merth was recently quoted as saying, "I don't know where these 60 years have gone— they've really slipped by. The years have been interesting, a lot of hard work and fulfilling. That is what makes life worthwhile."

Reserve Barley Released From CCC Storage

For the second time since establishment of the farmer-owned grain reserve, barley has reached the price level at which farmers may withdraw the grain without penalty. Approximately 40 million bushels of barley are in the reserve.

Ray Fitzgerald, executive vice-president of the Commodity Credit corporation (CCC) said producers may remove their barley from the reserve by repaying their CCC price support loans.

Release of the reserve does not require farmers to redeem or sell their grain at this time, Fitzgerald said.

Fitzgerald said the national market price for barley has risen to $2.05 per bushel, one cent above the release point of $2.04, which is 125 per cent of the national average loan rate. Barley was first released from the reserve from July 5 through July 31, 1978.

Farmers receive storage payments annually in advance on the barley from the U.S. department of agriculture. Upon repayment of the loan, farmers may keep the storage payments earned through the date of repayment. If the loan is not repaid, storage credit will continue through the end of July.

On July 31, CCC will review the average price for barley to determine if the release authorization should remain in effect. If release continues, storage payments will stop in those states where the price remains above the release level.

Data used by CCC in determining the release level include a daily report by the agricultural marketing service which shows prices bid by buyers at selected markets, and a month-end economics, statistics and cooperatives service report of prices received by farmers, showing the previous months average price and the current mid-month price.

Stockton, California, Portland, Oregon, and Minneapolis are the daily markets reviewed by CCC for barley. The five-day average of these market prices, adjusted to reflect prices received by farmers, was the basis for the release action.

Fitzgerald said that with the release of barley, three of the five commodities in the reserve are in release status: barley, wheat and oats. Oats and wheat are released at least through the end of June.

The second meeting of the Staesdals Laget was held in Erskine on June 15 and 16. This second meeting was one of the important ones. The first had been a trail meeting but now the pattern would be definitely set for all future meetings. The city band met them at the depot and this really put them into a holiday mood. By now Bjornaraa had given the lag some constructive thought and it became clear that he was the man for the position. He had the ability to organize well and yet give the feeling of informality. "Come up and play for us", he would call to Eivand Aakhus, as though it was a spur of the moment thought. Aakhus who had been well warned in advance went up on the stage, and a good feeling passed through the crowd both of enjoyment of his Norwegian music and his willingness to oblige so readily. It made others feel less reluctant to come forth and express themselves on any problem of discussion. At this meeting the State representative, Knut Nomeland gave a talk, Dr. O.H. Olson presented the lag with the key to the city. Grunde Grundeson gave a long talk on poets of Norway, especially about Bjornestjerne Bjornsen. After his talk, the audience sang, 'Ja i Elsker Dette Landet". At this meeting Sam Sorenson was introduced. He was becoming a great violinist on the Hardanger violin, and delighted the audience with old folk songs such as "Ala Ola, kjyre di ae dau" and similar well known favorites.

June 14 and 15, 1911 found the meeting at Thief River Falls. At this time Eivind Aakhus introduced his son, Daniel, whom he had taught to play the violin. From then on, whenever Eivind was far away on concert tours, Daniel took over and became one of the "Vor Egen Spillemen" (our own musicians) along with his father Eivind, Sam Sorenson, Bjorn Tveitbakk and Olav Dale. At his meeting four people spoke who became in great demand at all the lags. One was Mr. M.A. Brattland from Ada who gave a talk on the unfolding progress and formation of Setesdals culture in this country. All during his entire life Judge Brattland made every effort to attend all the meetings and was always prepared with a speech. The second was Sigrid Lovdahl, who appreared in Setesdals "dragt" (costume) and sang stev, and took part in the dances. She later became Mrs. Sigurd Krost ue, and remained the chief stev singer, and with her husband, a great force in keeping the lag going.

The third was Dr. J.A. Arneberg, who was an enthusiastic member of any improvement that tried to maintain the Norse culture. He was often called upon to inspire them with his lectures.

The lag meeting was held in McIntosh, June 13 and 14, 1912. The Towns photographer, P.B. Hole was on hand to take an outdoor picture of the crowd. The town of McIntosh at that time was by no means prepared to lodge so many people and this meeting became well remembered because of the lack of accomodations. Olav Moe gave men permission to sleep in the hay mow of his livery stable. About fifty men took advantage of this offer. This was not a drinking crowd as was sometimes the case, but a group interested in good talk and laughter. Someone was sent off to bring President Bjornara to this odd assemblage. He came and they made him sing and act out many of his own poems. Many Setesdoels remembered this evening and still recall how they enjoyed the presidents entertainment. Stories flowed freely until two o'clock in the morning.

In the meantime the women were faring equally well, Mrs. Olav Moe invited as many into her hoe as it could hold. Beds were made on the floor of all the rooms and a general hilarity set in. They entertained themselves by singing stev and telling stories with Guro Amble being the chief leader.

This good fellowship in solving the crowded situation probably set this 1912 meeting as a well remembered affair for the lag in years to come.

There was much humor and joking among the entertainers and introductions lacked formality. At this time Gustav Torguson was introduced by Bjornaraa and having been Bjornaraa's pupil he had to take ribbing. For retaliation he began. "You know old Bjorgulv can sing that coo-coo song better than anyone else, and it helped him out once. He went to a party one evening and Mrs. Bjornarra said "Don't stay late now, Bjorgulv." "No", he answered. "I'll be back at 11 o'clock." When Bjorgulv came home and opened the door, Ingbord asked, "Is that you Bjorgulv?" "Yes, did you expect anyone else?" he said. "Isn't it late?" she asked. "Just then the coo-coo clock struck two and Bjorgulv hurried and sang out the next nine coo-coos.

The program progressed, intermingled with the ridiculous and the sublime. At this meeting a letter was read from Professor Seippel in Norway who sent greetings and a wish for their future success.

Both Mr. M.A. Brattland and Pastor Dale directed their talks to the young people urging them to learn the language and preserve the culture of their forefathers birthplace. Arne Grundeson and Knute Nomeland also directed their talks in that direction.

The musical entertainment was enjoyed as usual. Carl Berg sang 'Kan Du Glemme Gamle Norge". The violin music was furnished by Sam Sorenson and Osmund Tvietlie. Stev were sung by Annie Omlid, Ingborg Homme, Sigrid Lovdahl and Gyro Amble.

Mr. and Mrs. Glen Tasa and Luane Sena Chervestad attended the confirmation services at Erskine for Johnson and afterwards were dinner guests at the Sharol Johnson home in honor of their daughter Sunday.

We are sorry to hear Adolph Peterson is a patient at the hospital in Crookston and is not feeling too well. Hurry and get well Adolph.

Tim Bergerson was confirmed at the Zion Lutheran church in Oklee by Rev. Gunderson on Sunday and afterwards Mr. and Mrs. Danny Stawarski entertained the following at a dinner party, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Gunderson and Jamey and Brad, Birdie Gunderson and Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Flatland.

University Salary Increase Okayed

Raises of seven per cent for each year of the 1979-81 biennium plus a $1 million fund for merit increases for University of Minnesota faculty members were approved Saturday afternoon by a conference committee of the state legislature.

The fund for merit and "retention" raises was added to Gov. Al Quie's $29.5 million pay plan, which included raises of seven per cent each year plus the same fringe benefits included in the state civil service pay plan.

In the governor's package, the raises totaled $23.6 million and the fringe benefits came to $5.9 million. The addition of the discretionary fund raised the increases to $30.5 million.

Salary funds are appropriated to the university, which was discretion over how they are allocated. The seven per cent will not necessarily be divided across the board, university officials said recently.

The $1 million fund will be used to provide equity raises within and among the campuses and to recruit as well as to retain faculty members.

The discretionary fund of $500,000 a year to be allocated by the University was a compromise from the $650,000 a year originally proposed by Sen. Robert Tennessen, DFL-Minneapolis.

Tennessen's motion was defeated with five of the six House conferees dissenting.

Rep. William Dean, IR-Minneapolis, made the compromise motion after a noon recess.

Dean said that the University would "play the retention game" even if the legislature did not provide the extra funds. The "game" to which Dean referred is the process by which faculty members solicit job offers from other colleges to get raises from the University.

The fund will allow the University to grant higher across-the-board raises, Dean said. "The hard working professor who's not out soliciting job offers is going to get a little bit better raise," he said.

"They do have faculty members recruited by other campuses," Tennessen said, "and they have to take pay raises away from others if they want to keep them. As a result, many faculty have been getting raises of 3 per cent and 4 per cent each year."

Rep. Michael Sieben, DFL-Newport, opposed the merit and retention fund saying that universities are in a buyers' market for faculty. "I don't think they're having that much difficulty getting competent teachers," Sieben said.

"They do have a problem keeping good, qualified faculty who are recruited away by other universities," Tennessen argued.

Sieben said that University of Minnesota raises should not exceed those negotiated for members of the State University System by the InterFaculty Organization, which is affiliated with the Minnesota Education Association.

Conference committee chairman Roger Moe, DFL senator from Ada, said that state university system faculty raises are tied to a grid system for the second year of the biennium, a fact that could make their raises better than those the University of Minnesota faculty will be getting.

State university faculty raises will be 7 per cent the first year but, during the second year, a formula that takes the cost of living into account will be used. Their pay plan was also approved by the committee.

The conference committee also approved community college faculty raises of 9.2 per cent the first year and 8.4 per cent the second year. Their raises were also negotiated by IFO-MEA.

In speaking for his motion, Dean said that opposition to the merit and retention fund was an effort to keep salaries down in order to stimulate collective bargaining by University of Minnesota faculty.

The University of Minnesota Education Association and the American Association of University Professors are collecting cards in an effort to get a second collective bargaining election on the Twin Cities campus. Duluth faculty have not yet voted on a bargaining agent.

Hike or bike day was held to call attention to the energy problem and emphasize alternate means of saving fuel.

Minnesota Has Annual History Of 17 Tornadoes

If tornado history is a guide, 17 tornadoes could touch down in Minnesota during the months ahead, according to the national weather service.

Normanally, in the United States, the number of tornadoes begins to increase during February in the Gulf states. This increase in tornadic activity spreads northward and westward across the country, reaching its peak during the months of May and June.

Minnesota lies on the northern edge of the region of maximum tornado frequency. The peak tornado month in Minnesota is June, with July and May not far behind. Nearly three-fourths of all Minnesota tornadoes occur during these months: May, 18 per cent; June, 31 per cent; July, 26 per cent.

Although the principal danger period in Minnesota is late spring and early summer, between the hours of 3 p.m. and 9 p.m., tornadoes also occur at other times. In the past 62 years, tornadoes have occurred in Minnesota in every month except December, January and February, and they can occur at any time of day or night. The earliest reported tornado in Minnesota was on March 18, 1968, north of Truman, and the latest was on Nov. 6, 1931, east of Maple Plain.

In 1978, Minnesota had 25 tornadoes, eight more than the seasonal average. The greatest single year total was 34 tornadoes in 1968. The month of greatest frequency last year was July, with 13. 1978 also added four deaths and 48 injuries to its statistical totals.

With continued public awareness and greater effectiveness in the state-wide warning structure, the national weather service hopes to make 1979 a tragedy free year and continue on to make the 70's the lowest decade for killer tornadoes.

Pallbearers will be Irwin Anseby, Gordon Olson, Jr., Dake Ayers, Selmer Dimmen, Donovan Dyrdal and Glen Olson.

Marvin Sam Johnson was born Oct. 3, 1890 in Norden township to Andrew and Annie Johnson, now deceased. He received his schooling in the Gopher Mound school and grew to manhood in Norden township.

On Dec. 6, 1916, he was married in Thief River Falls to Ethel Varney. Following their marriage, the couple settled in Norden township, where they engaged in farming. In addition to farming, Johnson worked part-time as a carpenter.

He is survived by his wife, two sons: Myrl Johnson, Thief River Falls; and Elric, South St. Paul; five grandchildren, a sister, Mrs. John (Nora) Gustafson, Thief River Falls; and several nieces and nephews.

He was preceded in death by three brothers: Albert, John and Hans, and three sisters: Betsy, Boletta and Emma.

Applied music students at Northland community college will be performing in a music recital on Tuesday, June 12, beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the college fine arts theatre. Instructors who will have students performing are Mrs. Phyllis Dalager in piano and Mrs. Barbara Geer in voice and instruments.

Piano recitals will be given by Nathan Dalager, St. Hilaire; Jana Fessler, Thief River Falls; Vonda Dekkers, Thief River Falls; Lora Lee Iverson, Thief River Falls; Audrey Nicholls, Thief River Falls; Jennifer Hustad, Thief River Falls; Kathy Shelter, Thief River Falls; Karen Barron, Baudette; and Kristi Gerardy, Thief River Falls.

Voice performances will be given by Sue Peterson, Williams; Tim Dahlstrom, Thief River Falls; Randy Henrickson, Strandquist; and Barbara Laidley, Thief River Falls.

Instrumental students who will be in recital include Kristi Dahlstrom, Thief River Falls; Mike Thompson, Strathcona; Kathy Shetler, Thief River Falls; and Beverly Rustad, Thief River Falls.

"Student recitals are an important part of the music program at Northland," said music director Les Torgerson, "and through such participation students gain confidence and poise, so necessary in furthering a student's background in music."

The public is cordially invited to attend this recital program at no charge.

Soil Surveys' Data Used In Various Ways

Cooperation between federal, state and county officials will enable soil surveys to be conducted in 17 Minnesota counties this summer, a University of Minnesota extension specialist reports.

"A wide variety of people find soil surveys increasingly useful," says James Anderson, soil scientist. "Farmers and foresters use data from the surveys to help determine the value of land and the best way to use it. Tax assessment is becoming more equitable because of the surveys."

Anderson is working with other scientists and agencies to develop educational programs on using soil information.

In the past, federal funding through the soil conservation service (SCS) paid the total survey bill. As the value of this information became more widely known, potential users showed increasing interest in having their counties mapped. As a result, the state and several counties contributed funding for the present "accelerated" program.

"This is the second year of the Minnesota accelerated soil survey," Anderson says. "The state provided $900,000 in 1978 and $1.5 million for this year, as authorized by the legislative commission on Minnesota's resources.

Before a survey can be started an agreement is signed by officials of the county involved, the University of Minnesota agricultural experiment station, SCS and the soil and water conservation district. The survey itself consists of soil sampling and viewing of landscape features.

"The soil scientists who conduct the field work must first ask permission from the owners to walk across their land," Anderson says.

Soil samples will be analyzed for content and texture. The results are mapped onto aerial photographs of the land. Approximately 21 million acres have been mapped. About 30 million acres remain to be inventoried. The accelerated survey schedule spans 11 more years.

"Twelve of the mapped counties are using their surveys as a basis for tax assessment," the scientist reports. "Farmers, foresters and land managers use completed surveys to evaluate land before purchasing, renting or changing its use. These maps help locate suitable soil for various crops and to predict yields. They can also help decide on management practices, such as irrigation."

A soil map is also useful in wildlife management. Counties and cities need soil data to decide where to place schools, parks, reservoirs and zoning. Home builders make use of soil information in placing sewage treatment systems.

"Surveying our soil helps all of us plan for the future," Anderson says. "It guides people in using the land wisely."

More information and survey results are available from the local soil and water conservation district office or the Soil Science Department, University of Minnesota, St. Paul, 55108.

Careful Driving Needed During Rainy Weather

Motorists face a greater chance of being killed or injured during rainy weather than during sleet and snow conditions, according to commissioner John P. Sopsic of the Minnesota department of public safety.

Rains drastically reduce the driver's visibility and rain-slick roads mean much longer distances are required for stopping a vehicle, said Sopsic. "The motorist's best response is to slow down and drive with added concentration and caution."

After a relatively dry period, even light rain can cause slippery conditions. During the dry days, a coating of oil, dust and gasoline builds up on roadways. Adding rain to the road grime can create an emulsion as slippery as wet soap. Studies show that the emulsion becomes even slipperier as the rain keeps falling.

Heavy rains bring the danger of hydroplaning, which happens when a vehicle's tires start to lift off the road and ride up on a thin film of water, said Sopsic. The danger is that steering and braking coltrol fade as the tires lose contact with the road.

Partial hydroplaning can start at speeds as low as 30 miles an hour, depending on tire pressures, tire tread depths and water depths. At higher speeds, the tires can lose all contact with the road. Then any gust of wind, change in road angle or slight curve can produce an uncontrollable skid.

"Your best defenses against hydroplaning are to slow down during rainy weather and use good tires with deep treads. The treads allow water to escape from under the tires and help prevent complete hydroplaning at highway speeds."

Worn tires multiply the possibility of hydroplaning, skidding and tire failure, said Sopsic. "Passenger auto-type tires with treads worn to less than one-sixteenth of an inch are not only unsafe, but are illegal to use on state roads."

In rainy weather, also watch out for deep puddles while driving. Try to slow down before going through any standing water. Splashing through at high speed may not only flood your brakes, but can cause the engine to stall from the sudden intake of water, he said.

"Make sure to test your brakes after hitting a deep puddle. To dry out wet brakes and restore braking power, apply the brakes lightly for a few moments, with due regard for following traffic. Repeat the procedure as necessary until you feel effective braking power is restored," said Sopsic.

Sunflower Seed Production Hits High In Polk

Minnesota's record 1978 production of sunflower seed was paced by growers in Blue Earth, LeSueur, Polk and Norman counties, agriculture commissioner Mark W. Seetin reported recently.

Polk county won both the 1978 honors in non-oil type sunflowers with 20.06 million pounds the total harvested and an average yield of 1,700 pounds per acre for the confection-bird seed varieties. At the lower average market price of 10.8 cents a pound for this type sunflower seed, Polk's production was worth nearly $435,000 and the average gross return per acre was almost $184.

Norman county earned the production crown with a harvest of 131.63 million pounds of sunflower seed. That was almost 13 per cent of the state total of nearly one billion, 43 million pounds and for Norman represented a 75 per cent increase over its 1977 crop of sunflower seed.

Blue Earth and LeSueur counties tied for the average yield championship last year by harvesting 2,100 pounds of sunflower seed per acre. However, Renville retains the all-time average yield title on the 2,150 pounds per acre harvested in 1977. These three counties topped all seed and oil type sunflower rankings.

Almost 92 per cent of Minnesota's 1978 sunflower seed production was of the oil bearing type, with the less than eight per cent balance representing the confection and bird seed type of sunflowers. Minnesota's 1978 total sunflower crop was more than 14 times that of 1970 when the confection-bird seed varieties were still dominant, prior to the increase in global demand for high quality vegetable oil.

The preliminary estimated value of Minnesota's 1978 sunflower crop, at an average price of 11.3 cents a pound, is $117.4 million. Norman county's share was almost $15 million. The average 1978 gross return per acre for Blue Earth and LeSueur counties was over $237.

Minnesota's leading counties in 1978 sunflower seed production and yield, are respectively:

All sunflower seed production— Norman, Polk, Wilkin, Clay, Marshall, Traverse, Roseau, Pennington, Big Stone, Stevens, Grant, Red Lake, Kittson, Mahnomen, Swift.

All sunflower seed yield — Blue Earth and LeSueur tied, Brown-Steele-Waseca tied, Chippewa, Renville, Kandiyhi - Sibley - Redwood tied, Yellow Medicine, Roseau, Swift and Goodhue tied.

Oil sunflower production— Norman, Wilkin, Polk, Clay, Traverse, Marshall, Roseau, Big Stone, Stevens, Pennington, Grant, Red Lake, Mahnomen, Swift, Becker.

Oil sunflower yield— Blue Earth and LeSueur tied, Brown, Steel and Waseca tied, Chippewa, Renville, Sibley and Redwood tied, Roseau, Norman, Red Lake, Swift, Goodhue tied.

Non-oil sunflower production—Polk, Marshal, Kittson, Pennington, Wilkin, Red Lake, Clay, Norman, Traverse, Otter Tail.

Non-oil sunflower yield— Polk, Norman, Pennington, Marshall and Red Lake tied, Clay, Becker-Kittson tied, Mahnomen-Otter Tail tied.

Oak Wilt Can Be Detected In Summer Months

Summer months are the best time to identify oak wilt in trees near your home or lake cabin, according to plant pathologists at the University of Minnesota. Diseased oak trees are distinct from healthy trees with green foliage. Most species and varieties of oak, but especially red oaks, are susceptible.

Oak wilt is caused by a fungus which develops in the outer sapwood of trees and causes blockages to develop in the vessels that conduct water and nutrients from the roots to the leaves. As the tree's water supply is cut, the tree wilts.

The first symptom in red oaks is wilting leaves near the top of the tree. These turn tan or brown starting from the leaf edge progressing to the leaf stem. The tree wilts completely within a few weeks after the brown leaves appear while the outer sapwood discolors to brown or black. Red oaks do not recover once infected.

Infected leaves of the white oak and bur oak turn brown or resemble fall coloration. Infection usually occurs in scattered branches of the crown. These trees may die within one year or more.

The oak wilt fungus in tree branches dies a few weeks after the tree dies. But the fungus remains alive for some time in the trunk and root system. Oak roots form natural grafts. Once the fungus enters a tree it can spread to nearby trees through root grafts.

Fungus can also spread by spore transmission. Fungus spores stick to an insect's body and can be carried to other trees. Avoid pruning oak trees as open wounds may attract disease carrying insects. If a tree is damaged, you should apply a wood dressing or wood paint.

Control of oak wilt must stop the fungus spread through root grafts by either mechanically trenching around the infected trees or by using a chemical SMDC (Vapam). Over 90 per cent of diseased trees are invaded through root grafts.

All potential root grafts must be disrupted if the spread of the fungus is to be stopped. A 36 to 40 inch trench between diseased and healthy trees disrupts root grafts between adjacent trees. The other method of breaking root grafts is to chemically kill a zone of roots by using the soil fumigant Vapam as directed.

Second control technique is aimed at preventing spore pad formation on diseased trees. All oak species are susceptible to infection by insect disseminated spores in May and the first half of June. If the moisture content of the wood just under the bark is too low, the fungus can not produce spore pads. Any treatment such as mechanical girdling of the tree trunk that hastens the drying of wood tissue may prevent spore formation.

Information on oak wilt and the use and storage of oak wood from diseased trees is available from your local county extension service office. Ask for extension folder 310, "Oak Wilt."

Dutch Elm Disease Is Described

During these summer months remember to keep a daily check on elm trees to discover any early symptoms of Dutch elm disease.

"The most obvious sign of Dutch elm disease is leaves that are beginning to wilt and droop downward," explains Asimina Gkinis, extension plant pathologist from the University of Minnesota. "At first, the leaves turn dull green, then yellow. As the disease progresses, the leaves curl upwards, turn brown and dry out."

Another method of recognizing the disease is by taking a live branch with yellowing leaves from the tree and peeling back the bark. If Dutch elm disease is the problem, there should be the characteristic brown streaking in the wood under the bark compared to the creamy color typical of healthy trees.

The development of Dutch elm symptoms depends upon how a tree has been infected. "If the leaves on larger elm branches suddenly begin to wilt and droop downward in late May or early June, then the disease has been carried over from last year," Gkinis said. "It's possible that the tree will die in two or three weeks and all you can do is remove the tree."

"However, if small branches in the crown of the tree show Dutch elm symptoms, it indicates a new beetle infection," according to Gkinis. The disease may be stopped at this state by pruning the infected branches down to the trunk of the tree.

Dutch elm disease can also be passed to healthy elms through root graft transmission. If a health elm is close to where a diseased tree has been left standing, it's possible that the healthy elm will be infected through its root system. If this happens, the leaves on the smaller, lower branches of the tree usually begin to wilt and change color first.

"You can't save a tree showing these symptoms," Gkinis said, "because the disease progresses so fast from the roots to the trunk of the tree. If any healthy elms are located 40 feet or less from a diseased tree, a chemical or mechanical barrier should be installed to stop root graft transmission of the disease."

Gkinis believes the best way to control the spread of the disease is for homeowners to be alert for such Dutch elm disease symptoms as wilting leaves and browning of the sapwood, to allow for early detection and removal of diseased elms.

Wildflowers Class Set At Outdoor Center

Northcountry Wildflowers class is being offered at the Bemidji state university Bald Eagle outdoor learning center June 29 to July 1. The class will deal with identifying country wildlflowers and plants.

The one-credit class will be taught by John Mathison, naturalist for the U.S. forest service on the Chippewa national forest. He has had many years of experience in photographing and identifying wild plants in northern Minnesota.

Basic elements of plant identification will be stressed along with ecological relationships and adaptations. All instruction will be in the field setting with visits to an orchid bog, deciduous and coniferous forests, wetlands and meadows.

Following editorial is from the Christian Science Monitor:

With gasoline stocks in reduced supply it is extremely important that the American people not succumb to panic buying. A spirit of restraint and neighborly concern can help the United States cope with the current oil squeeze without undue hardship on anyone. Not only California is taking steps to deal with the long lones at service stations. Massachusetts and other states also are laying emergency plans for equitable distribution of supplies to motorists in the face of a 17 per cent cutback in gasoline allocations nationwide.

The problem seems to be one of convincing Americans that a shortage actually exists. We are not insensitive to the poor credibility which oil companies have brought on themselves by past and some present practices. Certainly it is difficult to sort out what the companies are or are not doing and a strong public and government vigil is in order. But this should not invite the automatic, unsubstantiated charge that the oil firms are deliberately withholding supplies in expectation of higher prices.

The shortage is not a bogus one. For one thing, American motorists are not curbing their driving habits and, nationwide, consumption is running four per cent higher than the first quarter of 1978. Californians, it ought to be added, have cavalierly boosted their consumption more than seven per cent — hardly an exemplary course in what should be energy-conscious times.

Second, oil production is down. The US is unable to satisfy the growing and gluttonous demand for oil because the OPEC cartel is unwilling to boost its output. Iran is now producing two million barrels a day less oil than before the revolution and Saudi Arabia, the major OPEN producer, refuses to make up the shortfall — partly because it a wants to keep prices high and partly because of its strained relations with the U.S.

Gasoline is not the major problem for Americans, however enticing the spring season. Heating oil is. Unable to obtain enough crude, the oil companies must build up stocks from available supplies and therefore refine less gasoline. If the American people, especially those in the Midwest and Northeast, want to be warm next winter, they must put up with the inconvenience of less gasoline.

Need this be a burden? We think not if the public is sensible. Americans are not being asked to cut out necessities or even most luxuries but simply to eliminate wasteful consumption. It is hard to imagine that most motorists could not find ways to trim gas use by 10 to 15 per cent, or at least restrain their yen for driving even more. And surely Americans have enough sense of fair play to resist the insidious contagion of panic and to be helpful to neighbors and friends at a time of shared national need.

Working our way out of the energy problem will take time and effort. More than that, it will take selflessness. It will be an opportunity to show that courtesy and generosity are a larger part of the American character than greed.

Good Marks For Testing

Following editorial is from the St. Cloud Times:

It's time to hand out a report card on the one program state education officials use to evaluate how well students learns their lessons.

First, we give an "A" for effort on the SELO guidelines in 13 subject areas for Minnesota districts. These guidelines come with tests that help determine whether a student has mastered certain basic skills within a subject. They also tell teachers how well they have succeeded in helping students understand what they have been trying to teach. The guidelines advise teachers at what levels certain students should be at in mastering skills in each grade.

And the guidelines give educators and parents a means of comparing how students measure up to students in other parts of the state, region and nation.

The program also deserves an "A" for its administration of the guildelines. They are not mandatory. That is good. If the school district prefers another test or program to determine a competency rating, that should be up to local district officials.

Because the program is a set of guidelines, no rigid penalties result, as in some states with strict "competency tests." Failure to pass one of these tests often means the difference between a student continuing on to the next grade level or being retained.

We hope that our area school districts take advantage of the opportunity to administer these SELO tests and report to the public how area students compare with those in other areas.

We are confident most of our students would more than measure up to other areas' students on state, regional or national scales.

But we cannot give straight A's on this program. In fact, there's an "F", in language arts. Why such a harsh mark? Because "SELO" stands for some essential learner outcomes." What a bureaucratic massacre of the language! How cloudy a definition for "finding out what a student knows." Perhaps the people who wrote up this program should have taken pundit Edwin Newman's advice and "kept a civil tongue."

Rumors Worse Than Facts

Following editorial is from the Detroit Lakes Tribune:

Newspapers hear many rumors and telephone tips, and usually appreciate them.

But once in a while a telephone tip is irritating, and there was one Thursday morning.

The lady calling was irate, and dead wrong.

"Some kids really wrecked a rest room at the new Junior High building," she said. "And the school is just covering up to save the big shots' kids."

She went on in some detail describing the damage done during the noon hour Wednesday, and about the dim future for the Detroit Lakes school system.

A reporter was sent to the school immediately, looked around and could find no damage.

When he asked school authorities, they told him a few students were unruly during lunch hour Wednesday, and threw some food around. Students cleaned it up.

He added that about a month ago, a wash basin was broken, but that it wasn't known whether it was deliberate vandalism or an accident.

Some unruly actions are the norm for the last few days of school, as students express their exuberance. Throwing food certainly isn't recommended, but it is a far cry from doing extensive damage to a building.

A concern here is that a person who would report rumor as absolute fact, as the lady did, will go around spreading the same story as fact to anyone who will listen.

Newspapers do not print rumors, but they do investigate them. If proved true, they are no longer rumors, but news stories, and are printed as such. If proved false, they are forgotten as quickly as possible.

The telephone caller hung up when asked her name. Would that everyone could 'hang up' on rumor mongering.

To Succeed—Serve!

Following comments are by Howard E. Kerschner in the Northwood Idea published at Midland, Mich.:

Fortunately, very fortunately, in order to succeed in a free market economy, one must serve his fellows. If one wishes to earn a profit, he must find some way of making and distributing goods or rendernng services that are beneficial to his fellows. In return for helping others, he himself prospers.

Most people do not properly understand the profit system. They look upon it as a means of holding back something from labor or overcharging consumers. Actually, it is neither. It is something taken out of costs. When one produces better or cheaper merchandise, he is benefitting all who use them. Those who invented and produced harvesting machinery became millionaires, but their combined wealth would not be a drop in the bucket in comparison with the benefits accruing to all the people as a result of harvesting machinery.

A Threat to Our Free Press?

Is a current trend within the newspaper industry dangerous to the freedom of the press as we've known it in America? Does that trend threaten to limit our free-wheeling exchange of ideas?

These are major questions we've been exploring this week in hearings before the Senate's Small Business Committee on which I serve. We're discussing the increasing number of papers owned by newspaper chains and the decreasing number of family-owned, independent daily newspapers.

The figures are alarming. By one count, only 691 of the 1,759 daily papers in the United States remain outside chain ownership. Since 1973, chains have purchased dailies at the rate of 55 each year. Weekly papers face similar problems.

This trend concerns me for two reasons: As more newspapers pass from local control and individual ownership and into the hands of centralized groups, the number of views and perceptions heard by the American public is potentially cut. The flow of information is controlled by an ever-decreasing few.

Secondly, consider the local, independent owner who has lived in a community, raised his children there, and depended on the economic health of that community for his livelihood. He cares about the town, and the stamp of caring he places on his town's newspaper often makes it a better and more unique product than one put out by a fellow who's simply serving as the local manager for a chain ownership with headquarters located out of the community.

Reasons for the trend toward chain ownership are easy to find: They're called financial. Inheritance taxes are crippling. Few families are able to afford what they must pay if they want to retain ownership. However, they can usually profit from sale to a chain.

The family newspaperman finds himself in much the same dilemma faced by the family farmer: Inheritance taxes are based on his property's market value, the amount a chain or corporation would probably pay. Unfortunately, this value is usually totally out of line with the Property's book value.

One Minnesota newspaperman told me the story of an outstate daily owner, who, over the years, managed to save $1,000,000, believing that would surely be enough to pay inheritance taxes. It wasn't. The paper is now under chain ownership.

Another editor says he's been told his paper now has a market value of over $1½ million. He knows his actual earnings in no way justify that kind of value. Yet, that's the amount his family will pay taxes on after his death if they want to keep the paper.

Two plans are presently being discussed in Congress to halt the trend: One would limit the number of papers that can be owned by a chain. Another would allow special tax provisions for newspapers.

Both plans have drawbacks. Both would single out the press and pass legislation specially designed for newspapers alone. Some see that as jeopardizing a free and independent press.

An eventual solution may be to revamp inheritance tax laws in general so that all small businesses — be they family farms, family newspapers, or whatever — would have estate taxes based on operating profits of the property, not an artifically high market values.

As I said, the present trend concerns me deeply. I've often thought that the Holocaust, which occurred in Nazi Germany and from which only some of my family escaped, might have been avoided...if Germany had had a free press such as exists in this country with reporters and editors ready and willing to probe into governmental workings.

I fear any trend that blocks access into the free marketplace of ideas.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

The increasing controversy over the control and treatment for Dutch elm disease shifts the responsibility for the death of American elms from the elm bark beetle, which spreads the fungus, to humans who would rather protect their scientific citadels than save trees.

In the past two seasons, thousands upon thousands of elms in the Twin Cities area have been lost needlessly while authorities argued the relative merits of one treatment over the other, instead of using the weapons at hand to the optimum while researchers continue to work to develop a better control for this cancer of the plant world. Where would mankind be in the field of medicine had people neglected to use new developments as they came along and instead had done nothing while waiting for the ultimate perfect cure?

Over the past eight years in Canada and four years in the United States, Lignasan BLP has been injected into over 50,000 mature elms and has proved to be effective in the control of Dutch elm disease when it is used on healthy trees as a preventive measure. In Minnesota, however, many trees were not given the advantage of this treatment, because too much time was lost arguing the effective dosage rate. A second product, Arbotect, has been on the market for two years. It, too, appears to be effective when used according to label directions. But once again the "experts" are raising clouds of questions and doubt by insisting that if Arbotect is used at three times the label dose, treatment can be done every third year and the tree will be protected for that length of time. In our opinion—and we at Elm Research Institute are responsible for most of the research in this field — that announcement is premature since the product has been on the market only two years, thereby making the accumulation of viable data on a three-year basis impossible.

Another facet of the problem is expense. In the case of the average tree (six feet in circumference) at three times the label dosage, the expense of treatment with Arbotect is enormous — as high as $70 for chemical alone — certainly beyond the range of what homeowners and municipalities can afford to pay. On the other hand, when Lignasan BLP is used according to label recommendations, the most of chemical can be estimated at a maximum of $15 for the average tree.

We believe we must include the reminder that Elm Research Institute, as a non-profit organization, has no financial interest whatsoever in any particular chemical. Our sole concern is to encourage treatment of the greatest number of trees. We are afraid, however, that the use of Arbotect at triple dosage would substantially reduce the number of trees treated and, should the time span fail to live up to the expectations of the experts, the results could bring about the collapse of treatment programs everywhere.

Isn't it time we stopped carping and shadowing the issue with scientific jargon and supposition and begin to use the tools at hand to protect trees?

Sincerely,
Elm Research Institute
John P. Hansel
Executive Director

There are over 40 million power lawn mowers in the U.S. and new ones are being bought at the rate of 6 million per year. Each year these cutting machines injure more than 60,000 persons who are treated in hospital emergency rooms. In many instances, these injuries could be prevented if users followed safe operating practices.

USDA Monitors Retailers Use Of Food Stamps

Only 11 out of more than 4,000 Minnesota retailers currently authorized to redeem food stamps have been found guilty of misusing the program during the first seven months of fiscal year 1979 according to a report released recently by the U.S. department of agriculture (USDA).

According to Len Mart, chief of the coupon use and redemption section of the USDA's midwest region's food and nutrition service (FNS), this figure indicates Minnesota retailers are generally abiding by the guidelines of the federally-funded program that is designed to provide low-income or needy families with additional assistance to purchase food for a well-balanced diet.

USDA monitors a retailer's use of the food stamp program by periodic checks designed to insure that the retailer is in compliance with federal regulations. Another effective method of policing a retailer's participation in the program comes from reports from private citizens who believe they have seen an illegal food stamp transaction.

Mart indicates that the most frequent violation is the acceptance of food stamps for the purchase of ineligible items. These include such items as paper products, cigarettes, household cleaning products and alcoholic beverages.

Once a retailer has been investigated and found guilty of violating program regulations, he is subject to disqualification from accepting food stamps for a period ranging from 30 days to 3 years. In cases where the disqualification of a store would cause unusual hardships on food stamp recipients and the violations occurred after January 1, a civil money penalty may be imposed.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Have you ever stopped to consider that runaway regulations threaten much more than your pocketbook — that they could also wipe out America's technological leadership, lower your standard of living and actually lead to a loss of life? Sound exaggerated? Believe me, it's not; it's already happening.

To get a clearer picture of just why this is true, consider how excessive regulations have restricted our ability to compete in international trade. Last year, the United States — the country we like to believe is the leader of the free world — experienced: The lowest rate of productivity increase in the industrialized west; the second lowest rate of investment (through the second quarter); the lowest number of patents issued in any year since 1964; a currency whose value was rapidly declining, and a rate of inflation which was rapidly climbing. And all that, I might venture, was more than a coincidence.

What we've been witnessing is no less than an attack on the very essence of progress. As the magazine, Nation's Business, recently noted: "If innovation had stopped ten years ago, we'd be without small computers, home smoke detectors, wide-body jets, and synthetic heart valves.

"Even with those developments and others more esoteric, U.S. innovation during the past decade has lagged." Indeed it has.

The sad, but undeniable fact is this: Each year, we are transferring more and more of our national wealth and best intellectual talent from the pursuit of progress to the satisfaction of regulatory requirements. Money being spent on research and development today is lower in real dollars than it was 10 years ago. And now, this sustained smothering of invention is bearing a bitter fruit.

Listen to the words of Dr. Ivar Giaever, a Nobel laureate in physics, who says: "The SST is French and British, the fast breeder reactor is French and Russian and the cassettes we listen to are Japanese. It's no wonder we're all worried."

Unfortunately, that's just the beginning. America's technological leadership has either been already overtaken, or is being severely challenged in many other areas: in optics, election microscopes and stainless steel by the Japanese, in man-made fibers by Korea and Taiwan, and in the development of nuclear energy by Sweden, France and West Germany.

And consider what's happening in two areas traditionally considered our strongest — broadcasting and chemical. Syndicated writer Allen Brownfeld recently reported that while the sale of video tape recorders in the United States doubled and approached $1 billion in 1978... "Not one of the 12 machines sold in the U.S. was made in the U.S. even though the American broadcast industry pioneered the device. They are produced in Japan, even those trademarked RCA, GE, Zenith, Magnavox and Sylvania.

"In the chemical field, the three largest chemical companies in West Germany last year introduced more new products than the five largest chemical companies in the U.S. This is the first time that has happened since World War II."

Nation's Business recently featured a special report analyzing the dilemma in which the chemical industry finds itself.

On the one hand, we want the industry to develop new products like: chemical pesticides to control weeds and insects that destroy food crops; synthetic fibers specially designed to keep us warm; pharmaceuticals to improve and prolong life; and plastics for example, in auto grilles, dashboards and body parts to reduce weight and increase gasoline mileage. On the other hand, the Congress has passed so many laws limiting chemical exposure in the environment, workplace and marketplace — the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act, the Clean Air Act, the Federal Water Pollution Control Act and the Toxic Substances Control Act — and the industry must spend so much money complying with regulations from the Environmental Protection Agency, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, and the Consumer Product Safety Commission, that it finds its ability to compete in world markets has been severely eroded.

The same is true for pharmaceutical companies. Gaining FDA approval for a drug product that has already been exhaustively tested for safety is now so difficult, so costly, that many firms simply give up and establish manufacturing units abroad. They way they don't lose their foreign sales. Buf what about the health of the American citizen who might be gravely ill, but who does not have the money to travel overseas to be treated? Many doctors genuinely doubt that if submitted today, penicillin, digitalis, and insulin could be approved by the FDA and sold to the American public.

The problem of runaway regulations now affects our lives in almost every imaginable way. It is much too serious a problem to be left to the regulators alone. In fact, the real question now is, who is going to regulate the regulators?

Peace Corps To Recruit June 29 At Crookston

The Peace Corps will conduct a seven community Minnesota recruitment campaign the week of June 24. Peace Corps recruiters hope to interest persons for overseas programs beginning this summer and fall.

Agricultural volunteers are needed with 4-H, livestock, crops, beekeeping, artificial insemination, and farm equipment maintenance skills. Persons with carpentry, masonry, plumbing, drafting, machine and electrical skills are also needed.

Currently Peace Corps has over 7,000 volunteers working in 64 developing countries in Latin America, Asia and Africa. The minimum age for joining Peace Corps is 18, however, few under age 20 qualify. There is no upper age limit. The average age of Peace Corps volunteers today is 27, while more than 300 volunteers now serving are over 50 years of age. Volunteers must be U.S. citizens. Volunteer motivation is an important factor in the selection of volunteers because of different living conditions, cultural differences and the nature of Peace Corps service.

Travel, living and health care expenses are provided by the Peace Corps. A vacation allowance is also provided as well as a readjustment allowance of $3,000 after 20 months of service. Living conditions vary widely depending upon the country program and volunteer site. Peace Corps provides three months of language, cross-cultural and technical training.

Peace Corps recruiters will be at the Best Western motel in Crookston from 1 to 9 p.m. on Friday, June 29.

Fire, Rescue School Set In Fergus Falls

Over 400 firefighters and rescue personnel are expected to attend the sectional fire and rescue school to be held on June 16 and 17 at the junior high school in Fergus Falls.

Hosting the school will be Ken Hovland, chief of the Fergus Falls fire department.

The school is designed to train new firefighters and rescue personnel in the latest professional techniques, and to upgrade experienced participants in skills needed to cope with the hazards of modern day firefighting and rescue.

Scheduled events include a fire scene investigation seminar conducted by the office of the state fire marshall, a general firefighting section including training on "live burns," a presentation on fireground hydraulics for fire pump operators, and a demonstration of search and rescue techniques.

A special interest section will focus on basic forest firefighting, agricultural chemicals, wood stove installation and chimney fires, and fire detectors and alarms. Rescue section participants will receive credit for recertification for the national registry of emergency medical technicians.

Instructors from Alexandria, Fergus Falls, Detroit Lakes, Perham, Park Rapids and the adult unit of the Division of vocational-technical education will be on the scene.

The school is open to all interested persons. Participants should bring protective clothing.

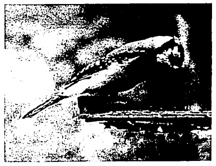
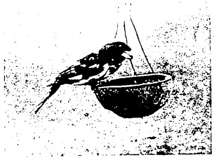
HAIRY WOODPECKER, marked closely like the smaller downy woodpecker, makes one of many visits to the suet feeder at the H. R. Achenbach yard.

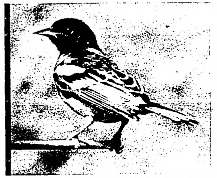


DOMINATING PRESENCE in the H. R. Achenbach yard is that of the bluejays. The large and colorful birds take over the feeders when they decide to eat and add flashes of color as they fly from tree to feeder and back.

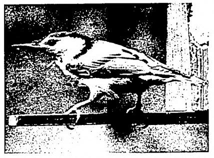


COCONUT SHELLS filled with sunflower seeds and screenings from the St. Hilaire elevator are favorite feeding sites for birds like the rose-breasted grosbeak pictured here in the Achenbach yard.

WET AND RUFFLED from an early morning bath, this nuthatch uses a sunny root ledge at the Achenbach home to dry itself. A few seconds later it was at a nearby feeder for a breakfast of suet.



ALWAYS ALERT, birds like this oriole visiting the feeders at the H. R. Achenbach yard are prepared to take flight at the slightest hint of danger. Although familiar with their surroundings, they seem suspicious of strangers — especially those with camera equipment.



FLEETING VISITOR at the suet feeder in the H. R. Achenbach yard is this nuthatch. The little birds dart in for a quick beak-full or two and then nervously fly away.

NESTING MATERIAL in the form of binder twine cut in lengths and unraveled is provided for orioles and other birds visiting the Achenbach yard. This female oriole is busy making her selection.

SYRUP AND WATER mixture is a favorite of birds visiting the H. R. Achenbach yard in the Sherwood forest addition. This male Baltimore oriole is one of seemingly hundreds which populate the area.

around here, too."

Not only birds visit the Achenbach yard. Also observed have been beaver, mink, fox, deer, raccoon, woodchucks, squirrels, chipmunks and a number of other animals. One winter a pine marten moved in for a few days. The member of the weasel family had no difficulty at all catching squirrels in the treetops. "He was like greased lightning," Achenbach said. "There was no contest."

Achenbach comes by his interest in wildlife naturally. A native of Bemidji, he has a bachelor of science degree in zoology and master's degree in geology. He worked for the federal fish and wildlife service briefly before going to work in the bureau of narcotics. He later taught school at Karlstad for four years before going to dental school. He has practiced dentristry in Thief River Falls since 1959.

Bird feeders might be interested in the recipe for suet which Achenbach uses to stuff into holes in his feeder. It consists of four pounds of ground suet, one pound of cornmeal, one pound of Farina cereal, a little oatmeal and a pint of brown syrup to help make a dough of the mixture. Many species of birds seem attracted to it.

All of Achenbach's efforts have been rewarded with visits by many birds not commonly seen in this area as well as a profusion of common species. He listed 136 species seen on his property as regular or fleeting visitors. A listing of the species is as follows:

Grasshopper Sparrow, Slate-colored Junco, Tree Sparrow, Chipping Sparrow, Field Sparrow, Harris's Sparrow, White crowned sparrow, Fox sparrow, Swamp sparrow, Song sparrow, White-throated sparrow, Snow bunting, Horned Grebe, Cared Grebe, Pied-billed Grebe and Black-crowned Night Heron;

Virginia Rail, Sora Rail, Yellow Rail, Coot, Killdeer, Woodcock, Spotted Sandpipe, Solitary Sandpipe, Lesser Yellow-legs, Least Sandpiper, Avocet, Herring Gull, Ring-billed Gull, Franklins Gull, Common Tern, Black Tern, Mourning Dove, Yellow-billed Cuckoo, Screech Owl and Great Horned Owl;

Also Double-crested Cormorant, Great Blue Heron, American Egret, American Bittern, Least Bittern, Canada Goose, Mallard, Black Duck, Pintail, Green-winged Teal, Blue-winged Teal, Wood duck, Lesser Scarp, American Golden-Eye, American Merganser, Sharp-skinned Hawk, Marsh Hawk, Osprey, Sparrow Hawk and Ruffed Grouse;

MN Agriculture Women Have May Meeting

May meeting of the Minnesota Women for Agriculture, Inc. was held at the Town and Country Cafe in Fertile.

Sam Bigger, Polk county agent, was guest speaker and also showed a film on the safe use of anhydrous ammonia. Caution is advised in the use of this potent fertilizer. The following safety precautions should be taken by persons working with anhydrous ammonia:

—Wear properly fitting safety goggles.

—Carry a plastic squeeze bottle of water in a shirt pocket to flush eyes immediately if an accident occurs.

—Have a 5-gallon container of fresh water on your equipment for further flushing.

—Carefully check all hose fittings and connections on equipment each day. Replace when necessary.

—Thoroughly understand how to operate all equipment prior to use.

A committee consisting of Betty Flom (chairwoman) of Fertile, Judi Harms of Rice and Mrs. John Wieland of Euclid was appointed to make plans for dividing the membership into geographical areas for the purpose of electing directors from the various areas.

Plans were discussed for possible spring and fall forums entitled "Business for Rural Women". These sessions will cover estate planning, local government and landscaping.

June meeting for area Minnesota Women for Agriculture members will be held at the new headquarters for the wheat growers association in Red Lake Falls Friday, June 22. It will begin at noon with a potluck luncheon.

UMC One-Week Food Occupation Workshop Set

Food occupation workship will be taking place on the University of Minnesota — Crookston (UMC) campus June 18-22. The program will cover five of the eight areas required by the state for a food operator's license. It will be held in Dowell hall rooms 128, 207 and 212.

The workshop is designed for use toward vocational licensing or relicensing of secondary food occupation teachers, as well as food service supervisors, food and beverage managers and owners and operators of restaurant and hotel enterprises. Class sessions will focus on quality food purchasing and accounting; bacteriology, and food sanitation; design, layout and selection of equipment; operation of food service equipment; and management of food services.

Will you have peace of mind at thunderstorm time?

Production Credit Association
Farming is everybody's bread & butter.

Everyone who's ever planted a crop knows the worry that comes when storm clouds roll in. And everyone who's had good insurance protection knows the peace of mind good coverage can bring.

Farmers who carry crop hail insurance through Production Credit Association have peace of mind plus. They know that when they have a claim their PCA representative will have an interest in seeing that they receive a fair settlement.

PCA members have a choice of policies, standard or deductible. Rates are realistic, based on probability of hail in your area.

Take away risk, worry and tension with crop hail insurance available from PCA. Then you can enjoy summer weather and have peace of mind at thunderstorm time.

Although it doesn't have any frills, the new Northland community college baseball diamond would be a fine place to watch Thief River Falls American Legion baseball games this summer. All American Legion games, along with the Babe Ruth games for 13-15-year-olds, were scheduled to be played at Northland this summer while work was done on the fairgrounds diamond. Now the work is delayed and site of Thief River Falls home games is uncertain at this point.

Northland's diamond, located behind the school and across from the tennis courts, features a vastly improved playing field over the fairgrounds. Dugouts and fencing down the right field and left field foul lines are not yet in place, but once those are erected it'll be as fine a facility as there is in the area.

LHS Tennis Records

Outstanding 1979 season enjoyed by the Region 8AA champion Lincoln high school tennis team featured some pretty impressive individual match records by the Prowlers who were 10-1 in dual meet competition while winning three triangular outings and a quadrangular event. They also shared second place in an eight-team tournament at Hibbing and finished third in an eight-team event at St. Cloud.

Thief River Falls' familiar line-up, which carried the Prowlers into the Class AA state quarterfinals where they lost to eventual state tournament runner up Virginia 3-2, featured Bill Jury, Mitch Rustad and Bill Holmes in singles; Bill Michalek and Tom Bjorkman, along with Mark Collins and Mark Lundin in doubles. Those seven players combined to win 176 matches while losing only 50.

Jury finished 32-3, Rustad 34-4, Holmes 26-4, Michalek 24-10, Bjorkman 24-11 and both Collins and Lundin 18-9. The records of Jury, Rustad and Holmes included one doubles match apiece while Michalek and Bjorkman both played three times in singles.

Two of Rustad's four losses came against Jury in Sub Region 4 and Region 8AA tournament plpay.

Softball Predictions

Admittedly a portion of the season has already passed — especially in men's slow pitch where the 32 teams have already played three weeks of the 1979 season — but it took us a while to round up enough information to accurately (hopefully) predict the outcome of the Thief River Falls softball races this summer in men's slow pitch, women's slow pitch and men's fast pitch play.

Predicted order of finish in the four divisions of men's slow pitch softball:

Division I — Rusty Nail Raiders; TRF Merchants; Tony Dorn, Inc.; Furuseth-Nelson, Inc.; Hartz; Swenson Plumbing & Heating, Inc.; Hobo Haus; Wagon Wheel; Arnold Realty.

Division II — St. Hilaire Bears; The Get-A-Way; Bridgeman's; Home Lumber; First Federal Savings & Loan Association; Hamms-Pizza Hut; Popplers-Action Realty; Dallmann Athletic, Inc.

Division III — Phase II; Arctic IWA; Great Northwest Agency, Inc.; Consumer's Co-op Association; Schumacher's Tireland; McDonald's; First Northwestern Insurance Agency; The Club.

Division IV — Jean Junction; Wilson Brothers Co.; Tip & Ring; TRF Aggies; Smith & Holthusen; Kmart; Lon's Restaurant & Pub.

Predicted finish in women's slow pitch softball — Pizza Hut; St. Hilaire Saints; Red Lake Falls; Schmidt Stealers; First Federal Savings & Loan Association; Farmer's Co-op Stingers; Ridge Runners; Roseau Transport; Credit Bureau; Great Northwest Agency; Hydra-Mac; Ekeren Drug; Rusty Nail; Falls Clinic; Healthy Hustlers; J & B Drug.

In men's fast pitch softball it'll probably be North Star Transport; Dallmann Athletic, Inc.; Coca-Cola; Action Realty; Radio Shack; Schmidts; Malvies.

Elks Out-Score EGF Blue 10-9 On Thursday

A 4-0 lead didn't stand up, but the Thief River Falls Elks came back to beat the East Grand Forks Blue 10-9 Thursday in Babe Ruth baseball for 13-15-year-olds.

Rick Langlie's two-run triple in the fifth inning tied the see-saw game 7-7, and Langlie gave Thief River Falls a go-ahead run when he was awarded home on a balk.

East Grand Forks tied it 8-8 in the top of the sixth, but in the bottom of the inning, Thief River Falls' Rob Blankenfeld, who was 3-for-3, walked once and scored four runs, singled to begin a three-run inning for the Elks. Greg Harder produced a run with a sacrifice fly and Tim Bergland drove in what proved to be the winning run with a single.

Mark Harder, the third Thief River Falls pitcher used in the error-free game, picked up the win. The Elks out-hit the visiting Blue squad 9-3.

Thief River Falls, 2-0 for the year, was scheduled to play a 1 p.m. game at Crookston today (Monday).

A TRF Merchants game at Roseau was rained out Wednesday. The 13-year-olds will be at Crookston Wednesday at 1 p.m.

Last Week To Apply For 1979 Moose License

Minnesota sportsmen who want to hunt moose in the state this fall have less than one week to get their applications for the license drawing in to the Department of Natural Resources.

Applications for the computerised drawing that will select 685 hunting parties must be postmarked or delivered to the DNR license Center at 625 North Robert Street no later than Fri., June 15.

A hunting party comprises four persons, allowing a maximum of 2,740 persons to take part in this season's hunt. The license fee is $100 per party.

Application blanks and instructions showing the various hunting zones can be obtained from county auditors and most license agents. They are also available at various DNR offices throughout the state and from the license center in St. Paul.

NCC Softball Team BA Is .232 In 1979

Five members of the 1979 Northland community college women's softball team finished the season with a batting average above the .300 level, but the Northwomen managed to hit only .232 as a team during a brief 3-5 season that included a pair of forfeit wins over Northwest Division champion Brainerd.

Marilyn Anderson led the Northland offensive figures with a .375 batting average, collecting a team-high six hits in 16 at-bats. Also above .300 were Bev Horachek .364; Kari Melvie .333; Jane Daniels .313; and Chris Charlebois .313.

However, there was a big drop in production after that point as Jean Dziengel hit .214; Cheryl Larson .167; Vernell Grafstrom .125; Karen Sparby, .118; and Tami Sorenson .100, with Arlene Knutson and Julie Buresh failing to get a hit.

Northland collected just four extra-base hits this spring — doubles by Daniels, Charlebois and Sparby and a triple by Daniels.

Defensively the Northwomen had problems as they committed 40 errors in six games.

A HIGH THROW from Roseau catcher Lonnie Vatnsdal allowed Thief River Falls base runner Monty Peterson to steal second base in the third inning of Friday's season-opening American Legion baseball game played on the Northland community college diamond. Roseau second baseman Jim Pelowski took the throw as shortstop Brandon Shank looked on. Thief River Falls won the Northwest League contest 3-1.

Gutterud Pitches 2-Hitter In 3-1 Win Over Roseau

What appears on the surface to be a woefully thin Thief River Falls pitching staff came through in impressive fashion Friday as Kelly Gutterud tossed a two-hitter in a 3-1 season-opening Northwest League American Legion baseball victory over Roseau.

Gutterud, who appeared in just three games as a pitcher in high school baseball this spring but who will apparently be the "ace" of the Legion staff, overcame first inning control problems when he walked two and threw two wild pitches to give Roseau its only run, to limit the visitors to just a pair of fourth inning hits — one of which was a bunt. He walked six and struck out nine.

"Kelly pitched really well," confirmed Terry Sullivan who made a winning debut as Thief River Falls coach. Sullivan figures his pitching staff will be a strong point of the ball club if he can persuade Lincoln high school standout Scott Sabo to join the squad when he returns from a vacation trip. Monty Peterson, one of four Middle River imports in Friday's line-up, is also expected to be a strong pitcher here after an outstanding spring high school campaign.

He played center field in the opener. "If we can get Sabo back, we should have a good pitching staff," said Sullivan.

But that pitching staff, with Sabo gone and Peterson an unknown quality here, looked anything but strong at the start Friday when Gutterud walked Chip Ammerman and Brandon Shank to start the game, then threw two wild pitches to score Ammerman and send Shank to third. However, facing the heart of the Roseau batting order — number 3-4-5 hitters Aaron Broten, Joe Magnusson and Mark Huglen —, Gutterud responded with three straight strike-outs to set the stage for things to come.

With Huglen equally as effective — he struck out 13 of the first 19 batters he faced, the game developed into a fine pitching duel until Thief River Falls struck for three runs with two out in the bottom of the sixth.

After a pair of ground-outs to Broten at third to start of the sixth, Thief River Falls gained life when Jeff Ulrich walked and stole second. Tom Drury reached base and Ulrich moved to third when Broten bobbled Drury's ground ball for an error.

Gutterud then came through with a well-hit double to center field gap for two runs. He scored when Dave Kays singled through the right side of the infield.

Roseau, after leaving runners on second and third in both the fourth and sixth innings, lost another scoring opportunity in the seventh when Ammerman hit into a pitcher-to-second-to-first game-ending double play.

Thief River Falls returns to Northwest League play Tuesday against Warroad. The 7 p.m. game is scheduled to be played at the fairgrounds diamond. The opener was played on the Northland community college field.

Grabowska Pitches Two Shutouts In Slow Pitch

Don Grabowska pitched a pair of shutouts Wednesday as the TRF Merchants swept a Division I Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association doubleheader.

Grabowska limited Tony Dorn, Inc. to five hits in a 7-0 first game victory that featured a home run by Craig Race and eight Tony Dorn, Inc. errors. Furuseth-Nelson, Inc. managed just four hits off Grabowska as the TRF Merchants took the second half of their twinbill 3-0 to keep pace with the Division I-leading Rusty Nail Raiders who out-scored Wagon Wheel 18-14.

Hobo Haus split a pair of one-run Monday games, losing to Furuseth-Nelson, Inc. 11-10 but beating Wagon Wheel 3-2.

Arnold Realty, after opening the season with six straight losses, won a pair of games Friday, handing Tony Dorn, Inc. its second straight shutout loss, 4-0, and knocking off Swenson Plumbing & Heating, Inc. 10-8. Terry Johnson pitched a three-hitter in the first game while Rick Johnson and Glen Kalsness went 3-for-4 at the plate in the nightcap.

Division II

Bridgeman's beat Home Lumber 5-3 Thursday and the St. Hilaire Bears downed The Get-A-Way 16-10 Friday to remain virtually tied for the division II lead. Mark Huot hit an inside-the-park home run for the Bears who played errorless ball while The Get-A-Way committed six miscues.

Previously winless Dallmann Athletic, Inc humiliated Hamms-Pizza Hut 14-0 but then lost to Popplers-Action Realty 8-3 Thursday.

First Federal Savings & Loan Association kept pace with the leaders by beating Home Lumber 14-4 Friday.

Division III

Last unbeaten ball club in the 32-team slow pitch softball association, Arctic IWA, beat First Northwestern Insurance Agency 11-6 Wednesday and out-scored Consumer's Co-op Association 17-13 Thursday when Jeff Johnson and Jeff Joppru collected four hits apiece.

Rod Peterson homered as Schumacher's Tireland edged The Club 15-13 to complete a Thursday doubleheader sweep that began with a 13-10 extra inning decision over Consumer's Co-op Association.

Phase II doubled First Northwestern Insurance Agency 10-5 Wednesday.

Division IV

Jean Junction picked up a pair of Friday night Division IV wins, dropping Tip & Ring from the ranks of the unbeaten, 9-3, and tripping Wilson Brothers Co. 8-7 behind Dave Lee's two home runs.

Hunter Safety Certificate Is Needed In N.D.

Young hunters — ages 12 through 17 — will have to present a hunter safety education course certificate to purchase a hunting license in North Dakota this year.

The regulation applies to both residents and nonresidents.

Officials of the North Dakota Game and Fish Department said Minnesota youngsters purchasing nonresident licenses can comply with the law by presenting their safety certificate or card to the license vendor.

The following persons are exempt: those under 12 years of age who hunt only with their parent or legal guardian; those who hunt only with a bow; and those who hunt only on land of which they are the record title owner or operator.

Merchants Win Tourney Title

Undefeated TRF Merchants claimed championship honors Sunday in the 16-team, double-elimination Lake Agassiz men's slow pitch softball tournament played in Thief River Falls.

The TRF Merchants opened with a 7-0 forfeit win over the Red Lake Warriors, then claimed three successive two-run ball games as they shaded Corner Bar of Bemidji 9-7, edged Tony Dorn, Inc. of Thief River Falls 9-7 and got by Furuseth-Nelson, Inc. of Thief River Falls 4-2 to reach the championship game where they blanked Hobo Haus of Newfolden 13-0.

Hobo Haus began a busy six-game run by beating Hartz of Thief River Falls 18-6 and the Red Lake Falls Rabbits, a pre-tournament favorite, 20-6, before losing to Furuseth-Nelson, Inc. 9-7. The Newfolden entry bounced back to tip Tony Dorn, Inc. of Thief River Falls 2-1, beat the Rabbits again, 6-2, and avenged the earlier defeat at the hands of Furuseth-Nelson, Inc., 15-4.

Three Grand Slams Hit On Wednesday

Three grand slam home runs — by Georgine Troska, Linda Rux and Patty Mehrkens — highlighted Wednesday's Thief River Falls women's slow pitch softball league play.

Troska's poke sparked Pizza Hut past Ekeren Drug 13-0; Rux cleared the bases as the Farmer's Co-op Stingers out-scored J & B Drug 25-12; and Mehrkens' fifth inning clout lifted the Schmidt Stealers to a 17-9 come-from-behind triumph over the Healthy Hustlers.

First inning home runs by Marcia Spilde and Sharon Stauss carried the St. Hilaire Saints to a 13-3 win over J & B Drug. The winners added a third inning round-tripper by Marlys Huot.

A three-run home run by Diane Anderson and a solo shot by Lynn Christianson helped First Federal Savings & Loan Association defeat Roseau Transport 9-6.

Credit Bureau handled Rusty Nail 15-5, with Beth Hallstrom hitting a home run for the winners.

A triple by Merilee Lorenson was included in an 8-4 Ridge Runners victory over Hydra-Mac.

Lawsuit Ends, Conservation Funds Are Freed

Millions of dollars in federal funds for wildlife conservation, tied up for months in a lawsuit over environmental impact statements, may begin to flow again under a recent court order, Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus said.

Andrus said the Fish and Wildlife Service, an Interior agency, was pleased with the court's ruling, which he said would remove "some of the uncertainty in all 50 states and Puerto Rico on their fiscal situation and their ability to plan conservation projects." He said the Fish and Wildlife Service could renew state projects 20 days after submitting environmental assessments or impact statements to the plaintiffs.

In dismissing the suit brought by animal welfare groups against the service, Federal District Court Judge Charles R. Richey ruled on May 3 that requiring 182 impact statements on past conservation projects would be of "merely historical interest." He also found that cutting off reimbursement to the states for work already performed would be "punitive and not in conformity with the public interest or the purposes of the federal environmental laws."

Fish and Wildlife Service has already submitted environmental assessments on 15 projects that expired during the winter and will soon submit 62 more. The plaintiffs can reopen the case if they feel the assessments are inadequate in meeting the requirements of the national environmental policy act. If the court determines that an environmental impact statement (EIS) is required, no federal funding or other action can be taken for at least 90 days or longer.

The lawsuit was filed in March 1978 by the committee for humane legislation and friends of animals who claimed that the program authorized by the Pittman-Robertson act violated the national environmental policy act. The P-R act established a continuing cooperative program between the Federal government and the states for the selection, rehabilitation, and improvement of areas of land or water for wildlife restoration. The program is funded by federal excise taxes on sporting firearms, ammunition, and hand guns and archery equipment.

Dallmann Athletic . . 4
Action Realty 1

A four-run fifth inning carried Dallmann Athletic, Inc. past Action Realty 4-1 in Wednesday's doubleheader opener.

Action Realty scored the game's first run when Scott Kleven smacked a one-out double to right-center field in the fourth inning. Kleven moved to third as Wayne Smith flew out to right field. Wayne Liden's infield hit produced the run.

But Dallmann Athletic, Inc. scored four times in the bottom of the fifth without the benefit of a base hit. Mark Drury and Keith Daley drew back-to-back one-out walks to start things. Jeff Tunberg reached base on an error that scored Drury. Another throwing error on Steve Daley's grounder allowed two runs to score and sent Steve Daley to third on the play. He scored on Rex Rugland's sacrifice fly to center.

But Johnson came through again in the sixth with a one-out home run to left on another first-pitch clout.

Radio Shack 2

Radio Shack collected 11 base hits Thursday, but scored just two runs in a 5-2 loss to Schmidts.

Schmidts scored in the top of the first inning when Jim Olson reached base on an error and Howard Dalager beat out a bunt single. Both runners moved up on an error. Mark Anderson's base hit scored Olson, with a fielder's choice play on a ball hit by Larry Coltom scoring Dalager. Anderson scored on an error.

Radio Shack scored in the bottom of the first when Bob Lundbohm led off with a double to left-center field, moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on Don Forney's ground-out.

Schmidts added two runs in the second as Mark Haats beat out an infield single, Olson was safe on his sacrifice bunt and Dalager produced a two-run single.

Radio Shack ended the scoring in the seventh on Lundbohm's double, a passed ball and an error.

Melvies 2

Gary Laidley's lead-off double in the top of the fourth inning broke up Tom Shetler's perfect game and Dallmann Athletic, Inc. scored three times that inning en route to an 8-2 Friday night victory over winless Melvies.

After Laidley doubled, Steve Daley moved the runner to third on a ground-out, with a throwing error on Bruce Johnson's grounder producing a run. Mike Drury singled with two out for a 2-0 edge. Rick Reierson reached base on a fielder's choice and stole second, with Drury scoring on the throw to second base.

Jeff Tunberg doubled and eventually stole home in the fifth and Dallmann Athletic, Inc. added four runs on three base hits and four Melvies errors in the sixth.

Melvies came up with two hits and two Dallmann Athletic, Inc. errors in the first inning but failed to score. Drury then retired the next 16 batters before giving way to Randy Dallmann in the seventh inning. Dallmann fanned the side, but not before Melvies broke through for two runs on two base hits and two errors.

BAKED BOATER

Ask someone to name the most dangerous thing in the outdoors and the answer will probably be a snake or stinging insect.

It's hard to believe, but the fact is that more people are seriously sunburned in an hour on a sunny day than are bitten by snakes in a year.

And a sunburn can do as much damage, causing pain, blisters, peeling skin, and the increased probability of infection.

Everyone enjoys the sun, especially fishermen and boaters who long for winter to end and Spring to arrive.

But a word of caution comes from the outdoor recreation department at Mercury outboards for those who will be spending a lot of time outdoors in the next few weeks.

They recommend that you limit the time you expose skin to the sun, and gradually build up a tan.

Being on the water doubles the risk of serious sunburn, as many of the ultraviolet rays striking the water are reflected.

Clouds offer little protection from rays which easily penetrate them and continue to reach the unwary boater.

The most dangerous time of day is between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. when the rays are direct and the sun is hottest.

The best protection against sunburn is clothing and sunglasses. Wear a long-sleeved shirt, trousers and a cap.

If you want a tan, expose your body for short periods at a time —10 minutes the first day, increasing by five minutes per day thereafter.

If you do get baked with a serious sunburn, see a doctor, especially if you are nauseous or feverish.

Eagle Shooting Reward Offer Is Expanded

National Wildlife Federation has announced a liberalization of the terms under which it offers a $500 reward for information leading to the conviction of anyone found guilty of shooting a bald eagle in the United States.

Since 1971, when it was first posted, the reward has been offered to persons helping to obtain convictions under only one statute, the bald eagle protection act of 1940.

Effective immediately, the NWF said, the reward will also be offered to persons who supply information that is of "substantial assistance" in obtaining convictions under two other laws, the migratory bird treaty act of 1929 and the endangered species act of 1973.

The reward will be paid under any of the three federal laws when, upon conviction, a jail term of 30 days or more or a fine of $500 or more is imposed for shooting a bald eagle. The claimant must request the reward in writing to the National Wildlife Federation, 1412 16th St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036. If more than one eagle was shot by the convicted person, $500 will be awarded for one bird representing the total number shot.

NWF will pay the reward upon verifying that the claimant's information was of "substantial assistance" in obtaining the conviction, said Thomas L. Kimball, executive vice president of the federation, the nation's largest nongovernment, nonprofit conservation organization.

NWF posted its first reward in September, 1971, after testimony before a Senate committee revealed that Wyoming ranchers had hired airborne sharpshooters to slaughter eagles and other wildlife. Since then 11 rewards have been paid.

Shooting of bald eagles has been illegal since 1940, but the national bird was not declared officially "endangered" throughout most of the U.S. until last year, when it was listed as endangered in 43 of the "lower 48" states and threatened in the other five. (Bald eagles are plentiful in Alaska and non-existent in Hawaii.)

Bald eagle population in the 48 contiguous states, now estimated at about 3,000 to 3,500 (not counting seasonal immigrants from Canada), has suffered a serious decline in this century.

Loss of habitat, ingestion of deadly pesticides and illegal shooting have been principal causes of the decline. Since DDT was virtually outlawed in 1972, losses to pesticides have tapered off. Experts believe the big bird — the nation's symbol since 1782 — is now making a modest come-back. But illegal shooting is still a serious problem, according to U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service experts.

Federal and state officials agree that the NWF reward has served as a deterrent to illegal shooters.

27 Pounder Tops State Turkey Shoot Records

Minnesota's second annual turkey season ended on May 6 with 116 of the 840 computer selected hunters bagging gobblers, the Department of Natural Resources reported.

Among the successfuls were Darrel Hunter of New York Mills and LeRoy Black of Fairfax. Their 27 pound gobblers were a pound heavier than the largest bird taken during Minnesota's first turkey season in 1978, according to Larry Nelson, DNR wildlife section.

Hunter bagged his trophy on April 23 and Black scored on May 2. Both men hunted on private land in the south zone (eastern Houston County), preceded their hunts with scouting trips, used camouflage clothing, called the big birds in with box type callers and killed their state records with No. 6 shot.

While the south zone seems to harbor the biggest birds, more birds have been taken in the other zone. During Minnesota's first two seasons, almost 63 per cent of the turkeys have come from the north zone, said Nelson.

"Enthusiasm and interest among turkey hunters has remained at a high level." Nelson said. "Offered a choice between three hour and one hour hunter orientation workshops, almost 86 per cent of the 1979 hunters elected to attend the longer sessions.

"Telephone calls concerning the hunt have ranged from exciting success stories to a man who called birds to within 70 yards only to have them frightened away by a youngster on a galloping shetland pony."

The 1979 success rate of 14 per cent, down somewhat from the 22 per cent rate in 1978, was expected. Doubling hunter numbers from a conservative first season accounted for a good share of the decrease. Another important factor was 1979's wet, cold and windy spring weather.

"Such weather tends to suppress gobbling activity and to make hunters move when they ought to stay put," said Nelson. "Also, fewer hens were on nests early (because of the late spring) making them more available to gobblers. Gobblers with an abundance of hens are harder to call and do a lot less gobbling."

"For the second year in a row, Minnesota's turkey season has been a big success," said Chuck Burrows, director of fish and wildlife. "Private landowners are commended for accommodating turkey hunters. There were no hunting accidents, arrests or other unfortunate events to mar the success of the season."

Swanson Will Visit Norway In 4-H Exchange

One of 90 Minnesota 4-H d legates taking part in a 4-H exchange with Norway, Pam Swanson of Thief River Falls will leave June 18 for Norway and return July 22. After three days of sight-seeing in Oslo, she will stay with a host family until July 19.

Activities in Norway's capital city will include visiting the Viking ship museum, a folklore program and an evening with Norske 4-H'ers. After their stays with host families, the Minnesota 4-H members will tour the agricultural university at As. Then they will gather at the coastal city of Tonsberg and travel along the coast by boat.

Pennington county extension agent, Deborah Matero, says the exchange program is in its fifth year. "It has been successful because it gives 15-18-year-old members junior leadership training while learning about the 4-H organization of another country. They also have the experience of living with a host family for four weeks, learning their life style and attitudes."

The agent adds, "Pam will have a chance to develop lasting friendships on this trip, and to become better informed on world affairs."

Julie Dobias Takes Part In 4-H Conference

Julie Dobias of Thief River Falls helped plan the annual 4-H junior leadership conference and will attend the state event June 18-22 along with about 900 other 4-H teens. The youth will meet at the Minnesota state fairgrounds in St. Paul.

"Much of the success of the 4-H Federation depends on the ambassadors," says Deborah Matero, Pennington county extension agent. "For 12 years now, ambassadors have represented Minnesota at various national 4-H camps, conferences and the national 4-H congress held in Chicago each year."

The 33 Ambassadors were selected from the youth leadership of 4-H in Minnesota. They received special training at a three-day workshop last July, assisted with 4-H state fair activities, and organized the junior leader conference during a winter retreat.

"They also had opportunities to visit with businesspeople and others who contribute financially to 4-H statewide," Matero adds.

The highlights of the junior leader conference include a keynote address by Ray McGee, Washburn child guidance center in Minneapolis titled "I Like Myself". Much of the important business of state 4-H, including election of new state officers, will also be conducted.

Other speakers will include Dr. Jerry Robinson, Jr., of University of Illinois, Urbana, on "Wearing Different Hats"; Allan Ward, of University of Minnesota technical college at Waseca on "Communicating"; and Veryl and Paul Cashman of University of Minnesota, Twin Cities campus, on "Relationships with Others". Social events will include disco dancing, a picnic at Como park, a concert at Orchestra Hall, a Minnesota Kicks vs. New York Cosmos soccer game, and a dance. The greater Minneapolis chamber of commerce will also treat the delegates to a banquet at the Prom Center in St. Paul.

Gasoline Prices Jump 2.3 Cents In Past Week

Gasoline prices increased a record 2.3 cents per gallon this past week as supplies across the state became tighter and gas station hours were cut, according to the Minnesota state automobile association (AAA).

Prices took the highest leap of the year this past week, with diesel fuel increasing an average of 3.5 cents per gallon. According to Minnesota AAA's survey of 65 stations throughout Minnesota, the average price per gallon at full-service stations is 86.8 cents for regular, 92.7 cents for premium, 91.1 cents for unleaded, 93.9 cents for premium unleaded and 84.6 cents for diesel.

At self-service stations, the average price per gallon is 85.2 cents for regular, 91.7 cents for premium, 89.5 cents for unleaded and 92.5 cents for premium unleaded.

The number of stations closing on Sundays has also increased, although more stations are still open in the outstate ares (60 per cent) than in the Metropolitan area (30 per cent). Approximately 60 per cent of the stations surveyed throughout Minnesota are now closed by 8 p.m. on weekdays and by 6 p.m. on Saturday. Several stations reported split hours, such as 7 to 11 a.m. and 3 to 6 p.m.

An AAA survey of other midwestern states showed no serious problems: 60 per cent of the stations surveyed in Michigan will be open Sundays; 33 per cent in Ohio; 30 per cent in Indiana; 62 per cent in Iowa; and 44 per cent in Wisconsin.

This latest survey does reflect a shortage of supplies the last few days of May in Minnesota; eleven stations reported they'd run out of one or more grades of gasoline.

Gas allocations for June are down five to 25 per cent from May; only a few suppliers reported increased allocations. Most stations are now receiving 70 to 80 per cent of last year's allocations. This, plus several other factors, means a tighter fuel situation for June.

"We were just coming into the shortage in May, and storage tanks were full, but we're coming into June with low stocks, so distributors have to rely on in-shipments," explained Ken Wingard, executive secretary of the Minnesota independent retailers association.

In addition, the increase in both weekend and vacation travel has pushed up consumption and thereby tightened the gas situation even more, noted Diane Nelson, Minnesota AAA spokesperson.

"Conservation is the key to stretching available fuel supplies," said Nelsen. "The service station operators have to cut their hours in an attempt to stay open, but they don't like it any more than motorists do. One St. Paul operator told us, 'The dealer is in business to sell gasoline — we'd sell it if we had it. There is a shortage but the consumer doesn't believe it. We can only sell a certain amount per day and then we have to shut down.' "

The best advice we can give worried motorists is to conserve gas — drive within speed limits, keep their vehicles tuned-up, make sure their vehicle's tires are properly inflated, drive at steady speeds, and don't use the air-conditioner unnecessarily," said Nelsen.

"People don't need to cancel their vacations, but they do need to plan ahead. Fill your gas tank before 6 p.m. and try to plan so you don't need to drive long distances in the evenings or on Sundays," she added.

Minnesota AAA warned that carrying extra containers of gas in a vehicle or storing it in a garage could cause an explosion.

Minnesota Energy Agency is helping tourists by publishing a list of gas stations that have volunteered to stay open Friday through Sunday. The list is available by calling the Minnesota department of economic development, 612-296-5029, or toll free, 800-652-9747 from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The list is also available through all Minnesota AAA offices from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., all statewide chambers of commerce, the 11 radio stations of the Minnesota State Patrol and all county sheriffs.

No Problems In Local Gambling

by Kim Blaeser
Times Reporter

Uncle Sam. Big Casino. Giant 50's. Sound like the names of entries in the Kentucky Derby? Actually these are the names of three pull tab gambling games in the American Legion club in Thief River Falls.

One of four local clubs licensed for gambling, the Legion's gambling booth is open from 5 to 12 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday unless it gives out its limit of prize money before that time. Profits to the club for the first four months of the year totaled $2,080.91 and Legion manager says the gambling operation has also brought in additional business.

Gambling operations such as that run at the American Legion were legalized in Minnesota by a bill which became law August 1 of 1978. Under the new state law tipboards, raffles and paddlewheels could be licensed by local authorities. Effective August 1, 1978, Thief River Falls did license the devices and subsequently the Eagles, Elks, VFW and American Legion clubs all purchased license and began gambling operations.

Gross receipts of the four organizations for the first four months of 1979 totaled $63,776.85. Of this $63,776.85, $39,648.40 was returned to gamblers in prize money and $18,008.70 went out in expenses leaving a net profit to the four clubs of $6,119.74. On April 30, 1979 $4,467.41 of the profit had been distributed by the clubs to various service and non-profit organizations in the area.

With over $63,000 being circulated in gambling operations in the community the Times staff felt it might be interesting to see how a club operates its gambling business, what problems, if any, it experiences and what organizations benefit from the gambling profit. Consenting to an interview with the Times were American Legion manager L. L. Jones and that club's gambling committee chairman Vernon Lee.

The American Legion has had a gambling license since August of 1978 and, Vernon Lee comments, "The gambling fund helps a lot in financing projects — we used to have an awful time finding the money for what we wanted to do."

The club has both tipboard and raffle licenses but uses mainly pull tab devices (licensed under tipboard) with an 80 per cent payback. The 80 per cent payback means that 80 per cent of the money spent by players in the game will go back out in prize money although not necessarily to the person that spent it. Jones explains that you can get the games any way you want, "We could get a 50 per cent payback, but we wouldn't have as many players."

WELCOME EXCHANGE was made by Ron Johnson at the American Legion club recently as he traded a winning gambling ticket for his $50 prize. In a matter of ten minutes the Times camera was witness to Ron's becoming a three-time winner. Playing a pull tab game called "Giant 50's" Johnson won $2, but took $1 in prize money and four more tickets. In his four tickets was the $50 winner. Taking four more tickets, Ron won another $2. Seeing such good fortune is almost enough to convert any non-gambler.

Grand Jury Called . . .

Paul W. Boman Charged With Morben Murder

Charged with first degree murder in connection with the shotgun slaying of Duane Morben early Monday morning is Paul Walter Boman, 24-year-old Thief River Falls resident. Boman has been charged and is being held without bond pending the convening of a grand jury Friday morning.

Thirty-year-old Morben was shot at his home in Northwest trailer court shortly before 3:30 a.m. Monday morning. A woman who witnessed the slaying called for an ambulance at 3:29 a.m. but Morben was pronounced dead at the scene. Boman was apprehended in Thief River Falls at approximately 8:30 a.m. Monday.

Purpose of the grand jury is to hear the facts of the case and determine if there is probable cause that a crime was committed and a trial should be held. It also selects the charge to be made if an indictment is returned but makes no determination of guilt or innocence.

The grand jury consists of not less than 16 nor more than 23 members drawn from the district court juror list. It meets in closed session after being instructed by the district judge with the county attorney in charge of conducting the proceedings. The jury is empowered to call witnesses and may also call upon the judge for advice although he is not a party to the hearing of evidence. Twelve or more jurors must concur in a decision.

Drawn by district court clerk Ardith Johnson from the juror list are Clarabelle Cloutier, Charlie Cornell, Bernadette Erickson, Florence Falman, Linda Geske, Ruth Goodrich, Carl Hallquist, Patricia Heaton, Arthur Hinrichs, Lynn Josephson, Bella Kompelien, Carrie Lager, Jeri Lundin, Clarence Ness, Marcus Olson, Eddie Opsund, Richard Reierson, Joan Robson, Howard Sletten, David Voelk and Gordon Wavra of Thief River Falls and Ottea Ekwall and Avis Frazer of Goodridge.

The last time a grand jury was called in Pennington county was Dec. 1, 1972, when a grand jury was convened to hear evidence surrounding the death of Bruce Brun, 27, of Red Lake, who died as a result of a shotgun blast in a mobile home residence of David May at Countryside trailer park in Thief River Falls. Brun was struck in the upper chest about 1 p.m. on Oct. 21, 1972, by the shotgun blast and was dead at the scene.

The grand jury convened to hear evidence on that case ruled the death to be accidental and returned no indictment against anyone. The jury deliberated about five hours before reaching its decision.

Use Care When Mixing Water And Pesticide

In an effort to prevent possible contamination of local water supplies, state health officials are asking farmers and water supply operators to be careful when they add water to herbicide or pesticide mixing tanks this year.

"Problem we're concerned about is called backsiphonage," said Tom Klaseus, of the state health department's environmental health division. "It can happen anytime you allow the water supply pipe or hose to make contact with the liquid in the mixing tank. Under certain circumstances, say a drop in the water pressure, the herbicide or pesticide can be drawn back up into the water supply. Fluid can even flow uphill.

"Result can be a contaminated water supply."

Contaminated private wells must be pumped out until the amount of pesticide or herbidice in the water falls below acceptable levels, according to Klaseus. Although the state health department does not test private wells for herbicide or pesticide contamination, that service is available for a fee from a number of private laboratories.

Klaseus had some suggestions for preventing backsiphonage. One solution is to attach the water pipe or hose to a mechanical support, so the end of the supply line is held above and away from the body of the mixing tank. An adequate "air gap" between the end of the supply line and the tank's filler opening is essential. An alternative solution is to fit each supply line with a "backflow prevention device" approved by the state health department.

More information about backflow prevention devices and private well testing is available from the Minnesota department of health at (612) 296-5227.

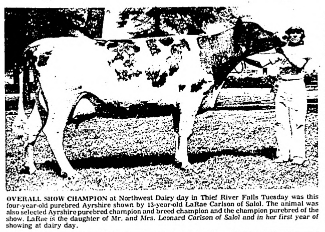
First Year Showman Wins Top NW Dairy Day Honors



OVERALL SHOW CHAMPION at Northwest Dairy day in Thief River Falls Tuesday was this four-year-old purebred Ayrshire shown by 13-year-old LaRae Carlson of Salol. The animal was also selected Ayrshire purebred champion and breed champion and the champion purebred of the show. LaRae is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Carlson of Salol and in her first year of showing at dairy day.

GRAND CHAMPION GRADE and reserve overall show champion at Northwest Dairy day in Thief River Falls Tuesday was this four-year-old Guernsey shown by Kathy Carlson of Clearbrook. Sixteen-year-old Kathy, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Carlson, also won the Guernsey breed championship in 1977 and 1978 and had the reserve champion grade animal of the show last year.

Thirteen-year-old LaRae Carlson of Salol came to Northwest Dairy day for the first time Tuesday, bringing a four-year-old purebred Ayrshire cow and the expectation of gaining some showmanship experience.

When the day was over she returned to the parental Leonard Carlson farm with the Stuart McLeod trophy signifying overall show championship, a handful of ribbons for class, purebred, breed and overall purebred championships and an expense paid trip to the world dairy expo at Madison, Wis., in October.

In a show normally dominated by Holsteins, petite LaRae waltzed her cow through the Ayrshire aged cow class, Ayrshire purebred championship and the breed championship. Her animal was then selected by the judges to be the champion purebred of the show and was selected over a grade Guernsey shown by Kathy Carlson of Clearbrook to be the overall show champion. Reserve show championship went to Kathy Carlson.

In the princess contest concluded with coronation ceremonies at the outdoor dairy day site, Tracy Foldesi of Greenbush was awarded the 1979 crown as Region One Northwest Dairy Princess. The 17-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Foldesi comes from a farm where 40 head of Holsteins are in the milking herd. She is five feet five inches tall, has brown hair and hazel eyes and is a 1979 graduate of Greenbush high school. She is presently employed at Ace hardware in Greenbush.

First attendant was Shari Lee Olson, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ron Olson of East Grand Forks and a veteran of seven years of showing cattle at dairy day. She is a 1979 graduate of Alvarado high school and has won several top awards as a cattle showman in prior years. This year her animals won the individual herd championship when shown for her by Todd Johnston of Angus while she was in the princess contest. The Olson family milks 35 head of Holsteins.

Second attendant was 18-year-old Aliza Novacek, also a 1979 Greenbush high school graduate and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Novacek. She comes from a farm with 25 head of Holsteins in the milking string and is currently living in Thief River Falls while working at Northwestern hospital.

Selected by a vote among the contestants as Miss Congeniality was Karen Hogberg, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Axel Hogberg of Bagley and a 1979 graduate of Bagley high school.

Kathy Carlson of Clearbrook received a purebred dairy calf from the Gerald Bruun Guernsey herd at Climax as a result of her placing at the 1978 dairy day with a grade cow. She won the grade championship this year but is ineligible to win another major prize, so Beth Brinkman of Roseau will receive the purebred calf next year. She had the reserve champion grade of the show with a three-year-old Holstein.

Senior showmanship contest was won by 14-year-old Paula Olson of East Grand Forks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ron Olson and last year's junior showmanship winner. Junior showmanship winner was 12-year-old Rhonda Visser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Visser of Gary, who showed a four-year-old purebred Holstein.

Best uddered cow of the show was exhibited by 19-year-old Chip Beyer of Red Lake Falls with a three-year-old grade Holstein. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Beyer. Shari Olson had the champion individual herd and Roseau county won the county herd championship. Individual herd is comprised of the best three animals shown by one contestant and the county herd consists of the best five animals from among entries from the same county.

Shari Olson's cow won the Holstein breed championship with reserve championship going to Scott Muzzy of Thief River Falls.

Brown Swiss breed champion was shown by Jon Lofstedt of Roseau with reserve championship going to Joan Johnson of Erskine.

STUART McLEOD TROPHY to the overall champion of the Northwest Dairy day cattle show was presented Tuesday to 13-year-old LaRae Carlson of Salol who showed her Ayrshire purebred to the show's top honor. It was LaRae's first year of showing at dairy day. Making the presentation at the awards program was Norm Cruse, secretary of the Northwest Dairy Improvement association, sponsor of the Region One dairy event. The award is named in honor of Stuart McLeod, one of the founders and president of the dairy day organization for 25 years, who died on dairy day two years ago.

City Council Informed On Actions By LASAC

Essential air service determinations and the regulations drafted by the civil aeronautics board (CAB) to be used in making the determinations were among the topics of discussion at the June 11 regular meeting of the Thief River Falls city council. City attorney Bob Wurst reported to council members on the June 7 LASAC (local air service action committee) meeting [illegible] in Minneapolis, at which representatives from the various Minnesota communities to be affected by essential air service determinations examined and responded to the draft regulations.

Under the airline deregulation act of 1978, CAB is charged with making essential air service determinations for all certificated points presently served by only one [illegible] by October 24, 1979. Since it would not be feasible for the CAB to review each case individually prior to that date it is their intention to delegate the authority to its staff. Director of bureau pricing, Mike LeVine, would become responsible for making determinations for Minnesota cities.

However, at the June 7 LASAC meeting that organization, of which Thief

Give Advice On Preventing Poisonings

Minnesota safety council reminds that any time is a good time to take precautions to protect your family from accidental poisoning.

And early spring is an ideal time to do some spring cleaning of cabinets and closets where potentially poisonous substances such as medicines, cleaners, solvents and perticides are stored. These products should be destroyed if no longer useful and, if kept, should be securely sealed and locked up.

While new safety packaging techniques have significantly reduced the number of accidental poisonings, more than 100,000 children under five years of age accidentally swallow poisonous household substances each year as a result of adult carelessness in storing and handling. Safety council encourages adults to property recap all packages after use and to keep poisonous substances in their original containers.

Any household with young children, or where young children visit, should keep an ounce of syrup of ipecac in the home. The syrup, which should be administered only after calling a physician, is used to induce vomiting in certain poisoning cases when recommended by a physician. Salt-water solution, once accepted as an alternate means to induce vomiting, has been determined by experts to be an unacceptable substitute.

Among other good housekeeping rules, the safety council suggests the following to avoid accidental poisoning: Store internal medicines separately from other household products; avoid taking medicines in front of children; don't call medicine candy; keep a light on when administering or taking medicines; when household substances are in use, never let them out of an adult's sight; keep all products in properly labeled containers; read labels before using.

No Problems In Local Gambling, Survey Shows

gambling fund, is set up for the gambling operations in the American Legion and Legion Auxiliary members voluntarily man the booth. A running total is kept of money paid out in prize money since the law restricts payment in a 24-hour period to $500. Though the gambling hours are generally 5 to 12 p.m., when the day's limit has been payed out in prize money the Legion closes down the booth. This has happened on a couple of occasions Jones states.

Daily reports are made of gambling receipts and expenditures and it is the duty of the gambling committee chairman to check the reports. Monthly reports giving gross receipts, prize money awarded, expenses, profit and distribution of profit are required to be filed with the city clerk and these reports are examined by the license committee of the city council and copies are made available to council members. Gambling records must also be kept in the city clerk's office for three years and are available for public inspection.

Prize money distributed under one license in a year's time is restricted to $15,000. The Legion had distributed $14,793 on April 30 and a second license has subsequently been purchased by the Auxiliary. When $15,000 prize money has been stributed under that license gambling operations at the Legion club will cease for 1979.

The Legion is one of the state organizations "pushing to have the law changed to allow more prize money to be given out each year" Jones stated. "If people want to gamble they are going to go to Las Vegas or someplace anyway so we might as well keep some of the money in the state. The operations bring more sales tax in for the state, too, and anyone against gambling isn't forced to gamble," Jones adds.

Perhaps the best thing the clubs have to rally support for a new gambling bill is the fact that the distribution of their profits is also restricted by law and benefits non-profit and service organizations. The American Legion made a $250 contribution to the Northern Lights boyscout council this year, held a dinner for the school patrol, made a contribution to the sports boosters and, during Vietnam Veterans week, hosted a dinner for 110 Vietnam veteran's and their wives at a cost of $873. A portion of the club's $3,000 contribution to Legion baseball is also expected to come from gambling fund.

Although some of these projects have been financed in past years it was not without difficulty Lee explains and the gambling fund has allowed the Legion to add new projects to its yearly activities. The gambling committee makes recommendations regarding expenditures but the profit distribution must be authorized by a full executive board meeting.

Problems with the gambling operation have been virtually non-existent according to Lee and Jones. The club gets more business, people have a chance to try their luck at small-time gambling and the organizations service fund increases. Let's hope the smooth-running operation is more than just beginners luck.

Marshall Co. Pageant Group Holds Meeting

Marshall county pageant committee met at the Newfolden cafe Monday with committee members attending including Joan Sethre, Lucille Tunheim and Crystal Green, Newfolden, Ida Tygeson and Ellen Lian, Middle River; Arlette Ruud and DeLorise Engevik, Gatzke; Rose Stoltman, Argyle; Gerry Nelson, Holt; and Kathy Sedlacek, assistant director, Warren.

Meeting consisted of finalizing assignments for portraying portions of history for some of the main points of interest during the initial settling of Marshall county. Some of the communities did not attend. Stephen, Oslo and Alvarado are preparing the parts they will portray.

A recommendation was made that the pageant director, Sue Prichard, visit the communities which have not been able to attend, due to late field work and other conflicts, to see if they will be able to fill in some of the parts desired.

A tentative order of the program was established but will not be final until the communities unable to attend have been contacted and a meeting of the fair board committee, Nancy Solum as coordinator of the old settlers activities area, and the pageant director is held.
